PRESIDENT MUST SLOW DOWN, DOCTOR SAYS AFTER CHECK-UP

U.N. COUNCIL DEFERS ACTION UNTIL TUESDAY ON ADMITTING 18

Russia Issues All-or-Nothing Ultimatum—Threatens to Use Veto Unless Moscow View Prevails.

By ALVIN H. GOLDSTEIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Dec. 10—The United Nations Security Council tonight deferred action on membership application until Tuesday after Russia handed the 11-nation body an all-or-nothing ultimatum on the proposed admission of 18 countries to the U. N.

The Soviet delegate made what Western delegates construed as a threat to veto any move to admit the applicants if the Council did not vote on new members according to Moscow-suggested procedure which would assure admittance of five Communist-ruled nations along with 13 non-Red applicants.

Three-Way Wrangle.

The Council was adjourned following five and a half hours of bitter wrangling in morning and afternoon sessions in which Russia, Nationalist China and the Western powers used all of their cleverest tactics to set the stage for the voting.

Soviet Delegate Arkady A. Sobolev declared all 18 applicants must be admitted "without any exception whatsoever."

"No other way out of this situation exists, nor can any be found," he said flatly.

He opposed a plan by New Zealand and Brazil which called for the Security Council to vote separately on each country in order of application and then vote as a whole on all those approved in the nation-by-nation polling.

Chance for Veto.

This would give the Soviet Union or any of the other four big powers possessing the veto a chance to veto the whole package if one of the countries it favored had been canceled out in the individual balloting.

Sobolev said he would vote against giving this plan priority over the Soviet method of procedure and would vote against the plan itself if it won priority. He termed the issue a "substantive" matter, and thus a Soviet negative vote would be a veto.

The Soviet-Proposed procedure called for the Council and the 60-nation General Assembly to sit concurrently to give nation-by-nation approval to the 18 applicants.

Under this plan, the Council would vote on the first country to apply for membership, Albania, and then wait for the Assembly to stamp its final approval by two-thirds majority before taking up the next country on the list—which happens to be Outer Mongolia.

Nationalist China's Threat.

In this way, if any Communist country failed to make the grade, the Russians would have the chance to veto the remaining non-Communist countries. Nationalist China's threat to veto Outer Mongolia still hung over the Assembly. The Russians have said a veto of Outer Mongolia would kill the so-called package deal to admit all 18 applicants.

Sobolev argued that there were so many countries in the Assembly who have indicated they would either vote against one or more of the Communist nominees, or would abstain, that "accidents" or "surprises" might occur. He therefore wanted a guarantee that this would not happen.

As to the threat of Soviet veto of the New Zealand-Brazilian motion, most delegates expressed the opinion that the issue was procedural and not subject to veto. They thought it was certain the suggestion

$50,000,000 PRICE TAG REPORTED PUT ON LIST OF WEAPONS ISRAEL WANTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP).

THE Pentagon is reported to have put a $50,000,000 price tag on the list of arms Israel wants to buy from the United States.

Not all of the listed items were found to be available, officials said, but most of the important ones are.

It has not been decided whether Israel actually will get the arms. That question is now up to Secretary of State Dulles after consultations with other interested Government agencies.

The list of weapons is reported to include F-86 jet planes, anti-tank guns and killer craft to combat the submarines Egypt has on order in Czechoslovakia.

RUSSIANS FREE 2 G.I.S SEIZED IN E. BERLIN BEATING

Reds Threatened to Try Men in E. Germany—Case an Issue in Sovereignty Row.

BERLIN, Dec. 10 (UP)—The Russians tonight released two American soldiers whose case had become a major issue in a mounting controversy over Communist East German claims to sovereignty.

East German propagandists, claiming that recent announced agreements with Russia superseded four-power control over the divided city of Berlin, had demanded that the two Americans be tried in an East Berlin court to prove the sovereignty of East Germany.

The United States Army identified the G.I.s as Pvt. Willie E. Holden, 19 years old, of Poplarville, Miss., and Pvt. Richard L. Calbert, 22, of Kansas City, Mo.

The Communists announced their arrest last Wednesday on charges of beating a cabaret actor in East Berlin.

The Russians released the Americans this afternoon after United States authorities handed the Communists a written demand for their immediate release.

Col. O. M. Barsanti, United States Army chief of staff in Berlin, followed up the written demand with a visit to Soviet headquarters to see Col. Ivan A. Kotsiuba, Berlin's deputy Soviet commandant. Shortly thereafter, the American soldiers were handed over to Lt. Col. Vernon Hammonde, Army provost marshal here.

"The men appeared to be in good physical condition, but they were admitted to the United States Army hospital for a routine physical examination," an Army announcement said.

"United States Army authorities will make a thorough investigation of the circumstances in which they were detained," the announcement added.

American officials sent the written note after the Reds hinted they might try the soldiers in an East German court.

Neues Deutschland, the official Communist party newspaper, said East Germany's prosecutor-general had been asked to take action against the American soldiers by a lawyer hired by the cabaret performer.

The East German Communists today isued a warning that the "working class" in their sector were ready to kick out the anti-Communist government of West Berlin—the Allied occupation zone.

The warning appeared in the Berliner Zeitung, a Communist newspaper. It said the workers were prepared for a "great housecleaning" that would sweep away the existing anti-Red government and give the Communists control of the entire city.

Walter Ulbricht, Red "strongman," stressed in a speech yesterday that Berlin is the "capital" of Communist Germany and warned that the Western government's anti-Communist policies would prove "disadvantageous" for its residents. The Western allies do not recognize East Germany.

LEE QUITS AS CAA HEAD AND SAYS WEEKS URGED HIM TO RESIGN

'Working Relations' Not Satisfactory to Secretary—Charles J. Lowen Jr. Named to Top Post.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP)—Frederick B. Lee resigned today as Civil Aeronautics Administrator. He said he had been asked to quit by Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks because of a "lack of satisfactory working relations" with Weeks's office.

President Eisenhower accepted Lee's resignation and appointed Deputy Administrator Charles J. Lowen Jr. of Denver, Colo., to succeed him. Lee was appointed administrator two and a half years ago by Mr. Eisenhower. Both he and Lowen are Republicans.

Lee, in a letter to the President, said that Weeks had asked him to resign because of a "lack of satisfactory working relations between his office and me." He told the President that Weeks "did not advise me of any particular instance of this nor did he indicate any instance when I failed to administer the CAA in a sound, competent and efficient manner."

The administrator said he wrote two letters to the President, one stating that Weeks had asked him to quit, and another, made public by the White House, offering his resignation.

Reports Not Far Off.

Lee told the United Press that published reports that he had been under pressure to quit "probably weren't too far off."

"I don't want to be questioning the President's decision," he said. "I certainly accept it. What's back of it is sort of past history."

Aviation industry sources have said that Under Secretary of Commerce Louis S. Rothschild, who paved the way for Lowen to become deputy CAA administrator, was seeking to have Lee replaced by Lowen. They protested to presidential assistant Sherman Adams against the move.

Lee told a reporter that he had asked Weeks, without success, for further reasons for his requested resignation.

A Commerce Department spokesman said Weeks would have no comment on the resignation.

(The Associated Press quoted J. B. Hartranft Jr., president of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots association as saying that Lee had been "subjected to all kinds of political pressures."

(Hartranft said his organization which represents 50,000 private pilots, had frequently differed with Lee but "always abided by his final decisions" because they regarded him as a "very able administrator, fair and honest."

(He contended the CAA administrator's job had become a "political football" since it was shifted from direct congressional supervision several years ago and placed under the Department of Commerce.)

Inquiry Proposed.

Chairman Warren Magnuson (Dem.), Washington, of the Senate Commerce committee, already has urged a Senate investigation of the pressure to oust Lee.

Magnuson's office made public earlier today a telegram which he sent from Seattle to Senator A. S. Mike Monroney (Dem.), Oklahoma, suggesting the inquiry. Monroney is chairman of the Senate Aviation subcommittee.

Magnuson's telegram said: "Since Mr. Lee is a recent Republican appointee, it may be that this reported action is based upon allegations of maladministration or inefficiency in office. On the other hand, it has been intimated that those desiring to see Mr. Lee resign are motivated by political considerations."

In his letter of resignation, dated Dec. 8, Lee said the pres-

SEARCH GOES ON FOR SECOND MAN IN KILLING OF LEBANON COUPLE

Hunt Is Centered in Centralia (Ill.) Area—Officials of 2 Counties in Dispute Over Young's Arrest.

Illinois authorities last night were searching in the Centralia (Ill.) area for a man believed to have been an accomplice of Fillmore Young in the killing of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Smith of Lebanon, Ill.

Young, who is held at Belleville, has indicated in a rambling account of the killings that he was not alone when he entered the Smith home. While not admitting another man was involved, the language of his confession tended to arouse the suspicion of Chief Deputy Sheriff Clifford Flood of St. Clair county and other interrogators that there was a second man.

Meanwhile, a dispute developed yesterday over the role played by Clinton county authorities in the investigation leading to the arrest of Young. Flood accused Sheriff Dan Parker of Clinton county of being unco-operative.

Parker's Statement.

Parker acknowledged that he had not notified Flood immediately on discovering an important clue in solution of the killings, a bloody towel near a spot on a Clinton county farm where Young's automobile became mired the morning of the killing. But he denied that he had in any manner delayed solution of the case.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were shot to death early the morning of Nov. 28. Their bodies were found in rural wells about 15 miles apart after Young, a Carlyle (Ill.) Negro, admitted Thursday night to Clinton and St. Clair county authorities that he had killed them.

Belief that a second man was involved was strengthened by the fact that neither of the Smiths nor Young lost a part of a tooth which was found in the blood-stained home. A partial denture found at the scene belonged to Mrs. Smith, Flood said.

Young, a strapping, 34-year-old former service man, was questioned most of Friday by state and county authorities at the county jail in Belleville.

Unanswered Questions.

Many questions remained unanswered after the lengthy interrogation:

1. Young offered no motive.
2. He said he could not recall any details of the actual shooting or how he got to the Smith home.
3. He referred to another man whom he declined to name.
4. Holes made by a .32-caliber pistol were found in the house, although the weapon Young said he used to kill the Smiths was a .22-caliber target pistol. The lighter weapon was recovered from Young's home.

Flood said efforts would be made later to clear up some of the blank spaces in the confession by having Young re-enact the crime at the scene. The re-enactment has been postponed until some time after funeral services for Mr. and Mrs. Smith today.

'Coming Out of Shock.'

"Young seemed to be coming out of a state of shock Friday night," Flood told a reporter yesterday. "For the first time since we began talking to him Thursday night he appeared to

STUDY PLANNED OF OUT-OF-TOWN CONTROL OF OLD ST. LOUIS FIRMS

Civic Leaders Disturbed but Noncommittal—Loss of Bank Business—Survey of Sales in Last Six Years.

By ROBERT A. DUNLAP
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

A thorough economic study of the St. Louis area is being planned by St. Louis civic leaders who are disturbed by the large number of recent instances in which financial control of St. Louis firms has been acquired by out-of-town interests, and by the scarcity of new major industries being established here, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Edwin M. Clark, president of Civic Progress Inc., said that organization would join with the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis in having a coldly objective appraisal made of the city.

A survey by the Post-Dispatch showed that in the last six years, financial control of St. Louis business firms worth more than $250,000,000 has been acquired by outside interests. These are only the major transactions that have attracted public notice and in which the consideration was stated or indicated.

Two-Way Objective.

"If we find that the economic, governmental and labor factors here make this community a good place in which to do business, then we want to tell the nation's business community of the opportunities here," Clark said.

"On the other hand, if we find conditions that work against the legitimate interests of business and industry, we will do our dead-level best to see that they are eliminated."

Clark, president of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., said he had been surprised and disturbed by the accelerating rate at which old established St. Louis firms have been bought up by outside interests in recent years.

He expressed the opinion that two principal considerations have prompted many of the purchases of businesses here. One of these was to develop opportunities for profit which the prior owners had not seen or had been unable to put into effect, and the other was to use past losses of a purchased concern here to help offset profits of the purchaser in other cities, and thus reduce income tax liability.

Effect on Local Charities.

One danger in the trend toward out-of-town ownership, Clark said, is that many charitable, educational and medical activities are supported by corporate funds and "I believe you will find that, with some exceptions, the home-owned and home-managed industries make more generous contributions to these efforts than do the branch offices."

Whether the over-all effect on the St. Louis economy will be good or bad cannot be determined at this date, bankers and business leaders said. Few of them would permit quotation of their opinions on the subject.

"Mergers, consolidations and re-groupings of plants, businesses and ownerships are natural phenomena in today's business world," said Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

"While there have been

After Medical Examination

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER leaving Walter Reed Army hospital in Washington yesterday following his first complete medical examination in a month.

Text of Report by Physician After Examining Eisenhower

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP.)

Following is the text of a report on President Eisenhower's physical check-up today read to a White House press conference by Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the President's personal physician:

AS Dr. Paul White put it before he left Colorado, the news continues to be good. The President has completed his eleventh week of convalescence and his fourth since leaving Colorado. He continues to feel well and look well.

Executive responsibilities have imposed a heavier tax upon the President than an ideal convalescence program would incorporate. Then, too, the weather has not always been the best.

Participation in office and farm activities have been carefully supervised so that no harm has resulted.

The President's condition, when examined today, was good. He has felt well and looked well during all these later weeks. He sleeps well, rests well and relaxes easily during the day.

He has used sedation, and that only very mild, once since he left the hospital.

Blood Pressure Stable.

The President's temperature has been normal. His pulse has been regular, never rapid, usually in the 60s or lower 70s. His blood pressure has been stable, rarely above 120 systolic, or above 80 diastolic, and never at an unsatisfactorily high or low level.

His general circulation is excellent, including the circulation in his legs and feet.

Although there was an area of soreness in the President's chest during the first 48 hours of his illness, his breathing has been entirely comfortable during his entire illness.

The blood clot in time has

SNYDER URGES HIM TO PUT OFF DECISION ON '56 UNTIL FEBRUARY

Many Occasions of Fatigue Since 'Acute' Heart Attack, Physician Says—Condition Now Is 'Good.'

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—President Eisenhower has shown some signs of fatgue in recent weeks and should slow down his activities, his personal physician said tonight.

Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder told reporters after a medical check-up today that, were he in the President's position, he would not feel able to make a decision on running for a second term for "another two months," or at least until the middle of February. Physicians had said previously they though Mr. Eisenhower would be able to decide by the end of January or early in February.

Mr. Eisenhower's recovery is proceeding at a "normal" rate in view of the "acute" heart attack he suffered Sept. 24, but his doctors have advised him to take it somewhat easier for a while, Gen Snyder said.

The President was examined today at Walter Reed Army Hospital, the first hospital check-up he has had since leaving Denver a month ago.

Today's check-up, more complete than those given the President at his Gettysburg (Pa.) farm, included blood chemistry tests, fluoroscopic views and an electrocardiogram.

Sometimes Seemed Tired.

Afterward, Snyder and the two other examining physicians said that they had observed several occasions on which Mr. Eisenhower seemed tired recently. These came, they added, after long conferences or other exertion.

In addition to Snyder, the President was examined by Col. Thomas W. Mattingly, chief of the heart section at Walter Reed, and Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, commanding general of the hospital.

Snyder, who read the medical report they issued, and answered most of the questions from reporters, said he had not been asked by Mr. Eisenhower for his opinion on when the President should make up his mind about running again.

Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland of California has been reported ready to announce his own candidacy for the presidential nomination if Mr. Eisenhower has not spoken out by the end of January. He has urged the President to declare his intentions by the middle of that month.

Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, another Republican leader said today Mr. Eisenhower should announce his plans within a month.

Medical Bulletin.

The medical bulletin issued after the hospital examination said:

"Executive responsibilities have imposed a heavier tax upon the President than an ideal convalescence program would incorporate. Then, too, the weather (at Gettysburg) has not always been the best."

No harm has resulted, the bulletin said, and the President's condition "was good."

The bulletin used the word "acute" for the first time to describe the coronary thrombosis the President suffered, but Snyder and Mattingly explained that this referred only to the suddeness of the attack, not its severity.

X-rays and fluoroscopic examinations taken today showed "no significant evidence of enlargement" of his heart, the report said.

The doctors have been alert to this latter possibility as Mr. Eisenhower has increased his activities recently, in preparation for the new session of Congress next month.

Snyder said there is always a moderate increase in heart size in such cases; to compensate for the injured area, but that in Mr. Eisenhower's case the enlargement had been "minimal."

Enlargement Expected.

This was the first acknowledgment that there had been any increase in the size of the President's heart. Snyder emphasized that it was only the expected enlargement, not even enough to show up well on X-ray films.

The bulletin said the electrocardiogram reading showed "residual abnormalities as a result of the scar in the heart muscle," adding:

"These abnormalities remain stable, as is expected at this

'President's Condition Good'—He Is Under 'Heavier Tax Than Ideal.'

NEW DEN BUILT AT WHITE HOUSE FOR EISENHOWER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP)—When President Eisenhower returns to daily routine in his White House office he will have a sort of den where he can retire to rest.

A new room has been paneled off next to his office where he can recline in an easy chair for prescribed relaxation in the middle of his work day.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told reporters of this today after the President's arrival from Gettysburg, Pa., to spend the weekend.

Hagerty said the 11-foot square room has been made by putting a panel between the President's office and the adjoining appointment secretary's office. The room will have a desk and easy chair.

TRUCK DRIVER HURT IN CRASH AWARDED $73,800

BOSTON, Dec. 10 (UP)—A United States District Court jury today awarded a Medford man $73,800 in damages and interest in his auto accident suit against Dr. Harold Hobart of Washington.

The jury deliberated most of the night before reaching its verdict in favor of Michael P. O'Brien, 73 years old. A truck driver, O'Brien suffered lung, rib, scalp and leg injuries in a collision June 21, 1952.

O'Brien had sought $250,000. The jury was given the case at 4 p.m. yesterday and returned its verdict at 2 a.m. today. The trial lasted a week. The jury awarded O'Brien $61,000. Interest added $12,800.

O'Brien said that at the time of the accident the pediatrician's car swerved into the path of his truck.

Pupils to Ride in Taxicabs.

MATAWAN, N.J., Dec. 10 (UP)—Eleven pupils who live in remote areas will soon go to school by taxicab rather than school bus. The board of education decided that taxicabs would be cheaper than extending the present bus service.

Drops Nails on Lindbergh Blvd., Goes On, Causes Rash of Flat Tires

When a motorist litters a public highway—that's unsightly. But 12 angry truck and automobile drivers agreed with gestures and epithets yesterday that unsightly was not the word for it when a motorist littered heavily-traveled Lindbergh boulevard with 4800 inch-long roofing nails.

County police said the nails, 30 pounds of them, came from a large can which fell off a truck driven by Glen Allen Crosby, a roofer, of 1318 Daugherty Ferry road, Kirkwood, while Crosby was driving along at the St. Charles road overpass. The nails covered an area 150 feet long and the width of the four-lane highway.

Crosby, 19 years old, recovered a ladder which also fell from his truck and, despite another motorist's suggestion that he get a broom and start cleaning up, continued on his way.

The other motorist, James L. Swaters, 3456 Lindbergh, St. Ann, gave a description of Crosby's truck to County Patrolman Harold Brown. Crosby was stopped four miles from the scene and ordered to return.

There he found five children, two state troopers and police officers from St. Ann, Hazelwood and the county department sweeping away. He also found the 12 angry drivers, whose vehicles had flat tires. One truck had two flats.

Crosby stayed close to Patrolman Brown as the crowd pressed around him. Somebody handed him a broom and he participated in the big sweeping job. Traffic had to be detoured around the overpass for three hours.

Crosby was charged, in warrants issued by Magistrate Leslie T. Lewis of Clayton, with littering a public highway and having no operator's license. He was held under $1000 bond returnable next Thursday.

NEGRO IS CHOSEN AS QUEEN AT IOWA UNIVERSITY

IOWA CITY, Ia., Dec. 10 (UP)—Miss Dora Lee Martin, a 17-year-old Negro from Houston, Tex., today was named queen of the University of Iowa campus.

It was the first time the state university's male students, who choose the queen, had selected a girl of her race for the honor.

Miss Martin, reigned tonight as "queen of queens" at the winter formal dance. About 2000 of the approximately 5500 male students at the university took part in the balloting yesterday. Campaigning began a week ago.

She was the only Negro of 29 candidates for queen. She was among seven girls entered by Currier Hall, a woman's dormitory.

Miss Martin, a dramatic arts major attending Iowa on a scholarship, had not yet been notified of her choice this afternoon. The vote result usually is kept secret until the dance.

Reached today by a reporter, she said she would consider it "quite an achievement and almost a shock" if she won.

FIRM CONSIDERS BUILDING PLANT INSIDE MOUNTAIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—American Machine and Foundry Co. said today it is considering building an underground industrial plant at Green Mountain, near Huntsville, Ala.

The company, a diversified manufacturing firm with plants throughout the country, did not say when it might produce inside the mountain.

The Chattanooga Times reported, however, that there were indications the plant might have some connection with the guided missle program of the Redstone arsenal at Huntsville.

The company statement, signed by Morehead Patterson, president and chairman, said there are estimates that "underground industrial plants can be excavated, finished and maintained at costs lower than those for comparable plants above ground."

Woman, 72, Wins $100,000, Record for TV Giveaway Shows

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—The largest prize in the annals of radio and television giveaway shows—$100,000—went to a 72-year-old woman tonight.

Mrs. Ethel Park Richardson of Los Angeles won the prize by answering a six-part question about folk songs.

Mrs. Richardson was the first contestant to reach the $100,000 end of the trail on the NBC television program "The Big Surprise."

Two persons have won $64,000 on another television quiz show, CBS's "The $64,000 Question." Until now, that was the largest such prize ever given away.

How much Mrs. Richardson will have left after taxes depends on a number of things, including how much she gives to charity. She has estimated she will net in the neighborhood of $30,000.

Mrs. Richardson missed the $100,000 question last week, but got another chance at it tonight.

Under the program's rules, she got a second chance tonight when a "rescuer," chosen for her resemblance to Mrs. Richardson, correctly answered one question about a current event.

For the big prize she correctly identified the Erie canal as the "Highway to the West" built in 1825. She identified the Shenandoah of the folk song as an Indian chief. She named the Wabash river as the one mentioned in a song called "El-a-noy."

The fourth part of the question caused Mrs. Richardson to stumble. After identifying the tune of "The Streets of Laredo," she made several false starts in an effort to sing the first verse. She returned to the question later and got it.

For the fifth part she named Laura as the girl of the Colorado trail with eyes of a morning star and cheeks like a rose. And she sang the verse and chorus of a California gold rush song that has the same tune as "Camptown Races."

M'KAY ASSAILED FOR OPENING WILDLIFE AREAS TO OIL SEARCH

Head of Wildlife Federation Calls Secretary's Proclamation Near 'Giveaway' of National Refuges.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP)—Ernest Swift, director of the National Wildlife Federation, today denounced a recent proclamation by Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay, establishing rules for oil leasing and exploration on the national wildlife refuges.

Swift, named to the federation post last September after serving as an assistant director of the United States Wildlife Service, said in a statement, "This is the nearest thing to an outright giveaway yet perpetrated on the wildlife refuge system."

He noted there are about 260 different areas in 45 states and the territories, totaling approximately 18,000,000 acres.

"They are the meager fruits of victory of a long series of bitter battles by the conservationists," Swift said.

Only a Few Protected.

He said the new policy signed by McKay Dec. 2 provides special safeguards for the few refuges which may be designated as unique natural areas or as chiefly valuable for the protection of nearly extinct species of wildlife, such as Okefenokee swamp in Georgia and the Aransas refuge on the Texas coast, winter home of the rare whooping cranes.

In addition to Okefenokee and Aransas, Swift said, McKay's proclamation lists only these eight examples of protected areas: Wichita Mountains Refuge in Oklahoma; Red Rock Lakes, Montana; Patuxent Research Refuge, Maryland; National Bison Range, Montana; National Elk Refuge, Wyoming; Fort Niobrara Refuge, Nebraska; Sullys Hill Game Preserve, North Dakota, and certain of the Aleutians and Hawaiian island groups.

"Beyond certain special exceptions that are open to interpretation," Swift said, "the McKay ruling appears to open up the refuges to oil and gas exploration and drilling. . . .

'Powerless to Resist.'

"The McKay policy would render the Fish and Wildlife Service virtually powerless to resist the constant pressures for mineral development, even on those lands in which the service has complete control of mineral rights.

"There would seem to be plenty of undeveloped oil reserves outside the wildlife refuges to meet all the needs of the American economy for many years," Swift said. "If America is so poverty-stricken that these scattered, small wildlife lands must be ravaged for the private profit of a few, then we are in pretty bad shape."

Swift said he understood oil-lease applications already are being submitted to the Fish and Wildlife Service and that some have been approved under the Dec. 2 directive.

"That," said Swift, "is quick work. It looks as if the skids were oiled for the wildlife refuges even before McKay signed the proclamation."

URUGUAY'S PRESIDENT, WIFE TO BE WHITE HOUSE GUESTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP)—The White House announced today that President and Mrs. Eisenhower have invited President and Mrs. Louis Batlle Berres of Uruguay to tea at the White House Monday.

The Uruguayan chief executive and his wife now are in New York where they went Thursday after a three-day official visit to Washington. They were unable to see the first family while here because Mr. Eisenhower was in Gettysburg.

After the tea the visitors will fly to Boston for an unofficial visit until Wednesday when they will go to Chicago. On Dec. 16 they will fly to Miami for an overnight stop before going to Costa Rica en route to Montevideo.

MAN KILLS WIFE, DAUGHTER, MOTHER; THEN ENDS OWN LIFE

BALTIMORE, Dec. 10 (AP)—A Baltimore man killed his wife, his 6-year-old daughter and his mother, and wounded a policeman tonight.

He ended his own life with a pistol as his brother-in-law, a policeman, and another officer tried to enter the small tavern and living quarters he occupied.

The man, apparently crazed, used a Boy Scout ax and the pistol. Police Sgt. Joseph A. Heming was shot when he approached the tavern to investigate.

WAITRESS TELLS ROBBER, 'GO AHEAD, SHOOT'; HE DOES

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 10 (AP)—A waitress who said "go ahead and shoot" was shot today by a man who robbed a tavern cash register of $370.

After two men entered the cafe and told the bartender and five customers, "this is a stick-up, line up against the wall," Miss Foster started walking toward the rear of the room and made her comment when one of the gunmen ordered her to stop. She was shot in the thigh.

stage in the healing process. This stability is a desired finding. The scar in the heart muscle wall appears to be firm and of moderate size. Fluoroscopic examination indicates that the heart beat is good and that the muscle action is satisfactory."

(The Associated Press reported the doctors said that the size of injured heart area was approximately four fifths of an inch, which is about average.)

Reporters present at previous medical reports on Mr. Eisenhower's illness got the definite impression that the news this time was not quite so optimistic as before, at least with reference to the President's ability to resume a heavier work load.

Lighter Load Predicted.

Several times, Snyder emphasized that today's examination found Mr. Eisenhower recovering well, but he expressed reservations about the intensified schedule of the past few weeks, and added:

"We could hardly expect a man who has had this serious an illness to be in excellent condition."

Snyder said the doctors expected the President's work load "to be lightened" when he goes back to his Gettysburg farm home next Tuesday, after conference here with congressional leaders of both parties.

Snyder, who has been Mr. Eisenhower's personal physician for years, said the President's activities would be carefully controlled for the next few weeks, and he would continue to rest in the middle of the day, as he has been doing.

The lunch and rest period has been running from noon until about 2:30 p.m.

Snyder said he had recommended before today's examination that the President's work schedule be lightened somewhat, and "every effort" is being made to do this.

Asked if he thought Mr. Eisenhower would deliver his State of the Union message in person, the physician replied: "I shouldn't think so."

Trip to South Unlikely.

Asked about the President's future plans, the physician said he expects Mr. Eisenhower to remain in Gettysburg almost until the time Congress convenes. He added he did not think there was any chance of a trip south to a warmer climate, saying the President was "very well satisfied" where he is.

When reporters pressed the matter of Mr. Eisenhower's fatigue, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty broke in to say some tiredness was observed after last Thursday's meeting of the National Security Council at Camp David. On that occasion the President spent more than five hours in conference with his advisers.

The occasional fatigue, Snyder said, has showed up in both Mr. Eisenhower's mental attitude and in changes in his blood pressure and pulse rate.

Hagerty disclosed that a small study has been built next to Mr. Eisenhower's office in the White House. There the President will be able to take his early afternoon rest when here.

Goes to White House.

Mr. Eisenhower was examined at the hospital for a little more than an hour and a half, then went to the White House, where he worked in his office for a while before going to his living quarters.

Although, the President was at the hospital for two hours after driving here from Gettysburg. He spent about a half hour chatting with three old Army friends who are patients —Lt. Gen. Samuel Sturgis, chief of Army engineers; Lt. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis and Maj. Gen. Charles Bonsteel.

Press Secretary Hagerty said the President has no appointments or work scheduled tomorrow and will rest during the day. He does not plan to go to church.

The President will meet Monday with Senate and House Republican leaders for a preview of the legislation he will suggest next month. On Tuesday, Democrats will be invited in for a look at the foreign aspects of the program.

Sounds Like Normal Recovery, Dr. White Says.

BELMONT, Mass., Dec. 10 (AP)—Dr. Paul Dudley White, famous heart specialist and consultant on the President's illness, said tonight that the "slow down" suggestion given President Eisenhower "sounds like the advice a family doctor would give his patient."

"The President was inactive several weeks," Dr. White said, "so when he resumed many of his normal activities, there was undoubtedly some fatigue. It could be expected in any illness.

"The full medical text released by Dr. (Howard M.) Snyder....sounds like the President is making a normal recovery."

Dr. White declined further comment until he examines the President at Gettysburg next Saturday.

KEFAUVER SAYS U.S. MUST GUARANTEE ISRAEL'S SAFETY

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 10 (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, said tonight the United States "must state without equivocation that we expect Israel to be maintained and its border safeguarded."

"Certainly this nation wants no arms race in the Middle East," Kefauver said, in an address prepared at the Chanukah festival of the Jewish National Fund.

"But if arms from the Soviet system do go there (to Egypt), there is no question in my mind that, insofar as they threaten to change the balance of power, we must counter such a move by giving Israel the opportunity of obtaining defensive arms."

Just Like a Red Rose.

MOSCOW, Dec. 10 (AP)—Things are in good odor in the perfume business in the Soviet Union. B. S. Alayev, chief of the perfumery administration, said today that by the end of the year the industry will have produced 230,000,000 bottles of perfume and cologne, 20,000,000 more than last year.

remained at a controlled level (Dr. Snyder interpolated here to say this level meant one considered desirable). The blood sedementation rate has steadily declined and is now in the upper normal range for this altitude.

The white blood count has remained at a normal figure since the early days following the acute attack. The serum cholesterol varys slightly but continues within the normal range.

Since the early period of hospitalization the President's weight has remained below 172 pounds on a diet which rarely exceeds 1800 calories a day, and is usually within the limit of 1600 to 1800 calories. Portions of food are weighed. An accurate account of calories is made at each meal and totalled at the end of the day.

Electrocardiograms have been made weekly since the President's departure from the hospital. The latest was made this afternoon. These cardiograms shows residual abnormalities as a result of the scar in the heart muscle. These abnormalities remain stable as is expected at this stage in the healing process.

This stability is a desirable finding. The scar in the heart muscle wall appears to be firm and of moderate size.

Fluoroscopic examination indicates that the heartbeat is good, and that the muscle action is satisfactory.

The X-ray films that were made today show the lungs to be clear. This confirms the many X-ray and physical examinations that have been made.

The heart shadow compared with films that were made in prior years and with those that have been made since the acute attack developed shows no significant evidence of enlargement.

MISSING CLOTHES MYSTERY CLEANED UP---PRESSED, TOO

PITTSBURG, Kan., Dec. 10 (INS) — The clothing which a Pittsburg couple thought stolen has been returned—cleaned and neatly pressed.

The couple recently moved into a new home and, while arranging furniture in the rear of the house, piled their clothing just inside the open front door. On finding it gone, they notified police who checked the neighborhood but discovered no clues.

Two days later, a cleaning truck drove up with the missing garments. The driver had been confused by the house numbers and thought the clothing was meant for him.

KARSTEN SAYS U.S. URGED FIRM TO USE 'GRAY MARKET'

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), of St. Louis, complained today that Department of Commerce officials had suggested a company go into the "gray market" and pay three times the normal price for nickel it needs to manufacture an anti-leukemia drug.

In a letter to Secretary Sinclair Weeks, Karsten said the Raney Catalyst Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn., was allotted only enough nickel to supply one-third of the demand for purinethol-6-mercaptopurine, although plenty of nickel seemed available for plating toy pistols. He said the drug was used in acute cases of leukemia and could be prescribed and dispensed only by a physician.

The Congressman said he was very much surprised when Week's assistants told him the Raney company could get all the nickel it needed by going into the gray market and paying $3.15 a pound instead of the "average market price" of 90 cents.

MENZIES SCORES BIG VICTORY IN AUSTRALIA VOTE

Coalition Increases Seats in House — Labor Party Chief Barely Elected.

BY GORDON TAIT

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 10 (AP)—The government of Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies overwhelmingly defeated Herbert Evatt's Labor party in today's general election for the Australian House of Representatives.

Evatt found himself in a close race to hold his own seat in Parliament.

Returns in the balloting for 30 of the 60 Senate seats at stake were not conclusive, but the landslide for Menzies in the House indicated the government coalition also would win the Senate. It needs to take three out of five seats for Senators in each of the six states to control the upper house. Final outcome of the Senate races may not be known for several days.

As the House count neared its end, tabulations showed the government would have a big majority—probably of more than 25 in the House of 122 fully voting representatives.

Menzies's Liberal party appeared to have won 55 seats, its coalition partner, the Country party 16, Labor 43 and independents one. Seven seats were in doubt. In the last Parliament, the Liberal-Country party coalition held only a 64-to-57 edge over labor in a house that then had 121 members.

A record 5,171,000 voters, who faced a fine of two pounds ($4.75) if they did not vote without a good excuse, went to the polls in sweltering summer heat, with temperatures rocketing above the 95 mark.

Menzies told reporters: "We have won a splendid victory." There was no immediate comment from Evatt, who had promised higher social benefits and a review of fixed wages if his Labor party won.

Menzies had promised virtually nothing new. He told electors his government was standing on its record and pledged himself, if returned, to preserve prosperity.

The campaign was the quietest in Australia's political history. With employment and wages high, the campaigners concentrated largely on secondary issues.

Many supporters blamed Evatt for Labor's losses. Some said they believed Evatt's part in the Petrov spy case cost many votes. Vladimir Petrov defected as third secretary of the Russian Embassy in Canberra and asked for political asylum in Australia. He turned over to authorities documents disclosing an elaborate Communist spy network.

A royal commission decided the documents were authentic. Evatt, who blasted the government's handling of the case, disclosed he had written to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov about the papers' authenticity. Evatt said Molotov replied they were forgeries. During the campaign Menzies accused Evatt of "trafficking with Molotov." The labor chief has denied he has any Communist leanings.

In his own constituency of Barton, Evatt had his own struggle to hold his seat in the House. With most votes counted, Evatt had 19,044, his liberal opponent, W. T. Arthur, 18,014, and independent E. G. Trembath 1501.

In the Kooyong district of Melbourne, Menzies won in a romp, polling 2 to 1 against the combined total of his three opponents.

The Liberal-Country party coalition has run the government since 1949. It won elections in 1949, 1951 and 1954 over the Labor party, which was split this year. A segment of Roman Catholics within the party broke away and formed the "anti-Communist Labor party."

IT'S BIBLE SUNDAY; TEXTS TO BE READ IN 207 LANGUAGES

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (UP)—The world will pay tribute tomorrow to the all-time best-selling book—the Bible.

In observance of the fifty-first universal Bible Sunday the Bible will be read in 207 languages, including Aztec, Icelandic, Yiddish, Zulu, Mayan and Miskito, which is spoken only by 25,000 persons who live on the central African coast.

The day comes as a high point in the 1955 worldwide Bible reading observance, which began Thanksgiving and ends on Christmas.

It is sponsored by the American Bible Society, which has distributed a total of 466,231,012 biblical volumes throughout the world since it was founded by American colonists 139 years ago. Nine million society Bibles have been distributed so far this year in the United States alone.

$100,000,000 EXPANSION PLAN IS ANNOUNCED BY ST. LOUIS U.

Long-Range Project Outlined by Father Reinert — No Time Limit on Completion of Program.

(Related article and photographs in PICTURES.)

A long-range development program for St. Louis University, which would cost an estimated $100,000,000 for expansion of educational facilities, new buildings, additional land for campus activities, higher pay for teachers and increased student aid, was announced yesterday by the Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S. J., president of the university.

The plan contemplates acquiring most of six blocks east of Grand boulevard between Lindell boulevard and Laclede avenue to Channing avenue. Also to be acquired is privately owned land in the present general campus area west of Grand between Lindell and Laclede to Spring avenue. Ultimately West Pine boulevard would be closed between Grand and Spring and Pine and Lawton boulevards would be closed from Channing to Grand.

Father Reinert said no time limit has been set for completion of the entire program and there will be no quotas to meet and no campaign as such, but the first stage of the project—about half the entire program—should be completed within 15 years if the university is to provide continued educational service to the community.

The first stage of the program is expected to cost about $41,600,000, Father Reinert said.

First Stage Outlined.

In this stage are included a dormitory for women, Marguerite Hall, to cost $1,000,000 (this building is now under construction at 3811-15 West Pine boulevard); $4,000,000 for the Pius XII Library; $2,500,000 for a new Institute of Technology on the campus; $2,000,000 for an Arts building and $2,000,000 for a science building on campus.

Also in this stage of the program is acquisition of land east of Grand boulevard, at an estimated cost of $2,000,000, for student activities, a field house, baseball diamond, an auditorium, student union building, another women's dormitory and a new law building. Construction of these buildings is in the final stage of the plan.

The campus east of Grand would be connected to the west campus by an underpass. This, it was explained, does not conflict with any present city plans and since it is in the long-range plan, negotiations with the city to close the street have not been entered.

Other first stage expenditures would include $16,600,000 in endowments for teachers, $3,000,000 in scholarship, fellowship and loan endowments for students and $8,500,000 for "educational environment" to include $3,000,000 in endowments for departments, $2,000,000 for books and periodicals, $2,000,000 for laboratories and clinics, $1,000,000 for research funds and $500,000 for publications.

Other New Buildings.

New buildings in the long-range plan which also includes additions to the medical center on south Grand, are a central heating plant, $650,000; physics building, $800,000; an addition to the Commerce and Finance building, $800,000; new administration building, $1,000,000; Jesuit residence, $1,500,000; school of social service, $800,000; adult education and community center, $1,000,000; Parks educational building, $1,000,000; Parks dormitory, $1,000,000; medical and dental students' dormitory, $1,200,000; student priests' dormitory, $800,000; student nuns' dormitory, $800,000; faculty club, $50,000; medical school library and auditorium, $800,000; nursing school and residence, $1,200,000, and an internes and resident physicians' residence, $1,000,000.

The designs of the proposed new buildings will be modern, breaking with the traditional concepts of college buildings. The Pius XII Library, for example, will have walls of glass and will harmonize with overall campus planning.

As the new structures are erected, some old ones will be demolished, Father Reinert said, including DuBourg Hall, which now is the main building on Grand and was completed in 1888.

Father Reinert's announcement of the development program came at a meeting of the university's trustees and the executive board of the President's Council, a group of business men chosen to advise the university. They received a 40-page summary report on the university's future, prepared by the Academic Planning Committee, based on a three-year study made by the entire faculty and administration.

The report noted the university is faced with possible enrollment of 18,000 by 1970, almost double its present size, and the pressing demands of modern society for the best possible education. The following recommendations were made:

"That provision be made for substantial increases in the size of the faculty and in salary scales for present and future teachers.

"That every effort be made to reduce the economic barrier for capable students, growing out of the fact that even though tuition covers only half of the total university costs, it still is higher than some prospective students can afford.

"That the physical campus of the university be greatly expanded.

"That the tools of teaching and research—laboratories, clinics, departments, books and publications—be made available in numbers and quality commensurate with other expansion."

Several development committees, under the direction of Dr. Matthew W. Weis, are working to make the program a reality. The committees and their chairmen are: Alumni Fund Council, William F. Griffin; Firms and Corporations Council, Alvin Griesedieck; National Parents Committee, Donald V. Fraser; Bequest and Gift Council, Roland C. Behrens.

Londe's Departure From Prison

WOMAN HARDLY INSPIRED BY RASH OF PHONE CALLS

Of the 25,000 St. Louisans who daily dial VOlunteer 3-4222 for an inspirational message, there are eight or 10 who make a mental slip and dial instead VIctor 3-4222, Mrs. Otto E. Mueller, Kennerly road, Sappington, said sadly yesterday.

Mrs. Mueller should know. The VIctor number is her residence phone, and it has been ringing every day as a result of the dialing errors of those seeking the telephone prayer service, sometimes as late as 2:30 a.m. and as early as 5:30 a.m.

Mrs. Mueller said she was told by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. that the only complete solution would be for her to change her telephone number. However, she added, she hopes co-operation from the public will make this unnecessary, since the number is also a night number for her husband's business.

The telephone prayer service provides a one-minute recorded inspirational message from the Rev. Dr. Paul McElroy. First Congregational Church, 6501 Wydown boulevard, Clayton, where he is pastor, is sponsoring the service. For every dialer who has received the telephone message, seven have received a busy signal because of the flood of calls.

The Last Man Club of Navy Post 294, American Legion, held its twentieth annual reunion dinner last night at Hotel York. The club was organized in 1936 by members of the post, all of them naval veterans of World War I.

Presiding at last night's dinner was Harry R. Overhauser, 5643 Janet avenue, Jennings. Overhauser is "skipper" of the organization.

Isadore Londe Met at Gate Of Prison by Gangster Friends

Arrest Order Out for Released Convict, John J. Vitale and 'Tony' Giardano.

Gangster Isadore Londe, who was released Friday from the Missouri Penitentiary at Jefferson City, was met at the prison gate by two former acquaintances, John J. Vitale and Anthony J. (Tony) Giardano, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday.

Vitale, notorious gangster, once headed the Mafia here. Giardano is a former convict and associate of Vitale.

Chief of Detectives James Chapman issued orders for the arrest of Londe, who was reported to have been guest of honor at a "freedom party" here Friday night. Vitale and Giardano also will be picked up and questioned, on Chapman's orders.

Handkerchief Over Face.

Londe walked out of the prison holding a handkerchief over the lower part of his face. Vitale also held a handkerchief to his face as photographers took pictures.

A fourth man, who left the prison at the same time, drove away with Londe, Vitale and Giardano in a cream-colored Cadillac sedan. The license for the machine was issued to James Giammanco, operator of the Grand Opera Bar, near Sixth and Market streets. Giammanco was not present.

When Londe shook hands with Director of Corrections James D. Carter before dashing down the prison steps, he remarked—"I've learned my lesson." Carter advised the 51-year-old gangster to, "Stay with it."

Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell recalled meeting Londe at the penitentiary about a year ago. The convict, seeing O'Connell walking through a cell block, called out, "Hello, Chief, how are you?". In the ensuing conversation Londe assured Chief O'Connell he intended giving St. Louis "a wide berth" after he was released.

Londe had served nearly 16 years of a 25-year sentence for an industrial bombing in St. Louis.

Was Egan Gangster.

Londe, who has spent most of his adult life in prison, was known as one of the toughest members of the old Egan gang. He was convicted of bombing a St. Louis cleaning plant and a similar establishment at Cuba, Mo., and was sentenced to terms of 10 and 25 years.

In the St. Louis case, the state's chief witness, Louis Lee Baker, a Negro, was the victim of a murderous attack intended to prevent him from appearing at the trial. Baker, who was shot and left for dead, recovered and testified.

Londe's old associates include Elmer (Dutch) Dowling, lieutenant of East Side gang boss Frank (Buster) Wortman. He also was an associate of the late William (Dinty) Colbeck, George Ruloff, Joseph Cipolla and many other gangsters.

Vitale has been arrested frequently in police investigations of killings, the narcotics traffic and other crimes. Giardano, a former convict, also has been arrested frequently, and is a close associate of Anthony (Tony) Lopiparo and Ralph Calico.

TAVERNS OPEN 90 MORE MINUTES UNDER NEW LAW

Customers in St. Louis taverns enjoyed an extra hour and a half of conviviality last night under a recently enacted city ordinance which extended tavern closing hours from midnight until 1:30 a.m. today.

The ordinance was passed in accordance with enabling legislation approved by the state Legislature, which authorized the same closing hour for every day of the week.

Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell yesterday notified commanders of all districts of the new closing time.

COUNTY POLICE FORCE NAMES 4 LIEUTENANTS

2 Sergeants, 2 Patrolmen Selected After Competitive Examinations.

Promotion of four St. Louis county policemen to lieutenants after competitive oral and written examinations was announced yesterday by Police Superintendent Albert E. DuBois. Two of the new lieutenants had been serving as temporary sergeants, and two were patrolmen.

They are John M. Bergauer, Herman C. Birmes, Richard J. Hackmeyer and Edwin R. Wagner Jr.

Birmes will be in charge of criminal investigations, Bergauer and Wagner in charge of headquarters operations on separate shifts and Hackmeyer will fill the newly created post of officer in charge of staff services, inspections and liaison with municipal police.

The four were named from an eligible list of 20 who passed the examinations. Hackmeyer's grade was highest among the 20, Birmes placed second, Wagner fourth and Bergauer seventh.

DuBois said three of four temporary lieutenants, named during the first three months of the department's operation, which began last July 1, now would become temporary sergeants and the fourth would revert to the rank of patrolman.

They are John Mourton, William Soell, Linn White and Sylvester Gansman. All made lower grades in the examinations than their successors.

Bergauer, 27 years old, was a Jennings policeman two and a half years and a deputy sheriff one year before becoming a county policeman. He lives at 2636 Oepts avenue, Jennings.

Birmes, 46, was a deputy sheriff one year and before that was a St. Louis city patrolman five years. He lives at 718 Reed avenue, Lemay.

Hackmeyer, 27, and a lawyer, has been a patrolman since joining the department last Sept. 19. He is a graduate of St. Louis University. He lives at 7343 Dartmouth avenue, University City.

Wagner, 39, of Lemay, has been serving as a temporary sergeant, was a Ladue policemen five years and a deputy constable two years.

CHARGES FILED AGAINST 3 WHO ASSAULTED GIRL

County Youths, 16, Would Be Tried as Juveniles — Could Be Detained Until 21.

Three St. Louis county youths who admitted they abducted and attacked a 14-year-old University City girl last Tuesday night were charged with delinquency by rape in informations filed yesterday at Clayton by Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz.

Whether the 16-year-old youths will be tried in juvenile court or in circuit court rests in the discretion of the judge of the juvenile court. A decision has not yet been announced. If tried in juvenile court, the maximum penalty on conviction would be detention until they reach the age of 21 years. In circuit court the penalty would be two years to death.

The prosecuting attorney is also considering a possible kidnaping charge against the youths. Bond for the prisoners, held at the Children's Building in Clayton, was fixed at $5000 by circuit court. A report on their home surroundings and social backgrounds will be made to Judge John A. Wittaus, the juvenile court judge.

A description of an automobile, furnished police by the sister of the victim, and persistent police work by three University City detectives led to the arrest of the three youths Friday. After investigating more than 30 leads, the officers traced the automobile to a student at Ferguson High School.

Names His Associates.

The owner of the 1949 Mercury automobile, admitted his part in the crime, and named his associates. One, also a Ferguson High School sophomore, was taken into custody at the school. The other, who is employed, was arrested at his home.

In written statements, which were virtually identical, the youths said they started out Tuesday night with the intention of "picking up girls." They were equipped with a length of clothesline—to tie their intended victims—and a bottle of liquor.

The 14-year-old girl and another girl were walking home from basketball practice at All-Saints School, 6403 Clemens avenue, and were observed by the youths. Two of the youths got out of the machine, they said, and accosted the girls, while the driver went around the block. When the automobile returned, one girl was forced into the rear seat, but her companion broke away and fled.

Driving to a secluded area known as the "Hobo Jungle," near the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. plant on West Florissant avenue, the abductors forced their victim to swallow about one third of the contents of the bottle of whisky, and then removed her clothing, they said.

Hands Tied Behind Her.

She was carried, in chilling temperatures, to a clump of underbrush, the statements continued, and her hands tied behind her back. She lost consciousness from the effects of the liquor.

The girl was dressed by her assailants and placed in the trunk of the machine. One youth got in with her "to hold the lid up and see that she got sufficient air," the statements related.

The assailants said they drove to Arbor Terrace, carried their unconscious victim to the front porch of a house, and left her there. They then went home.

Dazed and chilled, the girl regained consciousness about 6:30 a.m. Wednesday in a vacant lot in the 6600 block of Pasadena avenue. She went to a house in the block, and police were summoned. Physicians at County Hospital said she had been criminally assaulted and that there were bruises and scratches on her face and chest.

DOWNTOWN SHOPS TO REMAIN OPEN 4 EXTRA NIGHTS

Downtown department stores and most specialty shops will add four extra night openings to their pre-Christmas schedule of business hours, it was announced yesterday by William H. Semsrott, president of the Associated Retailers of St. Louis.

In addition to the usual Monday and Thursday shopping nights downtown, the stores will be open Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 13-14 and Dec. 20-21, until 8:30 p.m. The usual 9:30 a.m. daily opening hour will prevail.

Floodlights on the riverfront parking lot will be kept on all nights that the downtown stores are open before Christmas, Semsrott added.

TALKS AT LAW SCHOOLS

T. Hartley Pollock, president of the Bar Association of St. Louis, will discuss the "Lawyer's Relation to the Public" in a talk before the St. Louis University law school students Tuesday at 10 a.m. and again at 8:30 p.m. in the university auditorium, 3642 Lindell boulevard.

The talk is one in a series on legal ethics and is arranged by the Law School Alumni Council.

ELMER S. DOLAN HOME; 'JITTERY,' WIFE REPORTS

Ex-Policeman Freed From Prison After Perjury Sentence Refuses to Talk.

Elmer S. Dolan, suspended St. Louis patrolman released Friday from a federal reformatory in Texarkana, Tex., after serving a sentence for pejury in the Greenlease ransom inquiry, returned to St. Louis yesterday with his wife, who had met him upon his release.

Dolan refused to see or speak to reporters at the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. C. P. Billings, 5951A McPherson avenue, where the Dolans are staying temporarily.

However, Mrs. Dolan said her husband was "jittery" since his return and wanted to consult with his attorney before making any statement.

Dolan eagerly greeted his two children—steven, who was born shortly after he went to prison, and Kathleen, 2½ years old—as soon as he got home, Mrs. Dolan said.

In the meantime, Maj. James Thompson, acting police inspector, announced he planned to see Dolan this week to "discuss matters in general." Dolan, although listed as permanently suspended, is still on the rolls of the Police Department.

Dolan, who will be 28 years old Dec. 20, was sentenced to serve two years in prison May 21, 1954, following his conviction in United States District Court in Kansas City.

He and former Police Lt. Louis Shoulders were found guilty of lying under oath to a federal grand jury investigating disappearance of $303,720 of the $600,000 ransom paid Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, kidnaper-killers of Bobby Greenlease.

Dolan was suspended from the Police Department after the inquiry into the missing ransom began shortly after Hall and Mrs. Heady were captured in St. Louis Oct. 6, 1953. His suspension was made permanent the day his sentence was pronounced.

STUDY PLANNED INTO SALE OF OLD ST. LOUIS FIRMS

transfers of ownership of St. Louis concerns outside the area, there have been, significantly, important transfers of ownership into the area.

'Saddening' Moves.

"It is saddening, of course, to have some of the old, well-established firms acquired by what, to us, are outsiders. Such moves, however, frequently bring to the city fresh stimuli, new outlooks and new opportunity for reassessment."

Kaufmann said that St. Louis's postwar industrial expansion represented an investment of more than two billion dollars, which he cited as concrete evidence of confidence in the future of the St. Louis area.

Tom K. Smith, board chairman of Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis, pointed out, that the trend toward mergers was nation-wide. He attributed it to the exisence, at least until now, of easy credit and the opportunities this offered for buying up existing businesses and merging them into larger aggregations.

Smith said there had been some loss of banking business here through the transfer of financial control of various companies to other centers of trade and finance.

In some cases, local businessmen were offered profits they could not afford to turn down, other observers said. It was pointed out that in other cases, illness and death had interrupted the continuity of management, making the businesses more available to outside concerns. In one case, a conviction of income tax evasion had this effect.

Some bankers pointed out that the infusion of new money, new blood and new ideas was by no means undesirable. It should be noted further, they said, that the trend has not been entirely in one direction. Monsanto Chemical Co. acquired Lion Oil Co. through an exchange of shares last July. On the basis of the quoted value of the Monsanto shares and the number issued in exchange for the oil company, the deal involved about $211,000,000.

Some of the transactions by which St. Louis companies passed into the control of outside interests were effected by a similar exchange of shares. Others were accomplished through cash payments.

In all cases, however, so far as can be determined by public disclosures, ultimate financial control passed from the hands of local managements, although they may have retained considerable autonomy in the day-to-day conduct of the businesses.

Deals in Last Six Years.

Following is a list of larger concerns that have been sold outright or in which a controlling interest has been acquired through stock purchases in the last six years, together with the name of the purchaser and the announced consideration or estimated value of the business.

Gaylord Container Corp., by Crown Zellerbach Corp. of San Francisco, $140,000,000.

Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., by Burlington Industries Inc. of Greensboro, N.C., and New York City, $64,360,000.

Griesedieck-Western Brewing Co.'s brewing properties, by Carling Brewing Co. of Cleveland, $10,000,000.

F. Burkart Manufacturing Co., by Textron Inc. of Providence, R.I., $8,600,000.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat, by Samuel I. Newhouse of New York City, $6,000,000.

Hampton Village Shopping Center, by Webb & Knapp Inc. of New York City, nearly $5,000,000.

Jefferson Hotel, by Hilton Hotels Corp. of Chicago, about $3,843,000.

Curtis Manufacturing Co., by Cleveland syndicate headed by Harold C. and Joseph J. Schott, brothers, $1,700,000.

Dazey Corp., by Landers, Frary and Clark of New Britain, Conn., $1,500,000.

Lehmann Machine Co., by Schott brothers of Cleveland, about $1,000,000.

Ramsey Corp., by Thompson Products Inc. of Cleveland, $895,708 and assumption of liabilities of $1,875,249.

These transactions add up to a total of $248,273,957.

In addition, control of Rice-Stix Inc. was acquired by Reliance Manufacturing Co. of New York last February through stock purchases. The consideration was not stated but the book value of the Rice-Stix common stock as shown by its latest balance sheet would give the company a value of about $15,805,300.

Berland Shoe Stores, with a book value of $2,407,336, became a subsidiary of General Shoe Corp. in September, 1953.

Laclede Christy Co., whose balance sheet indicated a net worth of $9,484,000, came under control of H. K. Porter Inc. of Pittsburgh in September, 1954.

The list could be extended by including the sale of several downtown office buildings. The Paul Brown Building and two buildings occupied by Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. were sold in November, 1952, to the same eastern syndicate that had taken over the old Mississippi Valley Trust Building the preceding July. The Frisco Building, which had been bought by the syndicate, was later brought back to local ownership when it was acquired by the Frisco Railroad.

A deal is pending for the purchase of Shapleigh Hardware Co., and the Louis Wolfson interests have acquired about one-third of the Common stock of Scullin Steel Co.

Expansions by Local Firms.

On the other side of the ledger, the Frisco Railroad has asked permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission to acquire control of the Central of Georgia Railway Co. and already has expended $15,289,688 in buying stock of the southern line.

Brown Shoe Co.'s plans to acquire the G. R. Kinney Co., Inc., of New York through an exchange of shares has been held up by a temporary restraining order issued at the request of Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., who alleged the merger might tend to lessen competition.

St. Louis breweries, especially Anheuser-Busch Inc. and Falstaff Brewing Corp., have extended their operations into other parts of the country in recent years also.

St. Louis department stores have shown similar activity.

HUNT FOR SECOND MAN GOES ON IN LEBANON KILLINGS

realize what he had done. I believe sometime within the next 48 hours we will get the complete story."

"Several times while we were talking to Young he seemed ready to admit he had an accomplice," Flood reported. "At one point he said, 'Oh, you know who it was. It was the guy in the fight the day before'."

While no name was mentioned, Flood said, St. Clair county authorities have received some information of a fight in which the Centralia man for whom they are searching was involved.

Throughout the questioning, Flood said, Young alternated the expressions "I" and "we" in discussing the manner in which the bodies were carried out of the house and placed in the wells.

In discussing his allegations that Sheriff Parker of Clinton county was unco-operative, Flood asserted that Parker's failure to advise St. Clair county authorities of the discovery of the towel, which was taken from the Smith home, had delayed the investigation by five days.

Blood samples from the towel were analyzed early last week in the St. Louis Police Department laboratory. It was found that the blood was the same type as that found on the floors in the Smith home and also outside.

Flood charged that the arrest of Young was further delayed when Parker demanded that St. Clair county authorities obtain a warrant before making the arrest.

Parker made a sweeping denial of the accusations. Carlyle Chief of Police Earl Robert, who also serves as a deputy sheriff, defended Parker. He said he and the sheriff held up announcement of the discovery of the towel because "we wanted to make certain before calling in outside police."

"Neither Parker nor I are guilty of being unco-operative or of any other of the allegations Flood made," said Robert. "I worked hard on this case and I would never protect a man suspected of a crime."

The chief revealed that he had received a complaint about Young a year ago. A Carlyle barmaid complained to him, the chief said, that Young had threatened to kill her because she had refused to date him.

"I asked Young about it and warned that he would be arrested if he bothered the woman any more. He promised to behave and the woman shortly after left town. She hadn't been here very long."

State police questioned about the Flood-Parker feud indicated they were not taking sides, but were attempting to concentrate on the business of reaching a complete solution of the Smith murders. They were ready to co-operate with any sheriff's office requiring assistance, one of the officers said.

U. N. COUNCIL DEFERS ACTION ON NEW MEMBERS would be put in effect and that the Russian motion for nation-by-nation acceptance by the Assembly would be defeated.

By the same token, 13 Nationalist Chinese resolutions, calling for the admittance of 11 of the independent states recommended for consideration in the Security Council by the General Assembly, seemed certain to be voted down. The resolutions omitted all five Soviet-sponsored nations and two on the Western list—Nepal and Finland. Two "divided nations" especially excepted by the Assembly resolution, South Korea and South Viet Nam, were substituted by the Nationalists.

Would Change Voting Order.

Of greater importance, the Nationalist Chinese move would change the voting order in the membership election which the majority agrees should be in the order of application.

After Albania and Outer Mongolia, the candidates to be voted on in order are: Jordan, Ireland, Portugal, Hungary, Italy, Austria, Romania, Bulgaria, Finland, Ceylon, Nepal, Libya, Cambodia, Japan, Laos and Spain.

All of the Communist candidates have previously failed to attain the needed seven security council votes. All except Spain of the independent applicants have been vetoed by the Soviet Union.

Behind the opposing proposals was the fear of a diplomatic double cross. Some Western representatives fear that under the Soviet plan, Communist Albania—first in line—would gain entry, Outer Mongolia might fail under a Nationalist Chinese veto, and then Russia would veto the 13 Western-sponsored nations.

Sobolev, on the other hand, fears that while the Council might approve all 18, the General Assembly might fail to give Outer Mongolia the necessary two-thirds majority. By that time Sobolev would have no power to wield his veto against the West's candidates.

It was evident in the debate that no means had been found during private conferences among delegates throughout the last two weeks to break the nine-year-old deadlock on membership.

During the afternoon session, the United States, French, British, Iranian and Peruvian spokesmen indorsed the procedure in voting set forth in the New Zealand-Brazil resolution.

The Council President, Sir Leslie Munro, of New Zealand, urged the Soviet representative to think over his position carefully during the weekend.

Nasrollah Entezam, Iran, and Sir Pierson Dixon, Britain, assailed the "mistrust" of the Russians. Dixon said it is "shocking" to hear that Moscow wants to start with a veto.

The 18 applicants in the package deal have already been indorsed indirectly by the General Assembly, which yesterday approved a resolution requesting the Security Council to consider "in the light of general opinion in favor of the widest possible membership" for all nations except those in which the "problem of unification arises." The Assembly had in mind, of course, the 18-nation package.

Now that the Security Council is considering the applications of the various countries, Council approval must receive subsequent indorsement by two-thirds vote of the Assembly.

In the voting in the special Political Committee and General Assembly, China, along with Cuba, voted against the resolution calling for approval of the 18 nations.

Council Chairman Munro opened the morning session with an appeal to the delegates to "take the prompt and positive action" requested by the General Assembly in a resolution to the Security Council designed to gain approval of the 18 nations.

Munro, who exercises a strong-hand in presiding over the Council, warned that failure of the group to act now would be "unjustified."

Tsiang rebuked Munro for his opening remarks to the Council. The Chinese delegate said Munro's recommendation that the Council act as the Assembly asked "deviated from objective impartiality."

Dixon revealed a shift in the British position when he said his delegation will vote for all five Communist states. Previously Britain had made it clear it would not support Albania's application which made it doubtful that that country could get the necessary seven votes in the Council.

LEE QUITS AS CAA HEAD; ACTION WAS URGED BY WEEKS

ent appears to be "a suitable time for me to relinquish my post and to move on to other activities."

Praised for Contributions.

Mr. Eisenhower, in accepting the resignation, effective today, praised Lee for his "years on conscientious service as a government official." He also said Lee had "contributed much to the solution of the technical and operational problems incident to the development of civil aviation."

Lowen is 40 years old and an Air Force veteran of World War II.

Lee has been with the CAA for 10 years.

In his letter of resignation he said the nation is "now on the threshold of further growth in all flying and of the jet age and I am glad to report that this agency's programs have been formulated to meet the needs of the future."

"Speaking personally," he said, "my years of service in the CAA have been rewarding in experience and in the sense of real achievement. However, opportunities may change with changing circumstances and this might appear a suitable time for me to relinquish my post and to move on to other activities."

WOULD-BE ROBBER IS ARRESTED BY POLICEWOMAN

Mrs. Floy Jones, a Negro policewoman, arrested a would-be robber last night at pistol point after he tried to flee from an unsuccessful attempt to rob the manager of the Marquette Theater, 1806 Franklin avenue.

Policewoman Jones was standing in the lobby of the theater when she heard a disturbance inside. Then a man dashed through the lobby for the street. Extracting her revolver from her purse, she followed him out side, pointed the weapon at him and ordered him to halt. He did.

He gave his name as Donald R. Small and an address in the 2400 block of Prairie avenue. He was identified by Louis Speros, theater manager, as the man who struck him on the head with a hammer as Speros was taking the night's receipts up a ladder to the projection booth for safekeeping. The 70-year-old manager was knocked from the ladder, spilling the money on the floor. Small, a Negro, fled without attempting to pick it up.

Speros was treated at City Hospital for a cut on the head. Small was taken into custody by two other police officers called by Mrs. Jones.

KILLED IN RAILROAD YARD

A man identified as John Mack, who lived in a shack near 717 Tudor avenue, East St. Louis, was killed yesterday in the Terminal Railroad yard in East St. Louis, near Eighth street, when an Illinois Central freight train started up while he was crawling between two cars.

DRIVER KILLED, CAR HITS ANOTHER MAKING U-TURN

No Crossover Between Lanes on Highway 40 Where Accident Occurs.

Charles G. Lake, 2604 Indiana avenue, was killed yesterday when his automobile collided with another car which was making a U-turn on U.S. Highway 40 beneath the Spoede road overpass in St. Louis county, state police reported.

Driver of the second machine, who said he was Henry C. Warner, 3200 block of Woodson road, Breckenridge Hills, told officers he was making the U-turn in the one-way east-bound portion of the highway. The highway is divided by a grassy strip there.

Lake, who was driving east, had just passed another car, Warner said. Police said there is no paved crossing for U-turning vehicles at that point, and that Warner would have been going the wrong way in the east-bound lanes if the turn had been completed, unless he drove across the divider.

Lake's machine overturned and came to rest on its top. Lake, 26 years old, a service-station attendant, was dead on arrival at St. Louis County Hospital.

Warner, who was not injured, was held in jail at Clayton on $2500 bond for the coroner's inquest, which is scheduled for Tuesday.

Woman Dies of Injuries.

Mrs. Dora Griffith, 165 Cumberland avenue, Maryland Heights, died at St. Louis County Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Friday night when she was struck by a St. Louis County Transit Co. bus at Cumberland and Harding avenues, Maryland Heights. She was 81 years old.

Bus driver Clarence H. Hays, 8222 Jefferson avenue, Vinita Park, told police he had just discharged passengers when Mrs. Griffith, who apparently was trying to board the bus, stepped in front of the vehicle as he started to move. He said he did not see her until she appeared in the beam of the headlights.

Joseph Russell McLean, 7745 Renneld avenue, Maplewood, was killed early yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding overturned on Illinois Route 15, one mile south of Addieville. He was 53 years old.

Companion Hurt.

Henry J. Withrow, 32, also riding in the car, was injured. He lives at 467 Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis. Illinois State Police said they did not know which of the men was driving at the time of the accident. Addieville is 45 miles southeast of East St. Louis.

Albert M. Oglander, owner of Al's Mens and Boys Shop, East St. Louis, and his wife, Adele, were injured seriously yesterday when their eastbound automobile collided with a westbound machine on Veterans' Memorial Bridge.

Oglander, of 5 County Aire drive, Town and Country, suffered a broken leg and fractured ribs. His wife suffered head injuries.

Elmer Lee Townsend, 22, of Desloge was killed yesterday when the automobile he was driving went out of control and struck a bridge abutment on U.S. Highway 67, two miles south of Desloge.

STATE G.O.P. MAY SEEK PRESIDENT'S AID ON ENTRIES

Leaders Hope He Will Assist in Persuading Prominent Persons to Be Candidates.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

President Eisenhower may be asked by some influential Missouri Republican leaders to intercede in state party affairs, by personally appealing to prominent persons to become candidates for governor and United States senator on the Missouri G.O.P. ticket in next year's election, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

State party leaders, it was reported, are hoping that the President, if he decides to seek re-election in 1956, will lend a hand in Missouri to bolster the party's chances of carrying the state next November.

Among those who the leaders hope can be induced to run are Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley of Washington University; his brother, John R. Shepley, vice president of St. Louis Union Trust Co.; Richmond C. Coburn, St. Louis attorney, and former State Senator R. Jasper Smith of Springfield.

Ethan Shepley's Position.

It is hoped that either of the Shepley brothers can be sold on the idea of running for governor. Ethan Shepley, however, has stated flatly on several occasions that he would not be a candidate next year, declaring that he has no intention of giving up his present job of heading Washington University's development and expansion program and fund drive.

The leaders also have their eyes on Coburn, either as a candidate for governor or for United States Senator. Smith, a Springfield attorney who was regarded as an able and astute state senator, is considered by many Republicans as a strong potential candidate for United States senator.

Whereas state Democratic political activity has been humming at a fast pace for more than a month, the Republican political front has been unusually quiet and lethargic. Seven candidates already have filed or announced their candidacies for Democratic nominations next year, and others are getting ready to do so. No Republican has filed for state office so far.

Most Republicans who have been thinking of running for state offices are holding up their decisions until Mr. Eisenhower decides whether to seek re-election.

State G.O.P. Chairman Perry Compton said yesterday he does not think the Republicans will start filing or announcing their candidacies until shortly before the annual state G.O.P. Lincoln day meeting, which will be held next February in St. Louis. Missouri Republicans hope the President's decision on seeking re-election will be known by that time.

The Republicans would, of course, be more confident of victory in Missouri if Mr. Eisenhower seeks a second term. But some leaders say that even if he decides to run, it may be necessary for him to make a personal appeal to assure getting top candidates on the Missouri G.O.P. ticket.

Many persons have been mentioned in Republican circles as possible candidates for state offices next year. The potential gubernatorial candidates include Representative Thomas B. Curtis of Webster Groves, State Senator James P. Kelly of Trenton, Circuit Judge Randolph H. Weber of Poplar Bluff and former State Representative Richard M. Webster of Carthage.

Other possible candidates include Jesse E. Smith of Springfield, Greene county collector, who may run for Secretary of State, and Edward Payton of North Kansas City, who may run for State Treasurer.

There are indications that the state G.O.P. ranks have not fully recovered from the effects of the bitter intra-party battle over patronage matters earlier this year. Although the patronage fight apparently has subsided, there is still some underlying dissension within the party and bickering continues.

Activities of the state organization in recent months have been confined largely to fund-raising drives. There were $100-a-plate Republican dinners in St. Louis and Kansas City last October, and others are scheduled to be held next month.

Arthur K. Atkinson, program chairman of the state Republican finance committee, announced yesterday that "Salute to Eisenhower" dinners will be held Jan. 20 in St. Louis, Kansas City and in 50 other Missouri cities and towns. Tickets for the St. Louis and Kansas City dinners will be $100 each.

Atkinson, president of the Wabash Railroad, said Harold E. Stassen, assistant to the President on matters of disarmament, will be the principal speaker at the St. Louis dinner, which will be held at Hotel Jefferson. A feature will be a closed-circuit telecast on which a message from President Eisenhower will be presented.

The Missouri meetings will be part of the nation-wide Republican "Salute to Eisenhower" dinners. Missouri will be the only state having more than two G.O.P. dinners at that time.

Statue of Peter the Great.

VORONEZH, U.S.S.R., Dec. 10 (AP)—Plans were announced today to erect a 10-foot bronze statue of Czar Peter the Great in this river port where he founded the Russian navy more than 200 years ago. It is believed the statue will be the first memorial of a Czar put up in Russia since the 1917 revolution.

LEADERS NAMED TO INTEREST COUNTIES IN CITY'S JUBILEE

Preston Estep, president of Transit Casualty Co., and Maurice L. Campbell, a Benton (Ill.) business man, have been appointed co-chairman of the counties participation committee for the Mid-America Jubilee scheduled to be held on the riverfront next September, it was announced yesterday.

Purpose of Estep's and Campbell's committee is to interest counties in the Metropolitan St. Louis trade territory in exhibits, entertainment talent and attendance for the jubilee.

Estep served as chairman of the slum clearance subcommittee of the St. Louis Citizens' Bond Issue Screening Committee and is a director and treasurer of the St. Louis Urban Redevelopment Corp. Campbell is president of the Benton Civic and Industrial Association.

Sam Rayburn Library Started.

BONHAM, Tex., Dec. 10 (UP)—House Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, turned the first spadeful of dirt today on the Sam Rayburn Library of Bonham. He used the same spade that he used to plant the "Rayburn white oak" on the capitol grounds in Washington. The library will be built from contributions, large and small, from admirers of "Mr. Sam."

U.S. STEPPING UP ITS BALLISTIC MISSILES WORK

Racing Against Russians to Develop Inter-Continental Atom-Carrying Weapons.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP) —Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson tonight announced the United States was stepping up its efforts to beat Russia in the development of long-range ballistic missiles—known as the "ultimate weapon" of hydrogen-bomb warfare.

Wilson, at an unusual evening press conference, said that expansion of efforts to develop the intercontinental weapon is a result "more of our own technological developments and realization of possibilities" than of Russian advances in the field.

Wilson declined to say whether the United States is ahead of Russia in the deadly race. But he denied that the new United States step-up has anything to do with Russia's recent H-bomb explosion.

Wilson said he did not think Russia had made any unforeseen advance in the development of a ballistic missile. "Their progress has been what could be expected," he said.

His announcement officially confirmed that the Defense Department is working on an intermediate ballistic missile with a range of about 1500 miles as well as an intercontinental missile with a 5000-mile range.

Robertson in Charge.

Deputy Defense Secretary Reuben B. Robertson Jr., will have "personal direction" of the overall program, Wilson said

The defense chief said that progress on the missile "has been such as to now require an expansion of developments and testing facilities" as well as establishment of specific responsibilities for each of the military services.

Informed sources said the Defense Department, with the approval of President Eisenhower and the National Security Council, was taking three steps to accelerate development of long-range, rocket-powered missiles with atomic warhead. These are:

1. Putting more heat—and presumably more dollars—behind the so-called Atlas project already being conducted by the Air Force in co-operation with several big industrial and aircraft firms. The goal is development of an "intercontinental" missile with a range of 5500 miles.

2. Launching a new project to develop an "intermediate" missile with a range of 1500 miles. This project will be conducted jointly by the Army and Navy, with development efforts concentrated at the Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., where a large group of former German rocket experts are stationed.

3. Creation of a top-level committee within the Defense Department to oversee all aspects of the missile program, and insure that it gets top priority.

A committee of scientists, headed by Dr. James Killian, made a secret report on Soviet progress to the National Security Council last summer. The report is said to have warned that the United States must speed up its own efforts, and start work on an intermediate missile, if it hopes to stay abreast of Russia, in the "ultimate weapon" arms race.

More recently, it is understood information has been received here indicating Russia's H-bomb test last month may have involved a hydrogen warhead fastened to a rocket device.

Military men call the ballistic missile the "ultimate weapon" because there is, at present, no known defense against it.

The missile envisioned by scientists is a huge, multi-stage rocket which can be equipped with atomic warhead. Unlike a guided missile, which is steered in flight, a ballistic missile, once underway, would follow a predetermined trajectory like an artillery shell. Its rocket thrust would blast it far into the outer atmosphere, and a short while later it would come roaring down on its target at a speed of about 18,000 miles an hour.

Both the United States and Russia have been working on ballistic missile research since World War II. Both managed to round up after the war some of the German scientists who developed the V-2 rocket, a forerunner of the true ballistic missile, which terrorized London in the closing days of the war.

NEGROES GET THREATENING LETTERS ON INTEGRATION

ORANGEBURG, S.C., Dec. 10 (AP) — Threatening letters are being received by Negroes in Orangeburg in a controversy between white merchants and Negro customers arising out of the school integration ruling, a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People officer said today.

Mrs. H. F. Pierce, widowed housewife and vice president of the Orangeburg branch of the N.A.A.C.P., said she has turned a threatening letter over to local police.

"This wasn't the only one," she said officers told her, "received by Negroes here. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has it, and they told me they have others and are comparing them."

She said she received two threatening telephone calls before getting the letter, which was written across the top of a torn piece of newspaper, in pencil. "The letter cursed terribly and said 'You will die'," she related.

PUBLIC HEARINGS URGED ON MILITARY USE OF U.S. PARKS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP) —The Department of the Interior advisory committee on conservation has recommended against permitting the armed services exclusive use of any part of the national park system without first having a public hearing.

Acting Secretary Clarence A. Davis today announced the recommendations the committee made Dec. 2 to Secretary McKay. McKay is now in Hawaii.

The announcement said the committee's park recommendation resulted from discussion of the granting last April 27 to the Navy of a permit for exclusive use of about 25 acres of the 28,000-acre Cape Hatteras national seashore recreational area in North Carolina.

The Interior Department said the Navy had then declared its use of the area, at the tip of Cape Hatteras, "is absolutely essential" to the security of the United States.

MAYOR URGES REFLECTION OF MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, in his Christmas greeting to the people of St. Louis, issued yesterday, said he hoped "that all St. Louisans will join me this Christmas day in solemn reflection of the true meaning" of the day.

"The freedom and contentment our community and our nation enjoy," he said, "are due largely to the faith of our predecessors in the sovereign wisdom of our Blessed Lord.

"We are too frequently inclined to forget that peace and good will throughout the world can be attained only by following the precepts of Our Saviour."

11 KILLED BY TERRORISTS IN NEW ALGERIA ATTACKS

ALGIERS, Dec. 10 (AP)—At least 11 deaths were reported today in a series of terrorist attacks in Algeria.

Several Algerians considered friendly to the French were found murdered. Near Bougie in eastern Algeria two members of a French military patrol were killed.

Five armed terrorists attacked a railroad repair gang after derailment of a train near Bone. Two Europeans in the work party were singled out and killed.

DEMOCRATIC FUND DINNER WEDNESDAY

Large Outstate Delegations Expected Here; New York Mayor to Speak.

Large delegations of outstate Missouri Democrats are expected to increase attendance at the party's fund-raising dinner Wednesday night at Hotel Chase, Thomas J. Guilfoil, general chairman, said yesterday.

A large group is expected from Kansas City and Jackson county, led by William Sermon of Independence and County Clerk Ben Hordberg, leaders of the powerful Democratic coalition forces there. Guilfoil said large groups also are expected from Springfield and southeast Missouri.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York will be the principal speaker at the dinner, which is being held to raise funds to help pay a $35,000 Missouri assessment by the Democratic National Committee. The funds are for 1956 campaign expenses. Tickets for the dinner are $100 for sponsors and $25 for guests.

Other speakers will be United States Senators Stuart Symington and Thomas C. Hennings, Mayor Raymond R. Tucker and United States Representatives Leonor K. Sullivan of St. Louis and Clarence Cannon of Elsberry.

Mark R. Holloran, Democratic National Committeeman for Missouri, said interest in the dinner is increasing because Mayor Wagner has been mentioned as a possible Democratic nominee for Vice President next year, and because of the move of Missouri Democrats to support Symington as a "favorite son" candidate for President.

Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also will attend, and is expected to discuss campaign plans with Missouri party leaders during his visit here.

Syria Opposes Refugee Plan.

DAMASCUS, Dec. 10 (AP)—Syria is campaigning among the Arab states against any acceptance of Canada's recent offer to settle Palestinian Arab refugees who can qualify under certain work standards. Syria contends the refugees should be barred from resettlement outside the Arab world and should reclaim their old homes in what now is Israel.

WOMAN IN CANADA ASKS RUSSIAN CLERIC FOR HELP

OTTAWA, Dec. 10 (AP)—Archbishop Boris of the Russian Orthodox Church was met on arrival here from Toronto today by a sobbing woman. Mrs. Lydia Szarwarkoska of Ottawa confronted the archbishop on the station platform and asked that he intercede with Soviet authorities to permit her mother to come to Canada.

Mrs. Szarwarkoska sobbed out her story to the church leader in Russian and gave him a letter. The archbishop smiled and spoke to her in Russian. He took the letter and was later seen reading it in the hotel lobby.

Mrs. Szarwarkoska's father is dead and her mother, now 70, lives in that part of the U.S.S.R. which formerly belonged to Finland.

Boy Bags Albino Otter.

LEE, Me., Dec. 10 (UP)—Roger D. Lowell, 14 years old, a Lee Academy student, shot an albino otter——rarer than a white mink — yesterday. Fur buyer Kenneth Webster said white mink pelts sell for $1000 and an albino otter pelt might bring even more.

CLERGYMEN GIVE UP BACK-TO-WORK VOTE BY REQUEST

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP)—A committee of clergymen today called off a proposed "yes-or-no" back-to-work vote by striking union members at the transformer plant of Westinghouse Electric Corp.

At the same time a Mercer (Pa.) county judge limited picketing by Local 617 of the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical workers to 12 at any one gate.

The Sharon plant is one of 30 across the nation struck by the union since Oct. 17 in a dispute over wages, length of contract and company time studies.

A committee of religious leaders, headed by Msgr. James F. Murphy, a Catholic priest, and the Rev. Lloyd E. Gressle, an Episcopal rector, requested representatives of both sides to meet with them sometime next week. The proposed balloting was to have been on the return to work under the existing contract pending settlement of the dispute. The Rev. Mr. Gressle said the union had asked for postponement and consideration of a larger ballot. He added the vote had been deferred at "the request of many citizens."

TAX ORDERS NOT CONSTITUTIONAL, SUITS CONTEND

State's Right to Increase Assessments in Certain Counties Challenged.

Three test suits challenging the constitutionality of the recent increase in real estate assessments in St. Louis county were filed yesterday in circuit court at Clayton.

Wagner Electric Corp., McDonnell Aircraft Corp. and James A. Singer, a member of the County Council, are the plaintiffs. Their suits, filed separately, asked for a judicial review of the State Tax Commission's actions in seeking to equalize property assessments in Missouri.

One of the principal contentions was that the tax commission had no right to single out certain counties for assessment increases without ordering similar equalization measures in all the other counties.

The commission, setting out to equalize assessments throughout the state at approximately 30 per cent of fair market value, chose St. Louis county and 25 others as the first to be ordered to revise their assessments because these counties appeared to have the lowest assessments in the state. The suits contended that this was discriminatory and violated the state and federal constitutions.

85 Per Cent Increase.

Wagner Electric Corp., with headquarters at 6400 Plymouth avenue, Wellston, set out that its properties in Wellston, Hazelwood and Berkeley were assessed at $2,133,740 as of last Jan. 1. Moving to comply with the state commission's equalization order, the county board of equalization increased the assessment by 85 per cent to $3,864,190. The figure was cut to $3,413,980 after the company appealed to the state commission.

McDonnell Aircraft, with headquarters at Lambert-St. Louis Field, said its former assessment of $4,807,680 was hiked to $8,894,335, then reduced on appeal to $7,692,410.

Wagner argued that its assessment increase was "excessive, erroneous, unlawful, unfair, unequal, improper, arbitrary and capricious, unconstitutional, null and void" for the following reasons:

The equalization procedure was discriminatory.

Its properties, being industrial, are and were assessed at a higher ratio of true value than residential property.

Higher Than Like Property.

Its properties were assessed at a higher value per acre than similar property located in the same area.

The company was given no notice that its assessment was being increased.

The county board of equalization and the county clerk went beyond the order of the state commission by increasing assessments on real property by a greater amount than directed.

The challenge by McDonnell, while less detailed, was basically the same.

Wagner's suit asked the court to nullify the latest assessment as being in excess of 30 per cent of true value, to determine a proper assessment for tax purposes, and to order correction of the county assessor's records.

Singer set out that the assessment on his home at 53 Picardy lane, Ladue, was raised from $14,120 to $22,600, then changed to $20,120 following appeal to the state commission. Requesting a reduction to $15,750, he contended the property originally was assessed at a higher percentage of market value than surrounding properties, and the blanket increase "merely exaggerated and magnified existing inequalities."

The suits named as defendants the State Tax Commission, its three members, County Assessor P. G. Deuser and County Collector Willis W. Benson.

MOBS DAMAGE 236 BUSSES, STREETCARS OVER FARE-HIKE

MONTREAL, Dec. 10 (UP)—Police arraigned more than 100 demonstrators today after student rioters damaged 236 streetcars and busses in protesting against a fare increase.

About 10 persons were injured in the demonstration last night, the police said. Transportation officials estimated total loss at $102,000—$52,000 in damage to streetcars and busses, and $50,000 in lost revenue. A streetcar and bus dispatcher said 64 busses and 172 streetcars were damaged during the uprising.

Most of those arrested were university students and black leather-jacketed teen-agers who have been blamed for several unconnected fights and demonstrations in the last few years.

King Presents 4 Nobel Awards At Brilliant Stockholm Ceremony

3 Americans Among Winners, Two of Them Sharing Chemistry Honor—Peace Prize Presented in Oslo.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10 (AP)—Three Americans, a Swede and an Icelandic writer tonight received four of the world's loftiest academic prizes—the 1955 Nobel awards.

King Gustav handed the prizes to the four scientists and the author during a ceremony in Concert Hall.

The prizes totaled $147,000, 10 pounds of pure gold in medals and diplomas.

Each of the prizes was worth $36,720.

At another ceremony in Oslo today the Nobel peace prize—a check for $35,000, medal and diploma—was presented to Dr. G. J. van Heuven Goedhart, chief of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees.

Glittering Ceremony.

The setting for the Stockholm awards was a glittering ceremony. Members of the Swedish royal family, Swedish scientists and scholars who picked the winner, some Nobel winners of previous years and a select audience of 2000 participated.

The Nobel laureates were feted tonight at a banquet in Stockholm's town hall overlooking Lake Malaren. The Swedes spent $7000 on the banquet alone.

Dr. Vincent du Vigneaud, biochemist from Cornell University Medical College, who won the chemistry award for his work on two hormones that help in childbirth and regulate such vital organs as the kidneys.

Dr. Willis E. Lamb and Dr. R. Polykarp Kusch, who share the physics prize. Lamb teaches at Stanford University and Kusch at Columbia University. The prize committee said the two contributed to the world's knowledge of what goes on inside the atom. Their findings enabled scientists to calculate correctly some of the atom's component parts.

Dr. A. Hugo Thorell, a Swedish biochemist crippled in both legs by poliomyelitis won the prize for medicine. He made discoveries on the nature and action of the enzymes which help living cells burn oxygen.

At least half the people wept as they watched Dr. Thorell struggle step by step from the platform to receive his prize. The Nobel Foundation had provided a stairway with a special railing from the platform to the hall floor for him. Only once did he falter and find it necessary to seize the railing. The kindly King stepped forward to meet hm at the base of the stairway, but Thorell signaled him to move back.

The prize for literature went to Halldor Kiljan Laxness, novelist from Iceland. He once lived in the United States, where his novel "Independent People" was a best seller in 1946.

Norway Awards Peace Prize.

The peace prize is awarded by a committee picked by the Norwegian Storting (Parliament). The present award is for 1954—no 1955 winner has been named. The Dutch commissioner of the U.N. refugee office, Dr. Goedhart, has his headquarters in Geneva. He is an Amsterdam editor and former Justice Minister in Holland.

Dr. Goedhart has announced the prize money will go toward resettling refugee families, mainly Romanians and Hungarians, now huddled on the Greek island of Tinos.

Peace "is more than just absence of war," he said in his speech of acceptance. "It is rather a state in which no people of any country, in fact no group of any kind, lives in fear or need."

HADLEY HIGH TEACHER GETS WESTMINSTER COLLEGE POST

B. Randolph Pitts, Hadley High School teacher and basketball coach, has been appointed an admissions counselor for Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., Robert L. D. Davidson, president of the college, announced yesterday. He said Pitts will serve the Eastern Missouri and Illinois area.

Pitts received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Central College, Fayette, Mo., in 1942, and a Master of Arts degree from the University of Omaha in 1951. He has been at Hadley for three years.

He will assume his new work on a part-time basis until February, when he will be a full-time counselor. Pitts lives at 8000 January avenue, Ferguson.

TO RELIEVE
temporary and minor pains of arthritis, rheumatism, chest colds!

Medicated Vanishing Cream Speeds Fast, Long-lasting Relief to Sensitive Nerves at Point of Pain in Arthritis, Rheumatism, Back Pains, Sprains, Neuralgia, Chest Cold Discomforts.
If you're super-sensitive to the tortures of skeletal-muscle aches and pains, use Dencorub for immediate, blessed relief.
Dencorub is a modern medicated vanishing cream. No prolonged rubbing necessary! Dencorub acts fast . . . disappears into your skin almost instantly to fight deep-down pain—where you really hurt. Its soothing medication (1) acts directly to soothe sensitive nerve endings while, (2) it stimulates sluggish circulation at point of pain, raising temperature of tortured tissue with beneficial heat, to further relieve suffering of deep-down pain. Unlike other rubs, Dencorub is greaseless, stainless, has pleasant, "non-medicine" fragrance.

ADM. BYRD SAILS ON FINAL LEG OF ANTARCTIC TRIP

WELLINGTON, N.Z., Dec. 10 (INS)—R. Adm. Richard E. Byrd left New Zealand today on the final leg of his fifth trip to the Antarctic.

Byrd saluted thousands of cheering New Zealanders as he left Wellington harbor aboard the United States Icebreaker Glacier, but a freak accident marred the ceremonies.

A 14-year-old boy, Warwick Ellis, climbed a power pylon to watch the proceedings and accidentally touched a 66,000-volt cable. He was thrown 40 feet to the ground, but escaped with only severe burns and shock.

Heavy seas delayed the arrival of the main group of the task force commanded by R. Adm. George J. Dufek aboard the cargo ship Arneb.

L'Osservatore Romano Prints Its Account of the Pope's Vision

Vatican City Paper Reports Disclosure Displeased Him — Quotes Intimate of Pontiff on What He Said.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 10 (AP)—L'Osservatore Romano today quoted an intimate visitor as saying Pope Pius XII exclaimed on Dec. 2, 1954: "This morning I saw the Lord."

The Vatican city newspaper, breaking its silence on the report of the Pontiff's vision of Christ during his serious illness last winter, said the 79-year-old Pope was "displeased" that his experience had been revealed to the world.

"It is well to make clear that the Holy Father demonstrated himself to be displeased by the indiscretion, even though, doubtless, it was done with good intentions," said L'Osservatore.

The report of the Pope's vision was first published by the Milan weekly, Oggi, last month. The Vatican press office on Nov. 21 said the account was true. But the Vatican City newspaper had kept silent.

Explanation for Article.

Today, the paper said that because of "uncertainties and inexact suppositions" it was printing "the precise exposition of the truth, as we have received it from one of the very few devoted collaborators, who in that December, daily approached the Pontiff."

Vatican sources believed the informant was Msgr. Angelo dell'Acqua, Vatican substitute secretary of state.

L'Osservatore said this informant had written down an account of the Pontiff's experience as he had first heard it from him, and then put it in a sealed envelope with the notation outside, "To be opened after my death."

But, said the newspaper, after the Oggi story was published he felt it was his duty to bring his account to the attention of the Pontiff, who "confirmed the veracity of the notes." L'Osservatore said its informant had ordered the event thus under the heading of "Audience of Dec. 2, 1954."

"Having entered the chamber of the Holy Father at about 9 o'clock, Dec. 2, the visitor had scarcely formulated, genuflecting, his morning greeting, when, as the only response he heard the Holy Father exclaim, 'This morning I saw the Lord.'

"The Pontiff then added that on the preceding day he had heard a voice most clearly and distinctly announce: 'A vision will come.' That morning (of the vision) while he was repeating the invocation of 'anima Christi' (soul of Christ) — 'in hora mortis meae voca me' (in the hour of my death call me), the Lord had come and paused by him.

"In that moment His Holiness had immediately thought of the well-known passage of the gospel of St. John: 'Magister adest et vocat te' (The Teacher is present and calls thee) and, immediately, therefore, had added the following verse of the same 'anima Christi' prayer: 'Et jube me venire ad te' (Order me to come to you)."

Pope in High Spirits at Time.

The newspaper said its informant stated the Pope gave the account "with admirable presence and freshness of spirit." No one was present at the time of the reported vision, he said, though a few persons were in an adjoining room.

It was on that night that the Pope suffered the climax of his illness and many despaired of his life. However, he rapidly recovered thereafter.

L'Osservatore said the vision, as reported by its informant, "did not so much intend to signify the complete disappearance of the illness . . . as the invincible force needed to overcome the most anguished difficulty, which had not yet occurred."

FIRMS END GIFTS TO CUSTOMERS, GIVE TO HOSPITAL

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 10 (AP) — Automobile parts jobbers in middle Tennessee—feeling that gifts to customers at Christmas had become a promotion gimmick — decided to make their gift money really count.

So the group decided to pool what they normally would spend and contribute the fund to a worthwhile project.

Last night at a dinner, the jobbers presented $6000 to Vanderbilt Hospital's eye clinic in the name of the jobbers and their customers.

Dr. Richard Cannon, hospital director, told the group:

"It should be a comforting thought, not only at Christmastime, but in the days ahead, to know you may have helped another human being to see another Christmas."

The pooled contribution plan was originated by the Nashville jobbers last year, and this year it was expanded to include all of the midstate area. Almost all jobbers in the section participated.

The thing some feared most —a loss of business—never materialized. In fact, a spokesman for the group said several customers so thoroughly approve the plan that they offered to contribute to the fund themselves.

STORE MAN B. T. PETTY DIES

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 10 (AP)—B. T. Petty, 69-year-old Effingham (Ill.) department store owner and civic leader, died today at the Nashville Baptist Hospital. Petty and his wife were being flown to their Effingham home from winter quarters in Miami, Fla., after he had become ill there. The plane developed mechanical trouble in Nashville and Petty was taken to the hospital.

Petty also owned several apartment houses in Effingham. Survivors include his wife, three sons and one brother, all of Effingham.

INQUIRY IN TAX SCANDALS TO GO ON THIS WEEK

U.S. Grand Jury Ends 10-Day Recess Tomorrow — More Indictments Likely.

The federal grand jury investigating tax scandals in the Truman Administration will resume its inquiry this week, following a 10-day recess.

Tomorrow's opening session will be devoted to routine cases, prior to resumption of the income tax investigation, possibly on Tuesday.

Matthew J. Connelly, who was former President Truman's appointments secretary; Theron Lamar Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division, and Harry I. Schwimmer, a former Kansas City attorney now living in Puerto Rico, were indicted by the jury on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government, through interference in an income tax case.

Early Trial Planned.

Preliminary arrangements for the early trial of the three defendants have been made by Warren Olney III, assistant United States Attorney General in charge of the criminal division. The case was assigned to United States District Judge Rubey M. Hulen, but no date has been set.

Additional indictments of former federal officials are expected, after the grand jury hears evidence in 10 or more income tax cases in which the officials may have interfered, or were persuaded illegally to make favorable rulings.

Among the cases scheduled for re-examination are the purchase of the St. Louis Cardinals by Fred M. Saigh and the late Robert E. Hannegan, former Postmaster General, and the effort by a Democratic political clique to obtain $1,000,000 from the May Co., department store firm, in return for a favorable settlement of a tax claim. The May Co. flatly rejected the politicians proposal.

Hinges on Sachs Case.

The indictment of Connelly, Caudle and Schwimmer followed testimony about the case of Irving Sachs, St. Louis shoe broker. Caudle and Connelly are alleged to have delayed prosecution of Sachs, who eventually pleaded guilty of tax evasion and was fined $40,000. He was spared a prison term, due to ill-health.

Schwimmer, who was attorney for Sachs, who also indicted for perjury, resulting from his grand jury testimony. The indictment charged that $10,000 Schwimmer received from Sachs in 1949 was a fund to bribe and corrupt public officials. Schwimmer insisted the money was a legal fee.

Wyllys Newcomb, special assistant Attorney General, is in charge of presentation of the evidence to the grand jury. There have been indications the inquiry may return to Omaha, where the investigation began last winter.

CONVICTED RED LEAVES U.S. VOLUNTARILY FOR ENGLAND

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—Claudia Jones, one of 10 convicted second-string Communist leaders, voluntarily left the country yesterday.

She sailed for England on the liner Queen Elizabeth and a statement issued in her behalf said she would continue her "struggle" there.

Miss Jones, Negro, born in Trinidad, was released from federal prison Oct. 23 after serving a year and a day on her conviction on charges of conspiracy to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the United States Government. On Nov. 17 she agreed to leave the country voluntarily after immigration officials sought to deport her.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP) —The Government has deported Claudia Scholnick, convicted second-string Communist, to her native England.

COLLECTION OF DOLLS ON DISPLAY AT LIBRARY

A collection of dolls, some representing historical and fictional characters and some from Europe, is on display in the main hall of the Central Public Library, 1301 Olive street, and will remain until Jan. 7, it was announced yesterday.

Included are handmade dolls representing George and Martha Washington, Romeo and Juliet, Alice in Wonderland and Calypso dancers of the West Indies. One doll represents a Siamese dancer, and was copied from a Christmas card photograph from Thailand.

Other dolls have come from Italy, Spain, Holland, Greece and Hungary. One is a redwood bark doll from California, and another is a handmade cornhusk doll from the Ozarks.

MEREDITH PROPERTY HERE INVENTORIED AT $442,930

Value of property in St. Louis owned by the late Miss Florence T. Meredith of East St. Louis was set at $442,930 in an inventory filed yesterday in probate court here.

The property consisted of seven apartment houses, ranging in size from 12 to 36 units. Miss Meredith, who lived at 709 State street, East St. Louis, died of cancer last July 3 at the age of 52.

In her will she directed that the bulk of her estate be used for the construction and maintenance of a home for aged persons in St. Clair county. No estimate of the value of her entire estate was made available, pending inventories of real estate and other assets in Illinois.

HEADS ADVISORY BOARD FOR COR JESU ACADEMY

Dr. Andrew J. Signorelli, 1260 Lay road, Richmond Heights, has been named chairman of a lay advisory board for the establishment of Cor Jesu Academy, it has been announced.

The academy, scheduled to open next fall, will be a four-year Catholic high school for girls. It will be operated by the Missionary Zelatrices of the Sacred Heart, who have conducted Sacred Heart Villa, a convent and day nursery at 2108 Macklind avenue, where the academy will be located.

Other board members include Eugene J. Mackey, Arthur C. Benassi, Joseph D. Murphy, Carl Sciuto, Charles S. Preston, and Louis B. Laughi. Additional members will be named later.

FAURE ORDERS DELAY IN ALGERIA ELECTIONS

French Premier Rules Unrest Would Make Accurate Ballot Impossible.

PARIS, Dec. 10 (AP)—Premier Faure tonight ordered an indefinite delay for elections in Algeria. He ruled that civil unrest and rebellion would make a calm and accurate ballot impossible at this time in the four Algerian departments (counties).

Faure acted after consulting judicial authorities on whether Algeria would have to vote Jan. 2 when the rest of the country elects its members of a new National Assembly.

Algeria sends only 30 deputies to the Assembly. The Algerian seats presumably will be filled through special elections later.

Wire to Governor.

Faure wired Governor General Jacques Soustelle the Government's decision and told him to stop all election preparations.

Judicial authorities cited the argument of "force majeure" (circumstances beyond control) to justify the delay. They said also that a vote under present conditions might lead to serious danger for public order. For more than a year now, Algerian nationalists have been waging a guerrilla warfare against the French and every week Frenchmen and pro-French Moslems are targets for attacks, many of them fatal. Bombings are frequent.

A factor in Faure's decision was the Algerian Assembly, a Franch and Moslem body with no real power except to rule on local spending. It had voted 67-10 for a resolution against the Jan. 2 elections and refused funds to operate the polls.

Political Leaders Interned.

The Algerian Assembly argued that so many political leaders are interned, so many political organizations dissolved and so many newspapers suppressed that a fair vote would be impossible. The majority included both Frenchmen and Moslems who had planned to embarrass the government further by not putting up any candidates.

Faure's chief political rival, former Premier Pierre Mendes-France, agreed that Algerian elections would be impossible under current conditions.

The government action came as a last-minute registration rush promised to push the number of eligible voters beyond the 30,000,000 mark.

U.S. TO GIVE GRAIN TO CHURCHES FOR OVERSEAS RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP) —The Government is preparing to release thousands of tons of surplus grain to church agencies for overseas relief, officials disclosed today.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson probably will announce the action next week.

Agriculture Department officials said Benson was taking a keen personal interest in the project as a result of urgent appeals from religious leaders to "share our surplus" with less fortunate people abroad.

Benson has discretionary authority, under Public Law 480 which Congress passed last year, to release all types of Government-owned farm surpluses to voluntary relief agencies for free distribution to the needy overseas.

A delegation representing Protestant, Catholic and Jewish relief agencies urged Benson at a meeting here last month to release 250,000 tons of wheat, 100,000 tons of corn products and 80,000 tons of rice to fight the threat of "actual starvation" in many countries.

PATROLMAN IS SUSPENDED IN DISPUTE WITH SERGEANT

Patrolman Leo Webb, a member of the Police Department since 1949, has been suspended by Capt. Elias Hoagland, commanding officer of the Ruskin Avenue district, for disrespect to a superior officer, it was announced yesterday. The charges will be turned over to the Police Board for investigation and further action.

Webb, who lives at 7311 Bulwer avenue, was suspended Friday after allegedly using abusive language to Sgt. George Kern at rollcall the previous day.

Sgt. Kern had sent an officer to investigate an automobile parked in front of the Bulwer avenue address which lacked state license plates. The officer had been told the auto belonged to Webb. Sgt. Kern was questioning Webb about the automobile when the incident occurred.

FIRM GIVES ST. LOUIS U. CHEMISTRY UNIT $10,400

A grant of $10,400 has been received by St. Louis University from E. I. DuPont de Nemours and Co. for general uses of the university's Institute for the Teaching of Chemistry, it was announced yesterday.

Included in the grant is provision for two fellowships for recent college graduates working for a master's degree in the teaching of chemistry; 16 fellowships to enable chemistry teachers at high schools and junior colleges to attend the six-week course to be held by the institute next summer, and provision for special lectures and seminaries on chemical topics.

Students and teachers interested in applying for the fellowships were requested to contact Dr. T. A. Ashford, director of the institute at the university.

AUTOMOBILE BREAKS WINDOW OF EAST ST. LOUIS STORE

A hardware store at 2500 State street, East St. Louis, was damaged yesterday when an automobile driven by Mrs. Clara DeMoulin, Greenville, Ill., went out of control after being struck by another car and broke the plate glass window of the establishment, police reported.

Driver of the other automobile was Robert Shafer, living in the 1700 block of North Fifty-seventh street, Washington Park, police said.

Mrs. DeMoulin said the green light was in her favor as she made a turn from Twenty-fifth street into State. Shafer contended the light was in his favor.

HECKER NEW MEMBER OF JUDICIAL COMMISSION

Harold F. Hecker, 5926 Clemens avenue, was the winner over George W. Curran, 2738 Utah street, in a run-off election among lawyers to choose a new member of the Eighth Judicial Circuit Commission, it was announced yesterday.

Hecker received 328 votes to Curran's 302 in the run-off, a tabulation by the circuit clerk's office showed. Hecker succeeds J. Fred Hoffmeister, whose term expires this month.

The commission, established under the state's non-partisan court plan, submits names of three nominees to the Governor whenever a vacancy occurs in the circuit court here.

BENSON ORDERS FARM-RETAIL PRICE SURVEY

He Says Some Margins Are Too Great — Grower Gets Only 41 Cents of Food Dollar.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP) —Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson today ordered a stepped-up study to determine whether middlemen are taking an excessive bite out of the consumer's dollar before it reaches the farmer.

Benson said he had discussed "this vital problem" with President Eisenhower and both were agreed it must be determined "whether or not prices paid by consumers contain improper or excessive marketing charges and profits."

Benson ordered his department experts to push a study of the spread between marketing and farm production costs.

"We know that some margins are too great and not justified," Benson said, "although we recognize that in some instances processors and distributors have increasing costs which they must pay."

Food Prices Up.

While farmers' prices for food products have been declining, Benson said, average retail prices of food have actually risen slightly.

"The failure of retail food prices as a whole to reflect the decline in farm food prices during the past year is recognized by the department as a real obstacle to a solution of the farm surplus problem," he said.

Benson said farmers are entitled to receive "the very maximum" for their products through efficient marketing service.

The department recently estimated that civilian consumers in this country paid a total of $46,300,000,000 for farm food products in 1955. The farmers received $18,300,000,000 of this, it estimated, and 28 billion dollars went for marketin gcosts.

This marketing bill was described by the department as 44 per cent higher than the 1947-49 average.

Fall in Farm Prices.

The department said, for instance, that prices received by farmers for food products in the third quarter of 1955 averaged 7 per cent less than in the same period in 1954.

But, because of the increase in marketing charges, less than half of this decline was passed on to consumers.

The increase in marketing charges while farm prices were falling has reduced the farmer's share of the consumer's food dollar, the department said. This share was estimated at 41 cents for 1955 compared with 43 cents in 1954. And, the department added, in the year ahead the farmer's share may average about 40 cents.

The department said the marketing bill has increased substantially in recent years as a result of rising costs and expansion in the volume of products marketed.

Russians End Visit to Kashmir And Support India's Claim to It

Bulganin and Khrushchev Charge Britain With Dividing Subcontinent—Pakistan Officials React Angrily.

NEW DELHI, Dec. 10 (UP)— Soviet Premier Bulganin and Communist party chief Nikita S. Khrushchev today wound up a two-day visit to the Himalayan state of Kashmir, which is in dispute between India and Pakistan.

In their speeches, the visitors have asserted that Kashmir unquestionably belongs to India. They also charged Britain with dividing the Indian subcontinent so as to separate Moslem Pakistan from Hindu India.

Reaction in Pakistan was angry. A Foreign Office spokesman in Karachi, the capital, said the mere fact of the visit to the disputed area was "not friendly"—aside from the pro-Indian speeches.

Pakistan Warning.

It was disclosed that before the Russians went to Kashmir, the Pakistani Foreign Office notified the Soviet embassy in Karachi that a visit there would imply that Russia was taking sides in the dispute.

Pakistan protested also against the proposed visit of the Russians to Afghanistan, next stop on their tour. Pakistan and Afghanistan are feuling over border territory.

Khrushchev said today that India was divided into two parts in the interest of "an imperialist power"—Britain. He backed up Bulganin in saying that "Kashmir is part of the Indian republic."

He said that Pakistan was one of the first adherents to the Baghdad treaty, which provides for "bases on the borders of the Soviet Union," and added:

"We say frankly that building such bases worries us."

Khrushchev earlier sided with India in its dispute with Portugal over Goa and two other small Portuguese possessions on India's west coast. This led to a joint statement by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Portuguese Foreign Minister Paulo Cunha, who was visiting Washington, referring to the Portuguese holdings as "provinces." Indian opinion was inflamed by Dulles's action.

Crowd Dispersed.

An angry crowd of about 75 persons shouted anti-Dulles slogans outside the American embassy here today but dispersed after police guards stood their ground.

Three members of the big Soviet delegation meanwhile started business talks with key Indian officials in New Delhi.

Andrei A. Gromyko, deputy foreign minister; Pavelov Lumykin, deputy minister of foreign trade, and V. B. Khlebnikov, deputy minister for the steel industry, were the Soviet negotiators.

They discussed a proposed deal for 700,000 tons of Russian steel, the construction of a big steel plant, the setting up of Indian plants for the separation of manganese and chrome ore, and aid by Soviet experts in Indian diamond mining.

Bulganin and Indian Prime Minister Nehru are to include economic questions in a joint communique to be issued next week, it is understood.

Indian informants said that no spectacular trade agreements are likely. Any Indian purchases of captial goods from Russia will be made only if prices are right, informants said.

EDMUND WUERPEL PORTRAIT TO BE PRESENTED THURSDAY

Presentation of a portrait of Edmund H. Wuerpel, director emeritus of the Washington University School of Fine Arts, will be made to the university Thursday at 4 p.m. in the art school office in Bixby Hall. The picture was painted in 1928 by J. Scott MacNutt, St. Louis portrait artist. Wuerpel retired as director of the school in 1938 and now lives in Wellesley Hills, Mass.

The painting, which will hang in Bixby Hall, will be presented by Henry F. Chadeayne, portrait committee chairman, to Kenneth Hudson, dean of the School of Fine Arts. Funds for purchase of the picture were raised among Wuerpel's former students, friends and other admirers.

Wuerpel, who was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of fine arts in 1935, served the university for 53 years. After study in the university's fine arts, engineering and manual training schools, he joined the faculty as instructor in 1894. He became director of the fine arts school in 1905 and after leaving that post remained active as supervisor of the university's art collection and as lecturer until 1947. Dr. Wuerpel was 89 years old last May 13.

D.M. DOZER, FIRED U.S. HISTORIAN, ORDERED REHIRED

Charges Not Specific Enough, Civil Service Commission Tells State Department.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP) —The Civil Service Commission today ordered Donald M. Dozer, ousted State Department historian, put back in his job.

A commission letter to Dozer which he made public without comment said the State Department had failed to be specific enough in all its charges against him. Also the letter found Dozer never had been told the reasons for his dismissal last Oct. 5.

Dozer said in October he was fired from his $11,000-a-year job because of clashes with holdover Democrats in the department. He said these clashes occurred over publishing records of secret World War II meetings such as those of Yalta, Cairo and Tehran.

Dozer said the letter he received today from the commission indicated the State Department has seven days in which to appeal from the commission's ruling.

He said he intends to show up for work at the department Monday.

The letter to Dozer was signed by E. A. Dunton, chief of the appeals examining office, Bureau of Departmental Operations, Civil Service Commission.

Dunton's letter, in response to Dozer's appeal of his firing, did not go into the merits of the case. It dealt purely with Dozer's contention of procedural defects and upheld him on that point.

It ordered him reinstated as of Oct. 5, the day he was fired. This means he is entitled to pay for the period he did not work.

The State Department charged in its Oct. 4 notice of dismissal that (1) the quality of Dozer's work was below standard, (2) he made false and misleading statements about how his work was coming along, and (3) his conduct was highly disruptive and incompatible with good working conditions.

The commission's letter said charges (1) and (3) were not specific enough. It said charge number (2) did meet the standard of being legally specific enough.

The commission also said that Dozer's dismissal notice, while accusing him of not satisfactorily refuting the charges against him, made "no finding that he is guilty of one or any of them. . . ."

Dozer was working on the Cairo-Tehran conference papers when he was dismissed. Bryton Barron, who had helped put together the recently released Yalta conference papers while sharing an office with Dozer, was allowed to retire on pension as of the end of this year. Barron has been on leave until Jan. 1. Dozer is 50 years old.

Family With 39 Pets, a Surplus, Wants to Give Away Some Cats

There are 30 assorted cats, seven ring-tailed Capuchin monkeys, a lame crow named Humphrey and a wounded pigeon, Mable, living at 7007 Pershing avenue, University City, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Norman J. Sutter and their daughter, Gloria.

The Sutters would like to part with some of their cats at this time, free of charge, Mrs. Sutter told the Post-Dispatch yesterday. She inserted a classified advertisement in today's paper, pointing out that cats make ideal Christmas gifts.

All the cats, Mrs. Sutter explained, are descendents of Sheba, a black Persian, and Bandito, a tabby, which were befriended and brought home from Missouri Stables several years ago by Miss Gloria Sutter, now 18 years old and a freshman at Washington University.

The monkey colony was established by her sister, Miss Joyce Ann Sutter, 23, who saw a pair in a pet shop and felt sorry for them. Boys of the neighborhood, knowing the Sutter girls' fondness for pets, brought in the birds to be nursed back to health.

Now Gloria is in college and Joyce Ann has moved to Louisiana, but the menagerie remains. At present the Capuchins are on a sunporch, the crow is in the kitchen, the pigeon is in the dining room, and the cats, most of them, have cellar billets.

Here lately, Mrs. Sutter said, bills for prepared cat food have been running about $2 a day.

JOHN M. SANFORD FUNERAL, RETIRED RAILROAD AGENT

Funeral services for John McDonald Sanford, a general agent for Great Northern Railroad Co. and a 50-year employee, were held yesterday at the Lupton undertaking establishment, 7233 Delmar boulevard, University City. Burial was in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Sanford, who retired in 1938, died Thursday of infirmities. He was 94 years old. His father, James, was founder of Sanford Academy in St. Charles.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, Mrs. F. D. McDonald of Ladue and three grandchildren.

Planters Nut Co. Founder Dies.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP)—Mario Peruzzi Sr., president and co-founder of the Planters Nut and Chocolate Co., died today at Mercy Hospital where he had been admitted Nov. 1. He was 80 years old.

FOUND HANGED IN BASEMENT

Harry Weiner, a shoe maker, was found hanged yesterday from a pipe in the basement of an apartment building in which he lived at 815A Westgate avenue, University City.

The body was discovered by his daughter, Mrs. Rose Roodman, who went to investigate when her father did not return from the basement. She told police her father had been despondent. He was 60 years old.

JAMES G. BLAINE DIES; G.O.P. LEADER

Railroad Officer Long Active in Politics of City, County and State.

James G. Blaine, general attorney and commercial counsel for the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad for the last 17 years, died of a heart attack yesterday at his home on Wild Horse Creek road, Chesterfield. He was 58 years old.

Long active in politics, Mr. Blaine served for many years before moving to St. Louis county as Republican committeeman in St. Louis's Twenty-fourth ward. From 1929 to 1933 he was a St. Louis police judge. In 1944 he was his party's unsuccessful candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Missouri.

He entered the employ of the railroad in 1913 as office boy in the law department and had remained in that department ever since. In 1922 he passed the state bar examination.

Surviving are his wife, the former Katherine Kolkmeyer of Jefferson City; a 5-year-old daughter, Virginia Mae; a 1-year-old son, John Gregory, and a son by a previous marriage, James B. Blaine, 6209 Southland avenue.

POLICE HEADS, SHENKER HEARD IN LAWYERS' INQUIRY

Police Chief Jeremiah O'Connell, Capt. John Buck of Central District and Morris A. Shenker, an attorney, appeared by invitation yesterday before a committee of the Lawyers Association named to investigate the administration of criminal justice in St. Louis.

The committee has been meeting at least once a week to hear witnesses in closed sessions, since its appointment last month.

Details of witnesses's statements are not made public. The committee is expected to make a report on its findings following completion of the investigation.

One phase of the investigation is to determine whether persons accused of crimes are brought to trial promptly and their constitutional rights protected. J. Edward Gragg is chairman of the 14-member committee.

PRISONER FOUND DEAD IN CELL

A man arrested Friday night by East St. Louis police and booked as drunk and disorderly was found dead in his cell yesterday. He lacked identifying papers, was 65 to 70 years old, and about six feet tall. He had had his right leg amputated just below the hip.

Officers arrested him in an alley. Dr. C. C. Kane, St. Clair county coroner, said death was caused by a heart ailment, hardening of the arteries and acute alcoholism.

LOSING ON PAY SHIFT, POSTAL CLERKS SAY

Summerfield's Figuring Is Costing Each $9.12, Protests Union Spokesman.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP) —The National Federation of Post Office Clerks protested today that Postmaster General Summerfield is depriving 250,000 postal workers of $9.12 each.

E. C. Hallbeck, for the AFL-CIO union, explained:

Summerfield ordered a new salary structure in effect Dec. 3. The old arrangement ended Nov. 30. This left Dec. 1 and 2 uncovered and the department ordered that employes be paid for those two days an amount equal to 2-365ths of annual pay.

Hallbeck said this fraction was wrong, since no one works 365 days a year. He said it worked out so that regular clerks and carriers will lose about 57 cents an hour for each of the two eight-hour days—or $9.12.

L. Rohe Walter, special assistant to the Postmaster General, said: "Mr. Hallbeck is continuing his political attacks on the Postmaster General. The date . . . was announced nearly six months ago and Mr. Hallbeck has waited until this last moment to make these ridiculous statements. . . . The department has asked the Comptroller General for a ruling on this matter."

Peron Admiral Found Dead.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 10 (AP)—Adm. Carlos Julian Martinez, retired, who rose to command of Argentine naval operations in the Peron dictatorship, was found shot dead in his home today. Official sources said he committed suicide. He was 63 years old.

RUNS FOR AID, TIRES, IS FROZEN TO DEATH

Woman Dies Trying to Get Help for Brother Stricken in Farm Yard.

MARSHALL, Minn., Dec. 10 (AP)—Exhausted on a hurried attempt to get aid for her stricken brother, a 65-year-old farm woman died in a snow-covered field in 10-below-zero weather. A neighbor found the frozen body of Miss Bertha Setering in his field yesterday.

Her brother, John, 63, later was found on his farm yard where he lay all night in the severe weather after suffering a stroke.

Authorities believe Setering collapsed Thursday evening. When his sister was unable to get him into the house, she started out across fields to a neighbor's farm about a mile and a half away.

Miss Setering didn't take time to put on heavy clothes. She wore no coat or gloves but had put on a scarf.

Tracks in the snow showed Miss Setering had stumbled, then sprawled for some distance. Sheriff Erwin L. Johnson said the woman apparently became too exhausted to go on and froze to death. The body was found a quarter mile from the Setering home.

The brother's plight was not discovered until authorities went to the Setering farm to notify him of his sister's death. The farmer was found lying in the snow. He was unable to talk.

Setering suffered exposure and frostbite. He was taken to a Hendricks (Minn.) hospital in serious condition, his left side paralyzed.

U.S. FLYING AID TO FLOOD VICTIMS IN WEST PAKISTAN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP)—The International Co-operation Administration announced today the Government is rushing medical supplies, blankets and warm clothing by air to aid the victims of the recent floods in West Pakistan.

It said the first of the planes carrying the emergency supplies already has arrived in Pakistan, and that 11 others will follow within a few days.

ACCUSED OF STEALING $375 FROM FIRM EMPLOYING HIM

Ernest E. Green, of the 5100 block of Cates avenue, was charged in a warrant issued yesterday by Magistrate Leslie T. Lewis at Clayton with the theft of $375 from the Yates Oldsmobile Co. used car lot, 7518 Manchester boulevard, Maplewood, where he was employed as a porter.

Green was held in St. Louis county jail when he failed to make bond of $3500. A preliminary hearing will be held Thursday before Lewis.

Green, a Negro, told Maplewood police he had a key to the building and entered it Monday to clean up. He saw the money in a cash box, took it and then broke a rear window to make it look lige a burglary, police quoted him as saying. Green was given a lie detector test at St. Louis Police Heaquarters. He denied the theft when the results showed he was lying, but confessed later.

More Study on 2 Snake River Projects Required, He Writes Senator Morse.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 — Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay expects to miss a Dec. 23 deadline for approval or disapproval of two proposed private dams on the Middle Snake river, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

He has attributed the department's delay in acting on the controversial project to a need for further study of its effects on fishery and minerals resources.

The Interior Department and other interested agencies have until Dec. 23 to comment on an application by the Pacific Northwest Power Co. pending before the Federal Power Commission. The new company, formed by four private utility firms, seeks a permit to build Mountain Sheep and Pleasant Valley dams, just downstream from the better known Hell's Canyon site, between Idaho and Oregon.

Replies to Morse.

McKay told of the delay in answer to a letter of inquiry from Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon.

"The department will be unable to furnish its report to the commission by the due date," McKay wrote, "since investigations of the effects of the proposed project on fishery and minerals resources will not be completed in sufficient time."

Federal dams at the two sites have been envisaged in long-range plans of the department's Bureau of Reclamation. In March 1954, the bureau's regional office at Boise, Idaho, recommended that federal dams be started there. The office said continuing studies of effects on fisheries and minerals would be kept up in the meantime.

Private and public proposals both provide for storage of about the same amount of water, 530,000 acre-feet. The amount of land to be inundated is the principal consideration in studying the effects of a dam on fisheries and minerals.

No Word on Revenue Loss.

McKay's letter to Morse made no mention of the department's loss of power revenue if private dams are built on the two sites. The Bureau of Reclamation uses revenues from sale of power it produces to help pay for irrigation projects.

When McKay withdrew the department's objections to private development of the Hell's Canyon reach of the same river, in 1953, he mentioned Mountain Sheep as one of the remaining sites at which the Reclamation Bureau could earn needed power revenues.

The Bureau now has decided, however, to hold up any further action on Mountain Sheep and Pleasant Valley in deference to the private syndicate's application.

This became known in answer to an inquiry last September by Morse's fellow Oregon Democrat, Senator Richard L. Neuberger.

E. G. Nielsen, then acting commissioner of reclamation, replied that a joint report on Snake river development by the bureau and the Army Corps of Engineers had been sent to Congress last June 1, "without recommendation as to the Mountain Sheep and Pleasant Valley projects."

"The Department of the Interior has taken no further action in respect to these latter two projects," Nielsen wrote, "pending developments relative to the issuance of a preliminary permit by the Federal Power Commission to the Pacific Northwest Power Co. covering these sites."

Petitions to intervene in the Federal Power Commission case and oppose the private dam proposal have been filed by the National Hell's Canyon Association and the Northwest Public Power Association.

An investigation last September by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, revealed a close relationship between officials of Ebasco Services, Inc., and the new Pacific Northwest Power Co.

BARRY COMMONER TO GIVE THIRD OF 8 SCIENCE LECTURES

Barry Commoner, professor of plant physiology at Washington University, will address a group of St. Louis area high school science teachers at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Rebstock Hall on the campus.

His talk will be the third in a series of eight lectures entitled "Frontiers of Science." Commoner will speak on "The Chemistry of Inheritance" and will tell of recent experiments that shed light on the cellular mechanism of inheritance.

Science teachers in public, private and parochial schools in the St. Louis area were invited to attend the lectures, sponsored by the St. Louis Public Schools Advisory Committee.

25 PCT. OF $40,000 GOAL GIVEN TO 'TREE OF LIGHTS'

Slightly more than 25 per cent of the $40,000 goal sought by the Salvation Army in its annual "Tree of Lights" fund-raising drive has been obtained so far, it was announced yesterday.

Donations total $10,700 and 107 lights have been lit on the tree, which is at Eighth and Olive streets. About 75 civic and service clubs in the city and county are assisting in the raising of funds.

AMVETS PRESENT TV SET TO INSTITUTE FOR THE DEAF

A television set with a 24-inch screen was presented last night to St. Joseph Institute for the Deaf, 1483 Eighty-second boulevard, by the National Service Foundation of Amvets, Washington, D.C., as part of the foundation's nation-wide Christmas program.

Individual toys and games for each of the 92 children at the institute were also given by the foundation. Other gifts distributed at the party included 15 presents made by physical-therapy students in Veterans' Administration classes here.

RESERVE TRAINING CENTER ARMY EQUIPMENT DISPLAY

The latest equipment of the United States Army will be displayed for the armed forces reserves and civilian agencies and industries at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Army Reserve Training Center, 4350 South Kingshighway, it was announced yesterday.

A four-man Fifth Army Quartermaster team will demonstrate the equipment, including an insulated boot for winter combat, wet-cold and dry-cold weather uniforms, a special uniform for rocket handlers in guided missile units and several new combat ration units.

POWER CUT OFF, TEAMWORK SAVES MAN IN IRON LUNG

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 10 (UP)—A mother and a team of neighbors and policemen worked an emergency hand pump to save the life of an iron lung victim during a power cutoff.

Gordon Baltzegar's iron lung stopped working when power company workers shut off electricity yesterday while a house in the neighborhood was being moved.

Mrs. Sarah Baltzegar, mother of the 29-year-old muscular dystrophy victim, rushed to call a neighbor and the two women operated the hand pump while a third called police.

Officers helped the women run the pump for 20 minutes until power company workers, unaware of Baltzegar's plight, finally restored the power.

"He was conscious all the while and kept telling us everything was all right and to keep calm," Mrs. Baltzegar said.

FBI AGENTS SEIZE MAN HERE WANTED IN BURGLARY IN EAST

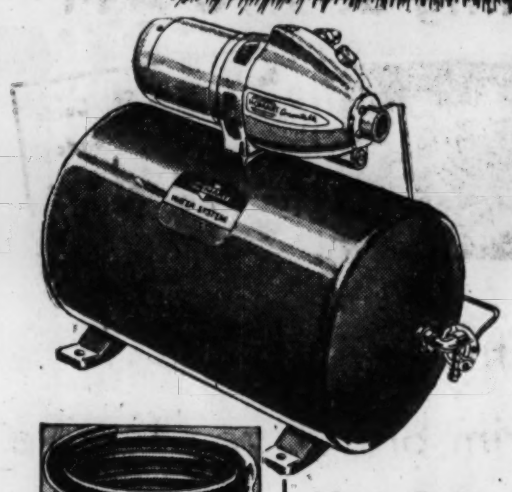

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested Charles M. Donovan, of the 5800 block of Romaine place, Friday night on Broadway near Market street on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution, J. Earl Milnes, special agent in charge of the FBI here, announced yesterday.

Milnes said Donovan is wanted by New York authorities in connection with a burglary of an automobile agency on Staten Island, N.Y., June 1, 1954.

A former prize fighter, Donovan had recently been employed as a bouncer at an East St. Louis night club, Milnes said. He was sentenced in New York in 1951 on a charge of felonious assault.

SAIGH 'TO SLUG IT OUT' WITH U.S. ON TAX SETTLEMENT

Court Hearing Jan. 11 on Federal Motion to Set Aside Negotiated Agreement.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—The Internal Revenue Service, which is contending that Fred M. Saigh of St. Louis filed a false and fraudulent affidavit in negotiating a tax settlement, will have a hearing in Tax Court Jan. 11 on its motion to set aside the stipulated settlement.

In an amended motion filed Friday, the Government said Saigh, former president of the St. Louis Cardinals, signed an affidavit containing four material misstatements upon which the Internal Revenue Service relied in agreeing to settle for $276,328 a tax claim totaling $623,267, including penalties and interest.

Saigh's Dramatic Denial.

Saigh, emphatically denying the allegations, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday:

"There has been no affidavit since the birth of Christ or the beginning of the Bible that is more truthful than the affidavit I filed. I'll stand or die by it.

"My tax case has had an unusual treatment for five and one-half years and has been treated like no other tax case. I wonder how much the people expect a citizen to put up with."

Saigh, who served six months of a 15-month prison sentence in 1953 for income tax evasion, declared he was "ready to slug it out" with the Government in the present controversy.

The affidavit signed by Saigh July 19, 1954, related to a $350,000 note given to the late Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, when Saigh and Hannegan bought the baseball club in 1947.

Point in Dispute.

Saigh stated the note was a primary obligation of National Sports, Inc., formed by him and Hannegan to buy the Cardinals.

However, the Government maintained the note was a personal debt of the two men and they should have paid income taxes on the $350,000 when the baseball club later paid the note. The payment was in the nature of a dividend, the Internal Revenue Service held.

Some aspects of Saigh's purchase of the Cardinals, which he and Hannegan acquired for $4,060,800, are expected to be examined by the federal grand jury in St. Louis which is investigating tax scandals in the Truman Administration.

Saigh has told the Post-Dispatch a "gimmick" in the tax laws made the transaction possible.

HOUSE WILL SEEK TAX CUT QUICKLY, GEORGE ASSERTS

He Expects Democrats to Try to Get Jump on Republicans — Senate Delay Likely.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP) Senator Walter F. George (Dem.), Georgia, predicted today the Democratic-controlled House will move immediately toward a reduction in individual income taxes when Congress reconvenes next month. But he said it may be some time befor ethe Senate gets around to considering the issue.

George, a veteran member of the Senate Finance Committee, said in a telephone interview from Vienna, Ga., that he feels sentiment for tax cuts will be so strong among returning members of Congress that the House Ways and Means Commtitee will act quickly. That is where all tax bills must originate.

Although there have been indications that President Eisenhower might point the way to a future tax cut in his State of the Union message in January, Administration officials generally have indicated they want to hold off on any specific recommendations until there are clearer indications that the budget will be balanced.

Expects Democrats to Act.

George, who has said budget balancing is at hand, indicated that he expects the Democrats to get the jump on the Administration in tax cutting.

"I am under the impression there will be an immediate move in the House and that action will be taken there rather promptly," George said. He added he thinks the move will have the full approval of House Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas.

Because of the time lag involved in hearings and house action on the floor, George said the Senate may not get around to considering the tax issue for some time. He said this lapse of time will provide more information on whether the budget is going to be balanced.

"I hope we can increase the individual income tax exemption from $100 to at least $700," George said. "That will benefit the low-income group most but it will help everybody. Also, I think there should be some adjustment in the rates on middle income brackets."

Middle Bracket Range.

The middle brackets generally are regarded as those ranging from $6000 up to about $50,000 a year. It has been George's contention that many small business men in this bracket have been hard hit and need tax relief.

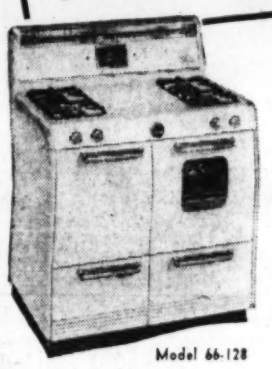

George has opposed any reduction in over-all corporation rates, which now range to a maximum of 52 per cent. His proposed $100 increase in personal exemptions has been estimated by Treasury officials to cost about 2½ billion dollars in revenue.

Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey has predicted the budget will be balanced this spring, despite previous Budget Bureau estimates of a $1,700,000,000 deficit on June 30, 1956.

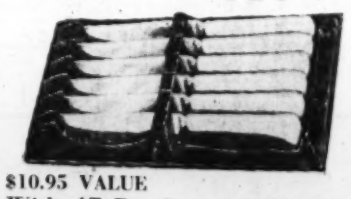

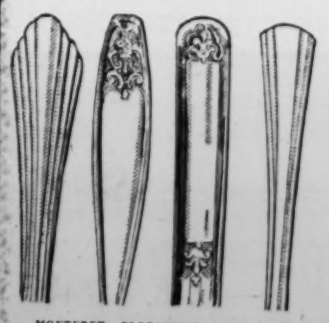

Humphrey has indicated he may favor a tax cut. He said he expects Mr. Eisenhower to speak out on the question in his State of the Union message.

URGES SPECIAL CURRICULA FOR THE GIFTED STUDENTS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 10 (AP)—A college president said last night it is a waste of intelligence to keep gifted students on the level of average students.

Those with more intelligence need special curricula, and Westminster College of Fulton plans such courses, President Robert L. D. Davidson said.

"This is not a snobbish attitude," Dr. Davidson told about 50 alumni and their wives at a meeting. "We are simply wasting intelligence when we keep them on the same level as less-gifted students."

Rising Business Forecast For 1956 by 15 Key Industries

Most of Them Foresee Higher Prices, and All Say Employment Will Stay at High Level.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP) Fifteen key industry groups today forecast rising business next year, almost unanimously. If their guesses are good, 1956 will be easily the biggest sales and production year in history.

Officials of national trade associations, covering the fields of manufacturing, building, food, trade and transport, presented their findings at a symposium arranged by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Most foresaw a rising price trend. All forecast high level employment. Some expected lower profits because of rising wage and other costs.

Reports Summed Up.

Summing up their reports, Emerson P. Schmidt, the chamber's director of economic research, offered his own opinion that the industry forecasts of automobile production and home building were "a little too optimistic." He concluded:

"Next year may very well be the best year for total economic activity. . . .

"But we now have an economy operating at very nearly full capacity. The rate of growth in 1956 cannot be as great as in 1955."

New automobile dealers may not sell as many cars next year as the industry is producing this year, according to James F. Cousins, comptroller of the National Automobile Dealers Association. Output this year is estimated at nearly 8,000,000, and Cousins figured there may be a 5 per cent decline next year.

Sales may be between 7,500,000 and 8,000,000, Cousins said, but: "If we use sound credit and advertising policies, which the N.A.D.A. is trying to encourage, we don't believe we can dispose of as many cars in 1956 as this year."

Schmidt foresaw lower auto sales and housing starts largely because, he said, both industries have been buoyed on a wave of credit expansion "which can not be maintained."

Disagreement Voiced.

He met some disagreement from the National Association of Home Builders represented by John M. Dickerman, executive director. Dickerman forecast 1,200,000 to 1,250,000 housing starts, whereas Schmidt foresaw about 1,100,000. This year's total will be about 1,300,000.

Several of the industry reports supported Schmidt's view that the consumer will meet slightly higher prices — "perhaps one or two percentage points at the most," the chamber economist predicted.

Schmidt expressed assurance that "prices will not skyrocket" but pointed to shortages of metals, building materials, and in some areas, skilled labor.

He said: "It would be surprising indeed if these scarcities did not reflect themselves in higher prices."

Appraisal by Industries.

The industry-by-industry appraisals included:

Retail and wholesale: The National Retail Dry Goods Association said most store men expect sales gains of 5 per cent in the first half of next year, while many foresee improvement of "as much as 10 per cent."

"Prices will creep upward in department stores next year," said N.R.D.G.A.'s executive vice president, J. Gordon Dakins. Profits should improve also, he said.

The National Association of Retail Grocers was "very optimistic," foreseeing larger food purchases. Food prices should be stable next year; this year they have been running one and one-fourth per cent below 1954. The association's secretary-manager, Mrs. Marie Kiefer, added:

"Independent retailers will build at least 10,000 new stores during the coming year. This will be approximately 2700 more stores than they constructed and opened in 1955."

Looks for Downturn.

The National Retail Furniture Association reported through its vice president, R. E. Carter, that "business is wonderful" but 1956 probably will run second to 1955 in sales volume.

Retail sales have been running 15 per cent ahead of 1954, Carter said, and orders placed with factories are now 20 to 25 per cent ahead. However, he said, "wage and price leapfrogging" at the factory level are shoving prices up and retailers are "definitely concerned about profits."

The auto dealers' spokesman, Cousins, noted that new car models are only slightly changed from last year, a factor which he said may prevent sales from achieving the rosy forecasts from Detroit. Cousins said there is one factor that does not lend itself to economic analysis: "The determination of automobile manufacturers to obtain record levels of production."

Manufacturing: A $500,000,000 industry-wide gain in sales was forecast by the Radio-Electronics-Television Manufacturers Association. The industry this year is experiencing a record five and a half billion dollars sales total, 10 per cent above 1954, as well as "improved profits."

Prices began rising toward the end of the year, said the association's executive vice president, James D. Secrest. Nevertheless, he said retail sales of TV sets will total 7,700,000, a record, and the outlook for 1956 is "even more encouraging."

Scrap Iron and Steel.

The scrap iron and steel industry, considered a business barometer because it reflects the state of the basic iron and steel industry, foresees activity at least equal to if not slightly exceeding the booming rate of the last half-year, said Edwin C. Barringer, executive vice president of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, Inc.

The National Electrical Manufacturers Association forecast that its shipments next year "will top 1955 output by 7½ per cent." Its spokesman, Joseph F. Miller, managing director, said 1955 activity has set a record, 10 per cent above 1954.

Transportation: The trucking industry is "generally optimistic" and expects higher business volume next year, said John V. Lawrence, managing director of the American Trucking Associations, Inc.

A railroad spokesman, Col. Robert S. Henry, vice president of the Association of American Railroads, said "we hope and believe our volume will continue good in 1956."

Food and Agriculture: The National Retail Farm Equipment Association, representing 15,000 dealers directly dependent on farm prosperity, reported this year's sales might represent a new high and next year's volume should be about the same.

Paul M. Mulliken, executive director, said he has observed "a reborn confidence" among the dealers. Sales increased by 17 to 20 per cent this year from last, despite falling farm income and price rises on tractors and other heavy farming equipment.

Food Prices.

Food prices are likely to remain stable in 1956, said John A. Logan, president of the National Association of Food Chains. The industry expects an average increase of 4.3 per cent in sales next year.

Logan said food chain executives "hope and believe" that the long slide in farm prices "has about reached its limit."

A slight increase in meat sales—possibly 1 per cent above this year, but still a record—was foreseen for 1956 by Dr. Wesley Hardenbergh, president of the American Meat Institute.

Construction: The Associated General Contractors of America predicted total construction activity next year exceeding the 44-billion-dollar level which has been forecast officially by the Commerce Department.

William Dooley Jr., speaking for the general contractors, predicted that non-residential construction will run 9 to 10 per cent above this year.

Dickerman, speaking for the home builders, said housing construction will run as high next year "as the money supply permits."

Stephen Slipher, Washington manager for the United States Savings and Loan League, predicted "there will be ample mortgage funds available."

Drummond Heads Gridiron Club

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP)—Roscoe Drummond, columnist of the New York Herald Tribune whose (articles are carried in the Post-Dispatch), today was elected president of the Gridiron Club for 1956. The organization of newspaper correspondents chose Marquis Childs of the Post-Dispatch as vice president.

RED CROSS SEEKING FOUR PERSONS FOR RELATIVES

Four persons are being sought by the St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross at the request of relatives in Germany, Yugoslavia and the United States, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Alma Magda Berta Hartleb is being sought by her sister, Alice Hartleb Doss, Berlin, Germany; Joseph Fischer is being sought by his sister, Jozefina Cerovecki, Kutina, Yugoslavia; Karl Heinrich August Brenner is being sought by his grandniece, Anni Brenner, Feldbergen, Germany; Mrs. Charles O'Keefe, the former Goldie Whitt, is being sought by her sister, Mrs. Samuel Wires, Lincoln Park, Mich.

Red Cross officials said usual procedures have failed to locate the four persons.

EGYPT TO DISCLOSE NEW CONSTITUTION NEXT MONTH

CAIRO, Dec. 10 (AP)—Egyptian Prime Minister Gamal Abdel Nasser told reporters today he would announce a new constitution Jan. 16.

Nasser made the statement to newspaper men. "The constitution will aim at realizing the goals of the revolution," Nasser said.

The press predicted a new parliament would be established.

STATE TRAFFIC DEATH RECORD FORECAST

A prediction that 1955 would be a record year for traffic fatalities in Missouri, exceeding the 1941 total of 1028, was made here yesterday by Col. Hugh H. Waggoner, superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

Col. Waggoner addressed an all-day traffic court conference sponsored by the Municipal Judges Association of Greater St. Louis. About 50 persons attended the meeting at University City's City Hall.

Already, Col. Waggoner told the judges and traffic officials, the number of traffic deaths in Missouri this year has reached 971, only three less than the total for last year.

He called on judges to work toward modernization of the Missouri motor vehicle code. He suggested that a maximum speed law be established, with a limit of 65 miles an hour in daytime and 55 at night on the open highway.

"We must learn we cannot operate as we did in Model T days," he declared. "We are badly in need of a maximum speed law, because the increased horsepower of the modern automobile is a death trap in the hands of the wrong individual."

Another speaker was Robert L. Donigan of Chicago, counsel for the Northwestern University Traffic Institute. He said the Missouri Legislature should take steps to remedy the lack of uniformity in traffic laws.

Donigan pointed out that in St. Louis and Kansas City a police officer may make an arrest if he has reasonable grounds for belief a misdemeanor has been committed. In outstate Missouri, he said, an officer may not make an arrest in a misdemeanor case without a warrant, unless he saw the alleged offense.

Rush Limbaugh of Cape Girardeau, president of the Missouri Bar Association, said standard rules of proceduce for municipal courts are being drafted by a committee of municiple judges appointed by the State Supreme Court in July 1954 and should be ready soon.

Dr. Robert B. H. Gradwohl, director of the St. Louis police laboratory, discussed chemical tests for intoxication.

TWO STATE OFFICIALS TO FILE CANDIDACIES

Secretary of State Toberman Seeks Re-election; M. E. Morris Out for Treasurer.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10 —Two Democratic officials announced today they will be candidates for state elective offices next year.

Secretary of State Walter H. Toberman of St. Louis said he intends to seek re-nomination for a third consecutive term. State Revenue Director M. E. Morris, a former Trenton banker, announced he will be a candidate for State Treasurer, the office he held from 1949 to 1953.

Both said they will file their formal declarations of candidacy Monday.

Toberman, 76 years old, served 10 years as a member of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen, and a short term as circuit clerk there. He was first elected secretary of state in 1948, after having been selected by the Democratic State Committee to fill a vacancy on the ticket that year. He was re-elected in 1952.

Morris, 55, was the state's first director of revenue, having been appointed to the post in 1946 to organize the new revenue department created under the 1945 State Constitution. He was elected state treasurer in 1948, but was ineligible to seek re-election under a constitutional provision. He was re-appointed revenue director by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly in 1953.

Morris, who lives in Jefferson City, said in a statement that he has indorsed a recommendation of the state's "Little Hoover" commission that the state constitution and laws be amended to permit the state to earn interest on its idle funds.

MAY CO. PLANS STORE IN REDONDO BEACH, CALIF.

Plans for construction of a 340,000-square-foot department store in Redondo Beach, Calif., were announced yesterday by the May Department Stores Co. Redondo Beach is in the Los Angeles suburban area.

Tom May, chief executive of the company's Los Angeles stores, said the new South Bay shopping center was selected as the site for the store because "we are convinced that this will soon be the hub of retail activity in a shopping area with more than 600,000 people."

Headquarters of the May Department Stores is in St. Louis. The company operates the Famous-Barr stores here and stores in other cities.

GETS DIVORCE AND ALIMONY FROM AUGUST C. ERKER JR.

Mrs. Edith Heath Erker, Chesterfield, obtained a divorce Friday in the court of Circuit Judge Raymond E. LaDriere at Clayton from August C. Erker Jr., president of Erker Catering Co., Inc. She charged general indignities.

They were married June 13, 1940, at Union, Mo., and separated last Sept. 8, the petition stated. Erker filed a general denial of the charges, but did not contest the suit. Mrs. Erker received custody of their four children, ranging in age from 8 to 14 years.

A stipulation filed with the court specifies that Mrs. Erker is to receive $320 monthly alimony, and $90 a month for the support of each child. The father also is required to pay for the education of the children. Erker lives at 8066 Clayton road, Richmond Heights.

WOMAN AMONG SIX CHOSEN FOR AMERICAN ACADEMY

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)— The election of six new members to the American Academy of Arts and Letters has given this select society its third woman member and the youngest member in its history.

Painter Andrew Wyeth, 33, yesterday became the academy's youngest member ever. Poet Marianne Moore is the group's third woman.

Others elected to the academy, membership of which is limited to 50, were playwright Maxwell Anderson, author Lewis Mumford, painter Edward Hopper and composer Walter Piston.

MOTIVE UNCLEAR IN KILLING OF GIRL AT COLLEGE

Body, With 4 Bullet Wounds, Found on University of Omaha Campus.

OMAHA, Dec. 10 (AP)—Apparent lack of motive for the murder of a 20-year-old girl, whose body was found on the University of Omaha campus today, mystified police. They said neither robbery nor rape led to the crime, but they did not completely rule out the possibility of a sex attack.

The victim was Carolyn Marie Nevins, junior honor student and part-time employe at the university library. Her body, with four bullet wounds, was discovered about 4:10 a.m. by a bakery truck driver and detectives who had been summoned by the girl's father when she failed to reach home.

Detectives said there was no sign of a struggle, but the girl's clothing had been disarranged. They said the girl apparently had crawled about 150 feet before she died. Her shoes and head scarf were found about 40 feet from the body.

One bullet had passed through her upper left arm, another struck her in the left arm and entered her lung. A third struck her in the breast bone and a fourth in the left shoulder. She had a bruise over one eye and powder burns, indicating the shots had been fired at close range.

Acting County Coroner George Sullivan said there was no evidence she had been criminally assaulted.

Partly Covered by Snow.

The body was partly covered by an early morning snow and lay about 200 feet from Dodge street, a main east-west thoroughfare. The university is in one of Omaha's best residential sections.

Arthur J. Nevins, Omaha insurance executive, said he had planned to meet his daughter at the university at 10 p.m. and take her home. He was delayed nearly an hour, he said, and when he arrived, she was gone. He retraced his route and then, thinking she had taken a ride with friends, returned home.

Police said the girl's purse was still on her arm and she had two dimes, apparently intended for bus fare, clutched in her hand. The purse contained a check for $4.10, some small change and personal items.

She had won superior ratings in a debate tournament Friday afternoon and worked from 8:30 to 10 p.m. at the library which is in the main college building.

Seen By Instructor.

Among the last persons to see Miss Nevins alive was Frank Paulsen, an English instructor. He said he was leaving the building about 10:55 p.m. and was getting into his car when he saw Miss Nevins sitting at the bus stop. He recognized her and offered her a ride but she declined.

Douglas county Deputy Sheriff Jack Knudtson speculated that the shooting might not have taken place at the spot where the body was found. He said several persons had reported hearing shots in a neighborhood not far from the girl's home and as late as 1 a.m. two couples driving past the spot reported they did not see the body lying at the edge of the driveway.

SELF-GOVERNMENT BIGGEST ISSUE IN U.N., BALDWIN SAYS

The question of self-government for colonial peoples is the biggest issue in the current United Nations assembly, overshadowing even the conflict between Communism and the West, Roger N. Baldwin said here yesterday.

Baldwin, chairman of the International League for the Rights of Man, a consultant agency to the United Nations, said failure of America to take an uncompromising stand for self-government has lost it friends and influence among neutral nations.

Director of the American Civil Liberties Union from 1917 to 1950, Baldwin speaks on "Can Human Rights Be Universal" at 11 a.m. today at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard. He was chairman of Washington University's sociology department from 1906 to 1909.

120 PATIENTS MOVED TO NEW LUTHERAN HOSPITAL BUILDING

About 120 patients were moved yesterday from the older building of Lutheran Hospital, 2639 Miami street, to a new $4,200,000 building, recently completed. The moving, which began at noon, continued for about seven hours.

Preparation for the work was begun several weeks ago by specially-organized groups of nurses who were trained for the task by Mrs. Grace Lieberstein, assistant director of nurses.

The first patient to be transferred was Theodore H. Wehrenberg, former president of the board of directors of the institution, who has been confined to the hospital following a stroke last Nov. 13.

OBSERVATORY VISIT DELAYED

Overcast skies last night forced a postponement of visitors' night at the Washington University Observatory until tonight, Mrs. Eugene Stephens, associate professor of astronomy, announced.

Tickets for last night's visit will be honored tonight. The affair is from 8 to 10 o'clock at the observatory on the roof of Crow Hall on the campus.

CHILDREN'S BOOKMOBILES USE GROWING IN COUNTY

The increased population of St. Louis county has resulted in higher circulation figures for the children's bookmobiles of the St. Louis County Library, Mrs. Howard R. Becker, library chief of children's service, said yesterday.

Last month teachers and children borrowed 73,516 books from the seven juvenile bookmobiles, an increase of 4331 volumes over November 1954, Mrs. Becker said. This figure was achieved although there were five holidays during the period this year.

Teachers and mothers borrowed 1503 children's records during the last month, Mrs. Becker added. Enrollment in the 146 elementary schools served by the bookmobiles has doubled in the last five years, she said.

3 PERSONS BURNED IN 2 SEPARATE FIRES

Man Smoking in Bed and One Using Gasoline Seriously Hurt.

Three persons were burned, two of them seriously, in two separate fires last night, police reported.

Oscar Poore, 1020A Park avenue, suffered burns over most of his body when he fell asleep in bed with a lighted cigarette and the bed caught fire.

Poore, 30 years old, was taken from the room by firemen and was reported in serious condition at City Hospital. The fire, which was confined to the bedroom, caused damage estimated at $200 to the building and $100 to the contents.

Fred F. Schmalz, 5315 North Kingshighway, suffered serious burns of the face, body and legs when gasoline with which he was cleaning paint brushes was ignited by the pilot light of a basement furnace at his home.

Mrs. Schmalz, who ran down the basement stairs when she heard her husband's cries for help, suffered a burned wrist in an attempt to beat the flames from his clothing.

Schmalz, 63 years old, was taken to DePaul Hospital. His wife was treated and released.

Firemen were told Schmalz was standing about four feet from the furnace when the gasoline ignited. The fire was limited to the basement area and caused $500 damage to the building and $100 damage to the contents.

Bullfighter Bonarillo Dies.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 10 (AP)—Francisco Bonard, dean of bullfighters who fought under the name of Bonarillo, died here last night. He was 84 years old. He was one of the great figures of Spain's bull rings when he performed late in the last century.

SHANGHAI CATHOLIC BISHOP HELD AS 'HEAD OF SPY RING'

LONDON, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Moscow radio reported today that Red China has arrested as "head of a spy ring" Msgr. Kung Pin-mei, Roman Catholic Bishop of Shanghai.

The bishop is one of the best-known leaders of the Chinese Roman Catholic Church. The Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, made public the news of his arrest on Oct. 7 when it announced that along with him at least 20 other Roman Catholic priests and between 200 and 300 Roman Catholic laymen were arrested in a new anti-church campaign in Shanghai. The Vatican paper said the roundup took place Sept. 8-9.

The Moscow radio said captured documents revealed connections of the alleged spy ring with Chiang Kai-shek and "certain foreign powers."

Husband Held After Questioning — Bodies Found in Auto in Florida.

MELBOURNE, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP) — Two men are to be questioned in addition to the husband in the murder of Mrs. Patricia Van Eeghen, 29 years old, and her daughter, Phyllis, 7, Police Chief John Thomas said tonight.

The husband, Phillp van Eeghen, 30, was questioned for 11 hours and then held in jail here while Sheriff H. T. Williams of Brevard County followed leads on the other two.

Chief Thomas said only the husband is in custody. One of the other men lives in Melbourne and police have talked with him briefly, Thomas said. Virtually nothing is known about the third man, he added.

"There was another killing like this one several years ago outside of Florida," said Thomas while discussing the additional suspects. "I can't elaborate because it would interfere with the case."

The bodies of Mrs. Van Eeghen and her daughter were found early yesterday in a car parked across the street from an undertaking establishment. The mother was slumped on the floor under the dashboard, while the child had been placed in the trunk of the car.

Mrs. Van Eeghen had been killed with a sharp instrument which Chief Thomas believed was a hatchet. The child died of a heavy blow from a blunt instrument, possibly the back end of a hatchet.

Mrs. Van Eeghen's body was covered with a blanket which her husband thought she had placed in the car several days ago. One shoe, missing for a time, was found today under the seat of the car.

Both mother and daughter were fully clothed. Chief Thomas said a medical examination showed neither had been raped.

Van Eeghen told police he had not seen his family since Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Van Eeghen worked for an insurance company in Cocoa, Fla., and had gone to a nearby town Thursday on business, he said. He was to have met them at a movie Thursday night but decided to go home instead, police quoted him as saying. When he woke up yesterday morning they were not there, he said.

He called police to report her missing. A few minutes later an officer found the bodies in the parked car.

Van Eeghen's brother, Fred, a St. Louis, (Mo.), insurance man, flew here today and visited his brother in jail. Later he employed a private detective, Peter A. Gianotoulos, to investigate for the family.

The Van Eeghens came to Melbourne three years ago from Niagara Falls, Ont., Canada. Another child, Roger, 4, fell while playing in August 1954, and died a few hours later. Death was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Van Eeghen once lived in Tampa. He left there early in World War II to go to Canada to join the army. His father, a retired oil man from St. Louis, lived at St. Petersburg until his death in 1945.

Mrs. Van Eeghen's maiden name was Patricia Ann Hawthorne, and she was born in Feifshire, Scotland. She was a member of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, a women's army auxiliary similar to American Wacs, and was sent to Canada where she was discharged.

She met Van Eeghen, a Canadian artilleryman. They were married in 1947 at Fort St. Johns, British Columbia.

Van Eeghen Lived Here as Boy; Father a Shell Executive.

Philip van Eeghen lived in St. Louis as a boy. His father was the late Leslie van Eeghen, who was vice president in charge of marketing for Shell Petroleum Corp. here in the period 1929-1936. Fred van Eeghen, Philip's brother, is an insurance man and lives at 1128 Mayer avenue, University City.

Leslie van Eeghen was born in London and was a British subject when he came to St. Louis. The family lived at 7103 Westmoreland avenue, University City, and at 4949 West Pine boulevard. The elder van Eeghen was divorced from Philip's mother and married again here in 1935. He died about eight years ago after moving to Florida.

DREWES WINS ART GUILD'S $60 PRINT PURCHASE AWARD

Werner Drewes, member of the Washington University School of Fine Arts faculty, has won the 1955 Artists' Guild print purchase prize of $60 for his "Gravel Pit," a color woodcut, the guild announced last night. The show, which includes crafts and drawings as well as prints, will open today at 3 p.m. at the guild galleries, 812 Union boulevard.

The $40 second prize in prints went to Stanley Tasker, Drewes's colleague. Noel Waite, People's Art Center teacher, took the $35 prize in crafts. Second, $15, was awarded to Alexandra Korsakoff-Galston, supervisor of art at Maryville College.

Theo Meyer, a 1950 graduate of the Washington University School of Fine Arts, was given a $15 third prize in prints. Fourth in prints, also $15, was awarded to Nancy Ingram Nooter of Town and Country. The show, comprising 61 objects chosen by three out-of-town jurors from 313 entries of artists living within 50 miles of St. Louis, will close Dec. 22.

TIME EXTENDED FOR FREE POLIO SHOTS AT CENTERS

Extension of time in which children registered at the city's five health centers may receive their first Salk polio vaccine shots free of charge was announced yesterday by Health Commissioner J. Earl Smith.

The program began Monday and was to have ended yesterday, but it will be continued for another week, Dr. Smith said. About 19,000 children are eligible for the shots. A total of 4358 children received the shots last week.

The vaccine shots will be administered at the health centers at Kingshighway and Aldine avenue, at Thirteenth street and Wyoming avenue, and Grand and Park avenue.

Because of space limitations at the Laclede and Leffingwell center, children registered there were to report to the Vashon Community Center, Market street and Compton avenue. A similar problem exists at the Cass avenue health center, and children registered there were to go to a temporary center in the Pruitt housing project, 2347 O'Fallon avenue.

8 MAGSAYSAY MEN, CRITIC ELECTED IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, Dec. 10 (UP)—The commission on elections today proclaimed eight candidates of President Magsaysay's Nacionalista party and one Independent Nacionalista as winners in the Nov. 8 senatorial elections.

The Independent was Senator Claro M. Recto, severest critic of Magsaysay's foreign policy who ran as "guest" candidate of the opposition Liberal party.

The other winners were Pacita Madrigal Warns, Lorenzo Sumulong, Quitin Paredes, Francisco Rodrigo, Pedro Sabido, Domacao Alonto, Decoroso Rosales and Roseller Lim.

Canadian Production Rises.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Bureau of Statistics reports Canada's growing economy is rising this year by a predicted $2,200,000,000 to an all-time high of $26,200,000,000 in goods and services produced.

SHOT, KILLED IN DISPUTE AT CAFE; WOMAN ARRESTED

Theodore Ash, 1119A North Fourteenth street, was shot and killed yesterday in an affray in the Lincoln Cafe, 2008 Franklin avenue. Mrs. Sallie Hughes, 2007A rear Franklin, was booked by police suspected of homicide.

Witnesses told police that Ash, a Negro, was asleep on a table in the rear of the cafe and was awakened when someone threw water on him. More water was thrown at Ash as he was being led from the place, some of it splashing on Mrs. Hughes. A fight ensued.

Mrs. Hughes, a Negro, told police she shot Ash after he struck her in the altercation. She fled and was arrested later at her home.

MRS. LYND WALKLING DIES

Mrs. Lynd Walkling, a former St. Louisan, died of a heart attack yesterday at a hospital in Miami, Fla. She had lived there since leaving here seven years ago. She was 67 years old.

Mrs. Walkling, the former Carolyn Manley, is survived by her husband, a contractor and builder; three sisters, Miss Helen Manley, director of health, physical education and safety in the University City public schools; Mrs. Louis Kirchoff, St. Petersburg, Fla., and Mrs. Agnes Hughes, Kansas City, and a brother, John D. Manley, Comfort, Tex. The funeral will be in Miami.

Quadruplets Born in Russia.

MOSCOW, Dec. 10 (AP)—Tass, the Soviet news agency, said today Mrs. Yuliya Vasilyevna of Kazan gave birth to quadruplets about two weeks ago. The report said all four—three girls and a boy—are doing well.

Critics of Immigration Law Hope for Revisions To Cure Old Injustices McCarran-Walter Act, Like Earlier Statute, Is Based on 'Race' Concept—Senate Democrats Lead Move for Changes—Administration May Lend Support to Redeem Campaign Pledge.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.

SENATE Democrats are taking the leadership in a drive to revise the nation's immigration law which, if expert testimony is accepted, is a shameful statute which is costing us valued friendship abroad, holding us up to contempt in the eyes of free mankind and causing uncalled-for distress and dissension at home. The target of the Senate Democrats is the so-called McCarran-Walter Immigration and Citizenship Law, enacted in 1952 over the vigorous veto of President Truman.

Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, Texas Democrat, has placed revision of the law on his list of 13 legislative projects for action when Congress convenes in January.

A SENATE SUBCOMMITTEE, headed by Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr., Missouri Democrat, recently has conducted hearings lending impetus to the immigration reform movement.

And this week, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., a leading spokesman of the Eisenhower Administration, indicated sympathy toward changes in the statute, a sign interpreted by political observers as meaning that with another presidential election coming up, the Republicans may now be getting busy in the interest of fulfilling pledges on this subject which Gen. Eisenhower enunciated freely in the 1952 campaign.

Moreover, three liberal Republican Senators—Irving M. Ives of New York, Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, and Clifford P. Case of New Jersey—are sponsoring a bill which will ease some of the extraordinary rigidity of the present statute while not removing, however, that section found most offensive to nations whose friendship we should be cultivating.

This section is the one which sets quotas for prospective immigrants not on the basis of individual qualification but upon national origin, a system which, in effect, informs many races and nationalities that the United States considers them inferior to Anglo-Saxons.

This quota system is based on the 1920 census of the United States and what it shows was the racial stock of American population at that time. In its operation, Great Britain, for example, has an annual quota of 65,000. Germany has a yearly quota of 25,814. But, by comparison, the law affronts Italy with a quota of only 5645, Greece with one of 308, and Spain with one of 250.

In 1951, Great Britain used only 15,000 of its 65,000 quota. In 1953, the number of visas granted was 24,000. For the same years, 15,000 and 20,000 Germans, respectively, were given visas under the German quota of 25,814.

In contrast with the Britons and Germans, Italians, Greeks and Spaniards exhausted their quotas quickly and left long lines of eager applicants for admission to the United States behind them.

To compound inadequacies of the quota arrangement, the unused portion of the British and German allocations, as well as those of such nations as Sweden, Switzerland and The Netherlands simply went to waste when they might have been redistributed among the clamoring nations without increasing the total influx of immigrants contemplated in the law.

THE MAJOR ASSAULT on the McCarran-Walter Act is a booming omnibus bill sponsored by Senator Herbert H. Lehman, New York, 10 other Democrats and Senator William Langer, North Dakota Republican. Lehman's bill would junk the existing legislation altogether and substitute a new law. It would throw out the national origins quota system and throw the gates open to qualified applicants for admission, regardless of nationality, but would place a ceiling equivalent to one-sixth of 1 per cent of the present population of the United States.

That would mean the admission of about 251,000 aliens for permanent residence annually, as compared with approximately 155,000 if all the quotas under the present system were used up.

Lehman and his colleagues propose minimum quotas for all nations and a system of safeguards against any nation having more than its fair share of selectees.

It is unlikely that Congress will be willing to follow Lehman's lead and discard the national origins quota system.

However, there will be strong support among Democrats and Republicans alike to gear the quotas to the 1950 census of the United States as a matter of being realistic. While this would not do away with the stigma attaching to certain southeastern European and Asian nations under the present system, it would increase their individual quotas.

In addition, there will be support for a provision under which unused portions of quotas could be reassigned.

Basing admissions on the 1950 census would boost the total number of visas which could be issued annually from the present 155,000 to 211,000, an insubstantial increase to be assimilated when measured against the growth of the American population from 105,710,000 in 1920 to more than 162,000,000 today.

Using the 1950 census as the base would, for example, increase Italy's quota from the present 5645 to 12,000, Greece's from 308 to 676, and Spain's from 250 to 408.

At the same time, of course, the proposed new system would shoot Great Britain's quota from 65,361 to 87,319 and that of Germany from 25,000 to 36,000. However, these quotas probably would not be used because those wishing to leave England and Northern Ireland are being lured to other parts of the British Commonwealth, such as Australia, New Zealand, Canada and Rhodesia, while Germans who are free to move are being kept at home by an improving economy and the efforts of their government to hang on to manpower to improve it further.

Quotas have never existed for the Western Hemisphere nations, a policy reflecting the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine and the latter-day good-neighbor policy enunciated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Except for Canadians, literacy tests and strong barriers against persons likely to become public charges have held down immigration to the United States from the other hemisphere countries.

ANOTHER AREA in which Democrats believe they have a chance for improvement is in streamlining the present procedure under which both the State Department and the Justice Department dabble in immigration matters.

A person seeking a visa obtains it from a consular functionary abroad, who is a State Department official. But final determination on his admissability is by the Immigration Service, which is under the Justice Department.

In addition, the Democrats would strip American consuls and their subordinates of their arbitrary authority to deny visas, and establish a review board to hear appeals against adverse decisions capriciously arrived at.

The massive McCarran-Walter Act contains thousands of administrative criteria for admissions which, in the view of Democrats, fly in the face of common sense, but which are so rigidly written that administrators are handcuffed against discretionary action even in the best interest of the United States.

It is reported that when the McCarran-Walter Act was being contrived, immigration authorities traced every case of immigration litigation which they had lost over the previous 30 years and rewrote the law so they would have won them.

Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee who are studying the McCarran-Walter Act under Senator Harley M. Kilgore, West Virginia Democrat, and committee chairman, are confronted with a remarkable reflection of the national temper feeding on wartime and postwar suspicion of foreigners. In the 1917-1924 period, when the immigration laws as now constituted were in the formative stage, foreigners, especially southeastern Europeans, were equated with Bolsheviks, Anarchists and Syndicalists. Today they are equated with Communists.

The earliest immigration laws were for the protection of immigrants against being brought over in ships where they might be jammed in like cattle or die from disease or lack of food.

Then came the qualitative restrictions against criminals and assorted undesirables. This legislation was followed by the quantitative embargoes.

Concern over a possible influx of coolie labor near the end of the nineteenth century led to passage of the Chinese Exclusion Act. President Theodore Roosevelt later executed a "gentlemen's agreement" with the Emperor of Japan to keep his Japanese subjects from entering the United States. The Chinese Exclusion Act was amended to bar immigration from India.

IN ITS EVOLUTION, immigration legislation has run into four presidential vetoes. Woodrow Wilson vetoed an immigration law passed in 1917 on the ground it contained an impossible literacy test. Other vetoes were by Taft, Cleveland and Truman. In 1920, Congress, prodded by fears of a rush of postwar immigrants from eastern and south-central Europe, passed a national origins quota system based on the 1890 census.

In 1924, when nationalism still was running high and the Ku Klux Klan was fanning the fires of suspicion of southern Europeans, largely because of their religion, the national origin quota system was tightened up. For some unexplained reason, the 1920 census was used as the base, instead of 1890.

In the 1932 presidential election the Republican party boasted in its platform that the G.O.P. was responsible for this law.

In 1952, under sponsorship of the late Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada and Representative Francis E. Walter of Pennsylvania, both Democrats, by the way, the 1924 law and numerous amendments were "codified," which in the view of Democratic and Republican critics alike, meant that McCarran and Walter simply made the law more obnoxious to proponents of the simple rules of justice than it had been previously. The quota system and the 1920 census base remained intact.

Dulles's Goa Statement Is Seen as Boon to Russians

Nehru Had Called Portuguese Enclave an 'Acid Test' of Colonialism—Indian Masses Are Now Said to Feel U.S. Against Them, Soviets on Their Side.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.

THE now-celebrated joint communique issued Dec. 2 by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and the visiting Portuguese Minister of Foreign Affairs, Paulo Cunha, was another blow to sensitive United States relations with India and a gratuitous bit of assistance to the Communists. It is clear the United States has gained nothing and perhaps lost much by the statement which, Dulles has explained, was intended to criticize the flamboyant anti-West charges made by the Soviet Russian leaders during their tour of India.

But the effect, partly because of the wording of the communique, was to arouse Indians who concluded the United States was siding with Portugal over the issue of Goa, a tiny Portuguese possession on India's west coast. Hitherto this country had maintained neutrality in the dispute, and that policy officially has not been changed.

GOA, with its sister enclaves of Damao and Diu, is the last bit of European-controlled territory on the Indian subcontinent, the French and the British having withdrawn. Indians, understandably emotional with respect to colonialism, have said they will not tolerate continued presence of the Portuguese in Goa; the Portuguese have said they will fight to retain their "province."

Regardless of the merits of the dispute, the feelings of the Indians are about as intense as would be those of Americans if an Asian or European power held a port city, such as Galveston, without United States consent. Whether these feelings were taken into account when the communique was prepared is not known; Dulles said on Tuesday when he was asked at a press conference whether he had any idea the communique would "stir up the tempest that it did in India":

"Well, we did give it very careful consideration. The communique was not lightly issued."

It may be a matter of opinion whether Dulles blundered; certainly his explanation did not satisfy everyone. In New Delhi, Senator Ralph E. Flanders (Rep.), Vermont, who presumably was in touch with the United States Embassy, said issuance of the communique was "beyond comprehension."

The statement unquestionably was embarrassing to Ambassador John Sherman Cooper, former Republican Senator from Kentucky, who has been doing a quiet but highly effective job. Cooper has been assuring Indians of United States neutrality in the Goa dispute. Some Indians thought Cooper's rising influence might be permanently impaired.

Indian public opinion was particularly incensed over the use of the words "Portuguese provinces" to refer to territories such as Goa. Portugal claims Goa is a province whose citizens have equal rights with residents of Lisbon. The Indians think of Goa as a colony retained by armed force.

In reply to a question by the Post-Dispatch at his Tuesday news conference, Dulles explained his concept of "province," saying that as far as he knew all the world regards Goa as a Portuguese province. This set off another storm in India, drawing from the pro-American Times of India the comment that the second statement was a mistake "it is difficult to conceive of even the village idiot perpetrating."

There are indications the State Department regarded the communique as nothing more than a routine conclusion to an official visit by a foreign dignitary, and that department officers were surprised as well as distressed by the reaction. There was some feeling too, that the Indians were making a mountain out of a molehill.

Just what was to be gained by Dulles associating himself in this manner with Portugal is not clear, however. Portugal's main asset to the West appears to be its possession of the Azores. These islands, lying directly between New York and Gibraltar, are of strategic importance to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, of which Portugal is a member. So far as is known the United States has no interest whatever in Goa.

If a major purpose of the communique was to stress cordiality toward a NATO associate, then it provides another illustration of the dilemma the United States faces when it attempts to please its European allies without antagonizing Asians who have emerged in the last few years from the status of European colonies and who now populate fiercely independent nations.

If the purpose was to counter the invective of Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Nikita S. Khrushchev, Communist party chief, the communique failed of its objective because it tended to confirm in Indian eyes what the Russians were saying. Dulles's laudable purpose could have been accomplished by issuing some sort of statement through Cooper or the Indian Ambassador to Washington, G. L. Mehta.

Sources in Washington asserted that Indian officials were more than a little perturbed by the anti-Western speeches of the loud-talking Russians and that an effective way for the United States to have capitalized on this would have been to say something like this:

"You poor Indians, having to put up with all that tripe. We feel sorry for you but don't worry too much; the Russians will be going home soon."

If the Indian leaders were annoyed with the Russians and embarrassed because of the acclaim with which Indian crowds greeted them, the furore over Goa provided a handy escape.

FOLLOWING is a brief chronology which indicates the Indians still would have had ground for concern even if the word "provinces" had not been used:

Dr. Cunha had been invited for an official three-day visit. It was coincidental that he first conferred with Dulles on Nov. 30 while the Russians were busily plugging the Goa issue. Bulganin said Portuguese control of Goa was a "shame" to civilization. Khrushchev compared the Portuguese to insects feeding on human blood.

This was sheer demagogy, of course. The Russians were merely attempting to stir up the enormous crowds that gathered to see them. Indian Prime Minister Nehru said Sept. 16 in Parliament that continuation of Portuguese rule was "an affront to civilized humanity" and that Goa was not only a symbol of decadent colonialism but had become "an acid test on which we can judge the policies of other countries." The Russians knew that as far as Indian emotions go they could not have been on sounder ground.

The results of the Dulles-Cunha communique have been, according to reports, to place the Russians on the side of India and the United States on the side of Portugal, in the opinion of the Indian masses.

On Friday, Dec. 2, Dr. Cunha gave a remarkable pro-colonial speech before a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club. State Department officials were in the audience. In mid-afternoon Dr. Cunha visited again with Dulles. The commuique was issued shortly after 6 p.m. By and large, the press ignored the speech and the communique, which was superficially innocuous, and which did not mention Goa.

The communique charged the Russian tourists with trying to "foment hatred between East and West" and said Dulles and Cunha had discussed Soviet "allegations

White House Conference Conclusion: Education Needs a Lot More Money

More Children Are Going to School—Shortage of Classrooms Noted—Teachers Are Getting Low Salaries—Action by Congress Likely—'Federal Aid' and 'Control' Still Issues.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.

PROFESSIONAL educators with the help of the Eisenhower Administration, have boiled down the nation's educational problem to a single issue: money. That was the one outstanding conclusion of the White House Conference on Education last week, and it figured most prominently in a statement at the end of the conference by Secretary Marion B. Folsom of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The timing of these developments was, of course, no accident. A full-scale consideration of some program of federal aid to education is believed inevitable in the coming session of Congress. With the 1956 political campaigns fast approaching, there is a good chance of partisan debate over how much aid and what kind of aid ought to be given.

Needs of the nation's schools—the ones that money can remedy—are impressive, indeed, even though the figures sometimes have conflicted.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, in a special message last February, said there was a "deficit of more than 300,000 classrooms." The following month, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, then Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, testified that "planned requirements" indicated a shortage of 176,000 classrooms by 1960. The United States Office of Education now is trying to work out a new total, which is expected to show a deepening crisis rather than an improvement.

As for teachers, the Government sees a shortage of 141,300 right now and a need for 1,047,000 new teachers between now and 1960.

Part of the cause of these huge shortages is to be found in the unexpected "baby boom," the sudden jump in birth rate, that followed World War II. Total school attendance is expected to climb by 11,000,000 in the next 10 years—from the present 39,500,000 to 50,500,000.

Over a longer range, children are staying in school longer, especially in the postwar prosperity that has reduced family pressure to quit school and go to work on the farm or get a job to contribute to the family income. Today at least 90 per cent of all children finish grammar school and more than one-half graduate from high school.

The millions of city dwellers who have moved to the suburbs in the last 10 years have felt the brunt of the classroom shortage. City schools have space to spare, while new construction in the outskirts has not kept pace with the development of one new subdivision after another.

Secretary Folsom's statement, which he underlined by remarking that he had "discussed the entire situation with the President," bore a striking resemblance to the final report of the White House Conference on how to finance the schools.

Both favored some degree of federal aid. Folsom disclosed the Administration would present to Congress "a broadened and improved program of federal assistance to help erase the classroom deficit and dispel this shadow over our children." Delegates to the conference were reported overwhelmingly in support of a federal aid program.

Both emphasized school construction as the place where the Federal Government ought to help. Folsom, stressing the shortage of buildings, said, "if we are to meet our classroom needs soon enough, the Federal Government must help raise some of the funds for buildings." He made no similar mention of teachers' salaries or other operational expenses.

Delegates to the White House Conference were said to be "more than two to one" in favor of federal aid for school construction, but "divided almost evenly" on the issue of federal funds for local school operation.

Folsom and the delegates agreed also that states and local school districts must be pushed to greater effort and that federal aid should be apportioned according to need.

Both conclusions insisted that state and local school systems must not be deprived of any discretion in school operation or educational policy. Folsom went a step further: "This Administration believes firmly, just as you do," he told the delegates, "in the American tradition of state and local control of schools. The danger is not that the freedom of local school systems will be lost by federal aid for school buildings, but that it be gradually weakened through default. When you come right down to it, the freedom of local school systems will be preserved just as long as the American people insist upon it."

Despite these assurances, the cry of "federal control" certainly will be raised against whatever federal aid bill or bills come before the new session of Congress.

THE WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE was divided on who ought to pay for higher teachers' salaries, but there was agreement that "the salary structure must be high enough and flexible enough to compete effectively with other fields bidding for quality manpower." Average pay for teachers has doubled in the last 10 years, says a recent study by the United States Chamber of Commerce, but the average last year stood at only $3741.

How teachers' economic status has slipped in the last 50 years as compared with other occupations was indicated recently in a report by Beardsley Ruml and Sidney G. Tickton for the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Advancement of Education.

They showed that small-town teachers and elementary teachers in large cities have pretty well held their own, earning increases in purchasing power that came close to those of persons in other fields. But teachers in big city high schools, now averaging $5526, would require an average of $9400 to reach an economic position comparable with 1904. Principals of high schools in large cities, now averaging $9156, would require $23,800 to give them the relative economic status they had in 1904.

This "deterioration at the top," said Ruml and Tickton, hurts the attractiveness of the academic career as compared to other professions and occupations.

"The ablest young men and women eligible for graduate and professional training are not turning to education as they once did and as the nation's needs require," they observed.

They held salary discrimination responsible for "disaffection" in some teachers—"pervading pessimism, extending in extreme cases to subversion, fellow traveling and other educational sabotage."

"Adequate compensation is not a bribe, nor is it a cure," they concluded. "It is simply an assurance that intellectual leadership maintains a balanced economic status with its contemporaries. On that foundation we can still expect deviation and criticism, but it can be sincere and rational, not poisoned by the facts of injustice, neglect and humiliation."

As these and other educational problems aroused increasing discussion, attacks rained on the White House Conference from both sides of the fence. When the President first suggested such a meeting, many called it a stalling device to put off doing anything tangible about the school problem. Later, when detailed plans of the conference were announced, there were charges that it was stacked against federal aid.

Finally, when the conference had gotten underway, those who opposed federal aid, charged that the meeting had been rigged ahead of time to come out for a federal spending program.

Actually, that outcome appears to have been inevitable. Professional educators quite naturally took a lead in discussions and were handed most of the work of drafting conference reports, since they were familiar with educational problems and educational jargon.

One of the delegates, a Minnesota lawyer who leaned against federal aid, commented ruefully: "Asking the 'pros' if they wanted more money for the schools was like asking my boys whether they want a new car or whether the old bus is good enough for a while yet. Of course the boys would want a new car. They'd want one for each of them."

TWO BIG OBSTACLES in the path of federal aid stand as firm as ever. One is the issue of racial segregation in the schools. Some liberals customarily try to use federal aid proposals as clubs to enforce the United States Supreme Court's decision prohibiting segregated school systems. Such moves would be made easier if Virginia and certain other southern states complete movements to evade the decision by converting public schools into private schools.

The other is disagreement over whether any federal aid ought to go to religious and other non-public schools that operate independently of tax revenues. The White House Conference went on record against any such aid.

Despite the emphasis on money as the solution to the nation's educational problem, money is not the whole answer.

Teachers, for example, feel that they have lost social as well as economic status in many localities and that they are not respected as they once were.

Other shortcomings may be the fault of the schools themselves. There was a strong undercurrent of criticism of present education policies, at the White House Conference.

"Children need more algebra, more discipline and respect for authority and less how-to-get-along-with-your-neighbor," was the way one delegate put it in a corridor conversation.

Parental pressure is undoubtedly partly to blame for what has been called the "cafeteria system" of letting pupils pick their own courses in high school.

Ruml and Tickton sum up the situation this way:

"The evidence, incomplete as it is, points to an erosion of fundamental elements in the American democracy. The responsibility is only partly that of the teacher and the educational administrator. A basic reorientation at the highest level both public and private is required—a reorientation both moral and intellectual."

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

From the Lawyers Guild

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I would like to commend you most heartily for your forthright stand in urging that it would be "in the best interests of all concerned," to have the case of National Lawyers Guild v. Brownell heard by the Supreme Court. Your editorial, "A Case to Be Heard" (Nov. 23), with its account of the guild's past activities and your mention of the many prominent persons who have been associated with the guild was very fine indeed.

I would like, however, to point out to you that the editorial twice contained an inaccuracy in stating that the Attorney General has already placed the guild on his list of "subversive organizations." This is not the fact.

Shortly after the Attorney General announced in speeches before the American Bar Association and AMVETS that "the evidence is clear that . . . the National Lawyers Guild . . . has become . . . the legal mouthpiece of the Communist party," and that he was "now prepared to make this determination public" and to proceed to place the guild on his list of "subversive organizations," the guild brought suit to enjoin the Attorney General from proceeding.

All administrative proceedings have been stayed for the intervening two years during which this matter has been before the several federal courts. Thus, not only has the guild not been listed, but the hearing which the Attorney General proposes to hold in advance of listing has not taken place.

The issue before the Supreme Court on the guild's petition for certiorari is whether the guild must exhaust its administrative remedies—that is, go through with the hearing—before it can challenge in the courts the basic power, the procedures and the public prejudgment by the Attorney General in this case.

The very fact that newspapers of the caliber of the Post-Dispatch and The New York Times (which has made similar errors in the past) are under the impression the guild has in fact been listed, serves only to emphasize the guild's argument of the severity of the consequences of the Attorney General's prejudgment of the issue.

Speaking of Books

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We of the Clayton Public Library were delighted with the Christmas book section of last Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

Alexander Buchan's article particularly put into words my own feelings about books today. Another article discussed reasons for the increased reading of non-fiction during recent years. I would like to add that non-fiction is more varied, better written, more realistic. Fiction has reached a saturation point of shock and does not know where to go from there.

We could use a section such as last Sunday's at least once a month in this area. We will have calls all day for the books mentioned in this section showing that it is widely read.

VIVIAN S. MEIER,
Librarian, Clayton Public Library.

Your splendid book supplement was welcomed and enjoyed by book lovers throughout the St. Louis area.

We would like to suggest that you make this a regular monthly feature of your paper.

Carlos Hurd Told It

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A well-written book telling about the sinking of the luxury liner Titanic, titled "A Night to Remember," by Walter Lord, mentions numerous stories written about that great sea disaster, but it fails completely to mention the late Carlos F. Hurd's story in the Post-Dispatch which was the first full report of the sinking.

The White Star liner, on its maiden trip, sank April 14, 1912, after striking an iceberg, with a loss of 1500 lives out of 2200 aboard. After early but garbled reports of the sinking the actual facts were anxiously awaited.

Hurd, for many years a standout Post-Dispatch reporter, was aboard the rescue ship Carpathia. After interviewing survivors he wrote the story and through a messenger on the pilot boat had it on the wire even before the Carpathia steamed into New York harbor.

The author of the new book, especially after mentioning the inaccurate stories first printed in New York papers, surely seems to have omitted a natural conclusion to his dramatic recital.

But Hurd's story is there in the microfilmed copies of the Post-Dispatch of those days—thousands of words on pages one and two where it will remain a monument to both the writer and to the Post-Dispatch.

Memo to Mr. Dickmann

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It would be a nice gesture on the part of Postmaster Dickmann to assign one stamp seller and one parcel post man to the windows at Eighth and Olive at 7:30 a.m. so people going to work before 8 a.m. can mail their parcels and letters. He should see the crowd standing in line to get their parcels weighed and sent off. Some have to leave the line on account of not having time to wait any longer.

Money in Campaigns

While predicting that the Republicans in the next presidential campaign would spend several times the $16,000,000 they are said to have spent in 1952, Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Butler also announced that he will join Republican Chairman Leonard Hall, in an appeal to the public for contributions to cover the cost of electioneering.

So far as 1952 is concerned, nobody really knows how much was spent on behalf of either party. There are too many ways of using money without having to make a report. That is why the Post-Dispatch long ago suggested small gifts from many sources, as well as full publicity for all political spending.

Money may pervert an election even unintentionally if it provides one side with far more opportunities than the other for making its appeal. More dangerous is the fact, stressed by Senator Douglas of Illinois, that big gifts are likely to come from those who are thinking of government contracts, jobs, special legislation, changes in regulations and other favors.

Congress had—and still has even at the eleventh hour—a chance to rationalize the election laws. Last year Senator Hennings of Missouri introduced a well-considered bill. It recognizes the cost of campaigning brought about by radio and television. So for the preposterous limit of $3,000,000 on each of the national committees, it substitutes ceilings based on the number of votes in previous elections.

The Hennings bill contains no such debatable features as free radio and TV time, or support of campaigning at public expense. Its chief requirement is full publicity—to which the voters are entitled and which candidates should welcome. Yet it is doubtful that a Congress returning to Washington less than a year before Election Day will pass in its last months a bill which it did not adopt earlier.

But what Congress may not do, the candidates can do. They and their managers can insist that all money spent in their behalf be reported to them so that they may make a full public report. They can refuse support where they question motives. They can try to discourage big contributions and promote more and more small ones. If each citizen who voted for President Eisenhower or Gov. Stevenson had contributed only a dollar, both parties would have had more than ample funds.

Law or no law, more and more people are becoming aware of the part money plays in elections. They know that expenses are unavoidable, but they are also opening their eyes to the signs of "expense no consideration" campaigning. They are bound to be impressed by candidates who are frank with them about money and where it comes from.

Santa Is a Symbol

Because some religious leaders protested that Santa Claus is a "pagan symbol," the venerable old friend of all of us has been barred from the Christmas eve parade in Henderson, Nev.

In past years Santa Claus has run into various kinds of deserved trouble, mostly because he insisted on coming too early. He has parachuted into the Ohio river in October, been snowballed in Pekin, Ill., in November, and so on. Generally his trouble was that he was trying to help merchandising, not children, and everybody knew it—especially the children.

But this year old St. Nicholas seems to have behaved himself, up there at the Pole, getting his presents wrapped and feeding nutritious kelp to old Donner and Blitzen. Thus there is no sound reason to bar him from a parade on the day before Christmas, even if he is a pagan symbol. And he is, or was.

The world is full of pagan symbols, or at least what used to be the symbols of pagans. They have become the symbols of us all. There is the Easter bunny. There is the Christmas tree. Does anybody propose to prohibit them too?

The proper question about such symbols is not whether they were pagan, but what they symbolize. A frowzy, early-bird Santa arriving in October by parachute to stir pre-Thanksgiving sales might be a pagan. But the apple-cheeked, twinkling Santa of tradition and memory symbolizes good will to men. We doubt if there is any place where he would be out of place, these days. Including Henderson, Nev.

And We Quote

Bartlett's, which is to quotations what Webster's is to definitions, is celebrating its 100th anniversary, and we have been celebrating with it by looking into what is quotable nowadays in its handsome new Thirteenth and Centennial Edition. It is interesting to observe that Herbert Hoover is represented with five quotes, Harry Truman with eight, President Eisenhower with four, Franklin D. Roosevelt with a spanking three and a half pages, starting "There is nothing I love as much as a good fight," and Winston Churchill with nearly five pages.

Here are quotations from Judge Learned Hand, Gen. Marshall, Gen. Bradley, Wendell Willkie, J. P. Marquand and Robert M. Hutchins. In these pages William L. Laurence, the distinguished science writer of The New York Times, is quoted in three excerpts from his description of the explosion of the atomic bomb.

One quotation authors affect us with a special pathos, and considering all they said it seems particularly ironical that Harold L. Ickes should be represented only by "I am against government by crony" (resigning the secretaryship of Interior in 1946) and W. C. Fields by "It ain't a fit night out for man or beast," memorable as the latter has become. Mae West, on the other hand, is twice as well represented: inevitably by "Come up and see me sometime" and by her less well known but ad[illegible]h, peel me a grape."

Of President [illegible]er's four quotations, none is from his 1952 campaign speeches, while 11 of the 13 quotations from Adlai Stevenson are from his speeches in that campaign. William Faulkner, for all his books, is not quoted from a single one, but only in three excerpts from his Stockholm speech of 1950 accepting the Nobel prize for having written those books!

These must have been a happy hundred years editing Bartlett's, for the world of quotations mirrors just about all the absorbing facets of the real world. Little, Brown & Co., which has been connected with Bartlett's Familiar Quotations for 92 of those years, reminds us that John Bartlett was a bookseller and publisher of Cambridge who edited the first nine editions and became a Little, Brown partner in 1865.

His first edition consisted of only 258 single-column pages with a 36-page index. The centennial edition contains 1068 double-column pages and 541 pages of index. In his preface to the ninth edition in 1901 Mr. Bartlett commented that this marked the close of the volume's tentative life. This prognostication fortunately proved incorrect, and the editing of the eleventh and twelfth editions in 1937 and 1948 enjoyed the services of Christopher Morley. So a happy second hundred years to Bartlett's—and may all its quotations be memorable ones!

How They Voted

St. Louis voters are entitled to know how their Aldermen responded when the roll was called on the Stolar motion to take Mayor Tucker's city charter bill out of pigeonhole in the Legislation Committee. We present below the membership of the board with all recorded.

The vote was 5 (three Republicans and two Democrats) to discharge the committee; 21 (20 Democrats and one Republican) opposed, and 3 (all Democrats) not voting. Here they are:

FOR THE MOTION

Donald Gunn, Board President, Democrat.
George J. Grellner, Thirteenth Ward, Repub.
Carl Guetschow, Twenty-third Ward, Repub.
William K. Gardner, Twenty-fifth, Democrat.
William A. Stolar, Twenty-eighth, Republican.

AGAINST THE MOTION

Carl Gassel, First Ward, Democrat.
James W. Noonan, Third, Democrat.
Thomas H. Mayberry, Fourth, Democrat.
John T. Curry, Fifth, Democrat.
Archie Blaine, Sixth, Democrat.
Raymond Leisure, Seventh, Democrat.
Anton Niemeyer, Eighth, Democrat.
Louis Aboussie, Ninth, Democrat.
James E. Geisler, Tenth, Democrat.
Albert Villa, Eleventh, Democrat.
Fred W. Haag, Twelfth, Republican.
A. J. Cervantes, Fifteenth, Democrat.
Clinton Watson, Sixteenth, Democrat.
Joseph P. Roddy, Seventeenth, Democrat.
W. F. Smith Jr., Eighteenth, Democrat.
DeWitte T. Lawson, Nineteenth, Democrat.
Edgar J. Feely, Twentieth, Democrat.
Alfred I. Harris, Twenty-second, Democrat.
Anthony T. Mascazzini, Twenty-fourth, Dem.
William C. Brady, Twenty-sixth, Democrat.
Everett J. Taylor, Twenty-seventh, Democrat.

NOT VOTING

Leo McLaughlin, Second Ward, Democrat.
Joseph Kavanaugh, Fourteenth, Democrat.
A. Barney Mueller, Twenty-first, Democrat.

Agonizing Reappraisal

Secretary John Foster Dulles has an odd idea of how to extricate himself and the State Department which he heads from the lamentable effects of his remark about Goa that has angered so many people in India. His "explanation" only made matters worse as shown by bitter second comment of the pro-United States Times of India that Mr. Dulles's clarification was a mistake "it is difficult to conceive of even the village idiot of perpetrating."

The Secretary has now shifted from Goa, the enclave on the west Indian coast which he described with the Portuguese Foreign Minister, as "a Portuguese province." Speaking before the Illinois Manufacturers' Association in Chicago, Mr. Dulles has revived "massive retaliation," one of his early catch phrases that has been gathering dust for many months—and with good reason since its militaristic ring frightened our allies a couple of years ago.

Does this mean that the Secretary is going to take down from the shelf other discarded slogans of yesteryear? If so we may expect him to "liberate the satellites" just as soon as he gets through "unleashing Chiang." Or perhaps he will now undertake those moves simultaneously.

Return to 'Minor' Sports

By a vote of 386 to 98, the Missouri High School Activities Association has restored swimming, wrestling and cross country running to the recognized list for state tournaments. This is a sound vote for a sound move.

Last winter, when the association removed these sports from the list, C. Ed Potter, the Normandy principal, began a campaign to emphasize rather than de-emphasize these "minor sports." And in an editorial we asked, "What's minor about them?"

Swimming, for example, is not only a sport but a method of survival which properly could be taught in all schools. Wrestling is as rugged as football. Cross country demands the utmost in determination and physical taxation.

A case can be made for many sports, but beyond that, a case can be made for giving every high school student an opportunity to develop his physical skills and to employ his youthful energies in athletics. Not every lad is big enough to make the football team, or tall enough to play basketball, but should he be left out of the athletic picture for such reasons?

One of the fundamental weaknesses of athletic programs in this country is the increasing emphasis on "major" sports. Too often that means that 22 high school boys play football while several hundred of their colleagues exercise by cheering them on. The minor sports offer a means of turning spectators into participants. At the high school level especially there is nothing minor about them.

They Were Defeated Then Elected

Former Gov. Stevenson of Illinois, the one declared candidate for the presidency in 1956, was defeated as Democratic nominee in 1952. Former Gov. Dewey of New York, whose name continues to appear as a Republican possibility next year, was twice defeated for he unsuccessfully bore the G.O.P. standard in 1944 and again in 1948.

These circumstances have caused a good many people to pick up and repeat the erroneous remark that "no one has ever been elected President after having first been defeated." Here are at least five cases to the contrary:

	DEFEATED.	ELECTED.
Thomas Jefferson — —	1796	1800
John Quincy Adams —	1820	1824
Andrew Jackson — —	1824	1828
William Henry Harrison	1836	1840
Grover Cleveland — —	1888	1892

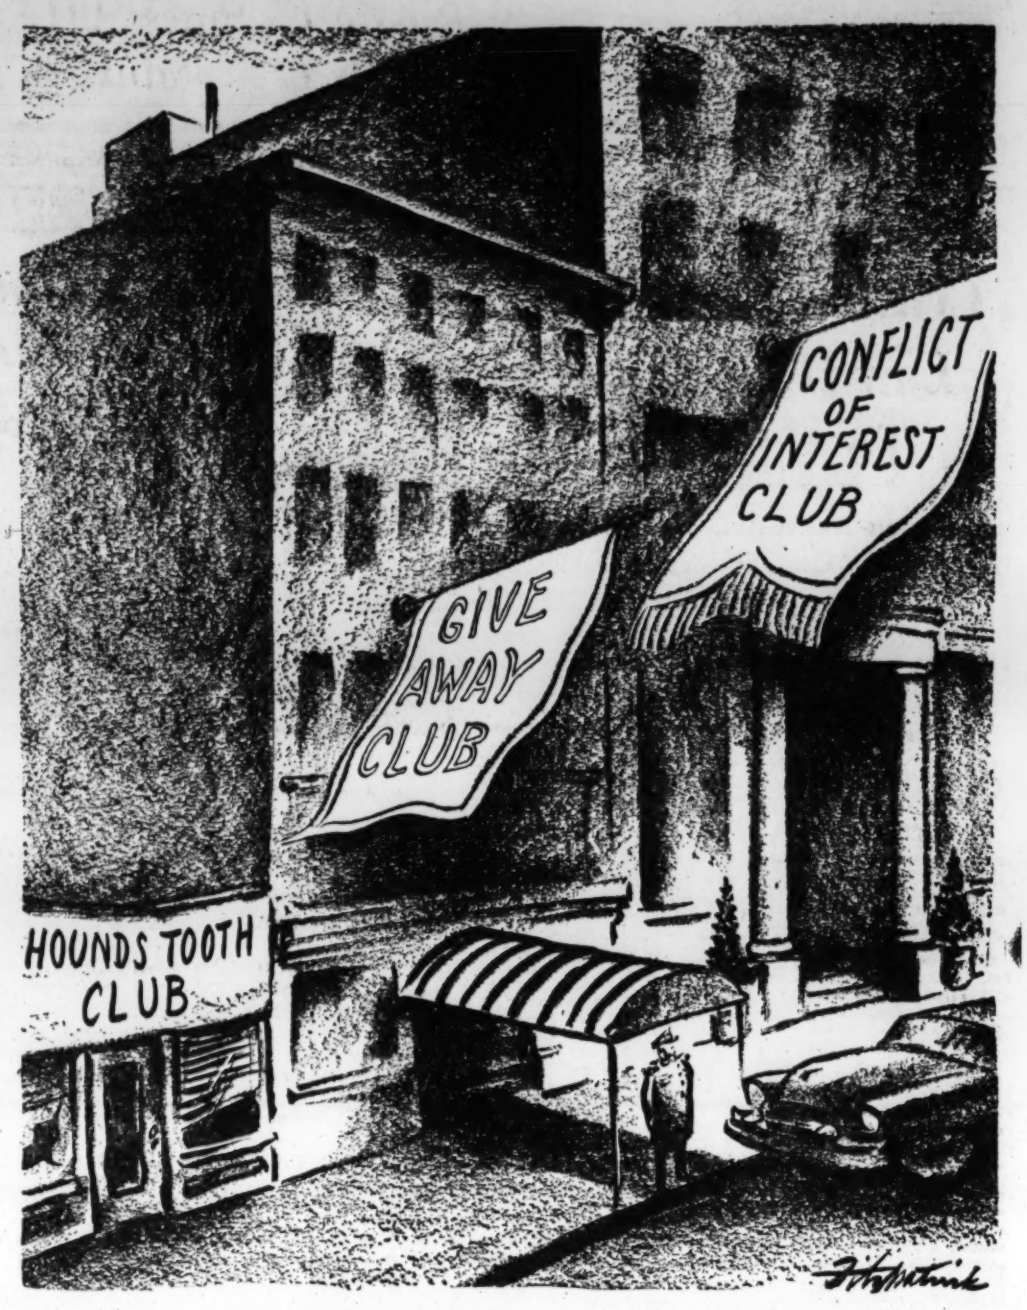

The purpose of this recital has nothing to do with the candidacy of Mr. Stevenson or the possible candidacy of Mr. Dewey. It is merely to subsitute facts for misinformation.

Good Police Work

One deterrent to crime is that those who break the laws against murder and abduction shall be caught promptly, tried speedily, and if found guilty, made to pay as soon as possible.

On both sides of the Mississippi there are current examples of alert, diligent, day-and-night police work. Clinton and St. Clair county authorities have solved the horrible double slaying of the Lebanon (Ill.) husband and wife. With an admitted killer caught and locked up, they began at once to hunt for a probable accomplice. In University City, police quickly caught three high school boys who said they kidnaped and raped a 14-year-old girl Tuesday night.

Both crimes call for punishment in court as certain as the police work was prompt. All who were outraged by the wrongs done will hope for justice under the law as soon as is consistent with full regard for the rights of the accused.

BACK FROM THE CRUSADE

It's Nearly Time for Putzing

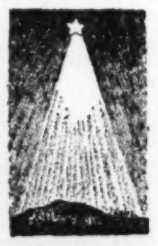

The Mirror of Public Opinion

214 years ago devout Moravians began tradition to celebrate their first Christmas at Bethlehem, Pa.; today streets are gaily decorated and neighbors visit from home to home to keep holiday; community 'putz' tells old and ever new story of Nativity.

Helen Papashvily in the Lincoln-Mercury Times

On a dark, threatening night in the winter of 1741 a little group of devout Moravians, keeping their first Christmas in the Pennsylvania wilderness, were inspired by the old hymn, "Not Jerusalem, Lowly Bethlehem," to make their new home another Bethlehem. And so the little hamlet on the Lehigh river was named and a joyous tradition of holiday worship, music, food and festivity was begun—a tradition that, growing richer with each passing century, still endures.

As the December days draw in, a great star shines down from the highest hill on a city in gala array. Ropes of evergreen festoon the streets. The brass of door plates and knockers gleams with extra polish; the white trim that softens the austere beauty of the gray fieldstone buildings sparkles; in every multipaned window a beeswax candle burns at dusk. The buttery, spicy fragrance of baking fills the air. Cobbled walks resound with hurrying feet.

From the Moravian College, an institution already famous when George Washington enrolled his favorite niece there in 1781, students start homeward. Last-minute shoppers visit the apothecary to buy "stuffing herbs" and pungent Moravian mints.

Crowds of townspeople and visitors make their way from door to door engrossed in the seasonal delight of "going putzing." For no holiday custom is more cherished by young and old in Bethlehem than the putz, a madeup word from the German putzen (to decorate) and used in this particular connotation to describe the Nativity scene set up around the Christmas tree in almost every home.

Some families use only a creche; others, elaborating the theme, build displays that cover the floor of an entire room. Often the little figures, set with loving care in time-honored positions, are heirlooms passed from generation to generation.

According to legend, one family, well equipped with slide rules, graph paper and protractors, even spent a long vacation in the Holy Land measuring gates and temple sites, walls and well-heads, and then came home and built their putz to exact scale.

Yet anachronisms, when they appear, do not disturb the hallowed scene. A tattered, but beloved doll riding with the Wise Men, a tooth-marked plastic fish set by a tiny hand among the shepherd's dogs, a new and long-awaited electric train chugging merrily around the perimeter of Judea—touches like these somehow add a note of homely grace.

Friends and neighbors always have exchanged visits during the holiday season to view and compare as many putzes as possible, but as the charm of these little "Christmas yards" (as they are also termed) has spread, few private households, however hospitably inclined, can accommodate the friends of friends, slight acquaintances, and frequently the total strangers who besiege the doors. To best share their customs with others, each year since 1935 the Moravian Church has set up a community putz where all comers receive a warm welcome.

Soon after Thanksgiving Mrs. F. F. Couch, who directs the project, and her volunteer assistants, young men from the congregation, begin reconstructing the topography of the Holy Land in an alcove 10 feet wide and almost 25 feet long in the auditorium of the Christian Education building. From such unlikely material as old rugs, crumpled wire netting, newspapers and baskets come hills, valleys and mountains. Gray-green mosses and lichens, carefully garnered from fields and woods, cover the terrain; worn rocks add a natural note. Forests of spruce tips and cedar boughs rise on the mountains. Each piece, the Adored Infant, His Mother, Joseph, Isaiah, the Wise Men, the shepherds, even the humble animals, the camels, donkeys, sheep and dogs, has a particular place in one of the many groups, carefully arranged to tell in chronological order the old, yet ever new, story of the first Christmas. Over all, suspended from invisible wires, hover the angelic host.

The community putz, ready for visitors, opens the week before Christmas and from then until New Year's young women of the congregation greet the many who arrive and conduct them to the darkened auditorium.

There, as the glorious harmony of an old Moravian hymn concludes, a beam of light touches the lonely figure of Isaiah on his mountain, and from a concealed tape recorder the clear, resonant voice of Bishop Kenneth Hamilton begins:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon His shoulder and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

Voices are hushed, eyes brighten, hearts grow lighter and faith stronger. For a putz is more than an arrangement, a decorative composition; it is for a little while a world—a world of comprehensible dimensions, a world of love and peace and promise for all men.

Our Sprouting Language

C. P. in the Indianapolis Star

Positive evidence is now at hand that our language is growing faster than Jack's beanstalk. Reference is to a 284-page "Dictionary of New Words," published by the Philosophical Library.

To suggest how much the language has grown in the last 20 or 30 years, take the word "operation." It formerly was used to denote a surgical procedure.

But today, spelled with a capital O, operation has become a key word in military parlance, with all sorts of new connotations, unknown to an earlier generation. All the different operations listed in this book would make a good one for the $64,000 question.

They are Operations Annie, Anvil, Avalanche, Bootstrap, Cactus, Crossroads, Dragoon, Eclipse, Flintlock, Galvanic, Greenhouse, Haylift, Husky, Ivy, Killer, Neptune, Overlord, Pluto, Roundup, Selection Board, Skywatch, Sledgehammer, Stork, Tiger, Torch, Vittles and War Brides.

But the most fascinating new word in this book, according to Eric Partridge, who wrote the introduction, is cybernetics, and we're inclined to agree. In fact, we're inclined to quote Burke: "A very great part of the mischiefs that vex this world arises from words." It might be well if we deleted cybernetics.

Cybernetics is a branch of science that studies "the human brain as compared to the electronic computing machines and others which perform certain functions similar to those of the human brain."

Someday, we suppose, cyberneticists will find that the human brain no longer pays and will declare it obsolete.

We don't think we're going to like it.

Gallop to Bordeaux

Edith Sitwell has described Isabella Gardner "as a very distinguished poet" whose "poems are alive, utterly original and have a highly individual and accomplished technique." Miss Gardner's poems have appeared in The Atlantic, Kenyon Review, New Yorker, Sewanee Review, Paris Review. Poetry Magazine, and other publications. Her writings have now been collected in Birthdays From the Ocean and Other Poems (Houghton Mifflin, 43 pgs., $3).

For a Rockinghorse Poet

Don't "trot trot to Boston" child, gallop to Bordeaux.
Not every monster has been seen nor every bell change rung.
Hunt the Whale the Grail the Fleece
Kiss the cockatrice in Greece.

Don't "trot trot to market," child.
Canter through Cockaigne.
Singlefoot to Samarcand and steeplechase in Spain though far away translates to mean
(in the Zulu tongue)
"That place where someone cries out O mother I am lost."

The Compleat Anglers

Wing fin and wrist bend wishfully to cadences of summer noon and courting lovers cast their bait into the laden air of love.

The deft rod awaits the still stream stirs and mute gills tremble to the lure, the lovers' taut hands listen to soft nimble arias of love.

A ridden hawk screams like a cat as hook is caught as mouth is reamed as reeling lovers play their catch through foaming areas of love.

The Minotaur

The labyrinthine forest's spoor lead to the patient Minotaur Deep in the dark and structured core the bull-man waits inside the maze and he who dares to explore will raze the beast of fear behind the door.

No Ariadne and no crone will point the way. Each man alone must thread his path, unreel his own life spool and fumble to the lair.
Each man must journey naked there nor arm himself with wing nor stone.

For he who goes his armor shed and walks with all that once he fled that man will face the horned head the unimaginable eyes and find there where the monster dies the ichor that the terror bled.

To Thoreau on Rereading Walden

Your passion was ever plural, apart from that one twig ("the twig") you never found.
Herds of birds and fishes, stars in droves received your taut and tender gaze but gills beaks planets can't reciprocate and gratefully you prayed their praise.
You loved the faces in the fire, Thoreau, the goldgreen pickerel, the huddling snow.
I too love these, and O love you, fierce-heart, and yet were you, like Lazarus, to rise,
you would look everywhere but in my eyes.
You'd hear the loud spring ice the greening ground, but not the caller knocking at your gate nor the nickering in your maple groves nor the howling for home of the hound.
You did not listen to the turtle-dove
(singular bird) sing on your lintel:
LOVE
And now no visitor will come to crowd
Your peace. You have dried safely in your shroud.

It Rained Last Night

Glass ponds astound the juicy grass, the air is wild with the scents of thyme and fern and briny childhood and the glistening birds call clearly in rinsed voices, the sky is far and blue as a mariner's eye:
Listen, the greenness whistles. . . .

GEN. PHILLIPS

Why Standard Oil of California Seeks to Alter Agreement With The Navy on Elk Hills Reserve

It Entered Accord Under Condemnation Threat, Is Getting Little Oil Out Now — Navy Wants to Save Field for Emergency—Compromise Likely.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

(FIRST OF A SERIES.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.

T. S. PETERSEN, president of the Standard Oil Co. of California, which has a $300,000,000 interest in Elk Hills naval oil reserve No. 1 near Taft, Calif., wrote on Sept. 6 to Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.), Georgia, of the House Armed Services Committee requesting that he have the committee arrange to consider a proposal by the company which would permit it to withdraw its share of oil from the Elk Hills reserve at a more rapid rate than is permitted under the present agreement.

Earlier this year Under Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates Jr. had written Vinson forwarding Standard's proposal together with the report of the Navy's oil consultants, DeGolyer and MacNaughton, stating that he considered the time appropriate for the committee to consider the desirability of the proposed modification of the contract between Standard and the Navy.

This was an official Navy Department communication. It made no recommendation on the Navy's part whether Standard's proposal should be accepted or rejected.

Shadows of Teapot Dome.

Shadows from the Teapot Dome scandal, when a Secretary of the Interior was bribed by two oil men to get the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve turned over to the Interior Department so that the department could open it up by executive order for private exploitation by the favored companies, still hang over all actions dealing with naval oil reserves.

Standard had first introduced proposals for modification of its contract in 1951. These had been changed several times before the latest proposal was submitted in January 1954.

The Navy prepared a three-paragraph press release about a year ago, but this was never given out. Capt. A. H. Miller, present director of Navy petroleum reserves, said he had no idea why not. It is understood, however, that the Navy did not think it was of sufficient interest at the time to warrant a press release.

In 1952 R. Adm. (then Captain) Robert H. Mead, then in charge of naval petroleum reserves, announced that an offer had been made by Standard. The announcement was not detailed nor particularly informative.

The fact that these negotiations and studies looking toward a change in the Navy-Standard relationship have been going on for more than four years without any general publication has aroused suspicion that some deal adverse to the Government was in prospect.

All Documents Available.

All the documents in these proposals and negotiations, including the detailed report of the Navy's oil consultants, DeGolyer and MacNaughton, have been made available to the Post-Dispatch by the Navy, Chairman Vinson and the Standard Oil of California.

As far as can be determined there has been nothing secret, underhanded or improper—no impropriety of any sort—in the proposals or the negotiations.

Under legislation put through the Congress by Vinson in 1944, the Navy can take no action of any sort in regard to the naval petroleum reserves without first informing the armed services committees of the Senate and the House. As one naval officer expressed it, the Navy cannot even bat an eye over petroleum reserves without letting the committees know. The armed services committees have been kept informed of every move in the current effort of Standard to change its contract. The contract cannot be modified without action by Congress.

The proposal has been modified substantially in favor of the Government.

Interests Are Opposite.

The arrangement between the Navy and Standard of California to share the output of the Elk Hills reserve has been termed an unnatural marriage resulting from a shotgun wedding. The interest of the two parties are exactly opposite. Standard is in the business of producing and selling oil, while the Navy's interest in the reserves is in keeping the oil in the ground. Standard wants to produce and sell the more than 150,000,000 barrels of oil which is its share in the reserve, while the Navy wants it in the ground in reserve for emergency.

Any oil company involved in naval reserves is likely to be cast automatically in the role of villain. In the present case it appears that Standard plays the role of victim. Under its agreement entered into with the Navy under threat of condemnation of its lands in the Elk Hills area, Standard, in effect, is required to keep its oil in reserve for the benefit of the Navy.

In 1942, during the heavy demand of World War II, Standard wanted to drill its lands and go into maximum production. Under a law passed in 1938 Congress gave the Navy the right to condemn Standard's Elk Hills lands which are mixed with the Navy's in checkerboard fashion. President Roosevelt authorized the Navy, March 21, 1942, to purchase Standard's interest if possible or, if satisfactory arrangements could not be made with Standard, to condemn its interests in the reserve.

Standard presumably decided then that it was more to their interest to enter into an agreement with the Navy to share in the production than to sell or be subject to condemnation.

Provisions of Agreement.

Under the agreement made, Standard was to receive 33 per cent of all the oil produced in the shallow zone and about 20 per cent of the oil produced in the deep or Stevens zone. These percentages were arrived at by computation of the share of the reserves under the Navy's and Standard's holdings.

During the primary period of exploitation, from November 1942 to August 1950, 41,000,000 barrels of oil were produced and, by agreement with the Navy, Standard was allowed to take 28,000,000 barrels, or about twice its share. This was to be paid back to the Navy from later production.

As a result, today Standard is getting only one-ninth of the oil produced; that is, the Navy is taking two-thirds of Standard's one-third of production and selling it back to Standard. If production continues at the present approximate level of 20,000 barrels a day, Standard will have paid back its overdraft in six and one-half years, or if it is reduced to 15,000 barrels a day it will be even with the Navy in eight and three-quarters years.

The Elk Hills reserve, known as Navy Petroleum Reserve No. 1, was established by order of President William H. Taft in 1912. It comprises 37,554 surface acres near Taft at the southern end of the San Joaquin valley in California.

Oil at Three Depths.

There is oil under the reserve at three depths, the shallow zone of from 3000 to 3500 feet, the Stevens zone at 6000 feet and the Carneros zone at 9000 feet. Although estimated to be 38 per cent depleted, the shallow zone still contains 340,000,000 barrels of oil, 120,000,000 m.c.f. (thousand cubic feet) of gas and 3,500,000 barrels of gasoline.

The Stevens zone is only about 1 per cent depleted and holds 390,000,000 barrels of oil, 1,029,000,000 m.c.f. of gas and 82,000,000 barrels of gasoline.

The Carneros zone has not been explored, since only three wells have been drilled into it. The Navy has the entire interest in this zone.

The shallow zone is an unstable reservoir, greatly faulted, with gas, oil and water present. It produces low grade oil worth at the present market $2.33 a barrel. In contrast, the Stevens zone is a near perfect reservoir and the oil is very high grade worth now $4.07 a barrel.

There are 748 wells in the shallow zone and 224 in the Stevens zone. The shallow zone has been producing since 1912 and most of the wells and the equipment are old. The wells and equipment in the Stevens zone are new.

Danger of Loss.

The Navy would like to reduce production in the shallow zone, which during 1955 has averaged 19,750 barrels a day, to about 3000 barrels. But oil is seeping into the water at the southern end of the reserve at a rate of 3,000,000 barrels a year and water is encroaching on the northern and eastern sides.

The current high production is preventing loss of oil in the reservoir until stabilization measures can be effected. A project to block loss by injecting water at high pressure is under way at a cost of $400,000. The Navy hopes that by 1960 it will be possible to have necessary maintenance and protective production down to 11,400 barrels daily and by 1965 to 3000 barrels daily.

It is by no means certain that this can be done. The Navy's oil consultants called the program unrealistic and Standard appears to doubt its feasibility. This may be one reason Standard wants to get its share out.

In an emergency, production from the shallow zone and the Stevens zone could each be increased almost immediately to 50,000 barrels a day, but it is doubtful that production could be maintained at this rate in the shallow zone for long.

Such, in brief, are the conditions under which Standard Oil of California is trying to make a new agreement that would permit it to withdraw from the field in 30 years. In return for the privilege of producing and marketing its share of oil in the two zones, it proposes to trade its share of $4.07 oil in the Stevens zone for an equal quantity of Navy's $2.33 oil in the shallow zone and offers a bonus to the Navy of 20,000,000 barrels of oil. It also offers to drill three wells in the 9000-foot Carneros zone.

Navy's Contention.

The Navy states that if Standard were to take its oil out of the shallow zone, the zone would be two-thirds depleted when the oil had been withdrawn. It might then take 40 years for the Navy to recover the remainder and operating costs would be increased 50 per cent a barrel. And since the wells and equipment are old, it might take a new capital investment of $25,000,000 to recover the oil.

The Navy has two objections of principle to the proposal. First, it is operating a reserve for emergency and in fulfillment of this objective it wants to keep the oil in reserve in the ground. Therefore, even though Standard's new proposal might show some monetary gain to the government, it is contrary to the purposes of a naval reserve.

Second, as the oil in the shallow zone is depleted, the production that will be possible in an emergency will be much less than it is today, or than if the field were stabilized and minimum protective and maintenance production were carried out.

Vinson wrote on June 10 to the Navy: "It is my opinion that there are not sufficient advantages in the proposal." Standard's proposal will be taken up by the committees during the next session of Congress. It is not unlikely that a compromise can be worked out that will enable Standard to take out its share of the reserve under conditions satisfactory to the Navy and the committees.

Mellowing Also Noticeable in Admissions of Injustices Under Stalin—Public Comments on America.

By MARGUERITE HIGGINS
The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1955.)

(FIRST OF A SERIES)

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.

OF ALL the changes that took place in the year between this correspondent's first and second trips to the Soviet Union (fall of 1954; fall of 1955) the most pronounced was in attitudes toward foreigners and things foreign.

A year ago it was only by indirection—a phrase here, a surprising question there—that one could glimpse the real thoughts of a Russian acquaintance.

But today, although the phonograph record defending and praising all things Communist is still the rule, a Soviet citizen can now and again be found who will talk somewhat freely about life in a Communist dictatorship; who will even sometimes criticize the government.

But it is not the grumbling of mutineers. This would be wishful thinking. It is the griping of draftees in an army who want to let off steam but who also know they are in for the duration.

The new atmosphere is visible in both big and little ways. It could be seen in the chance reply of an old man I encountered in a market-place in the old quarter of Tiflis, the capital of the Russian province of Georgia. He was among a crowd of curious Georgians who were asking me about America.

"Well, what do you think about America?" I finally countered, addressing the question to the old man.

"America?" he replied. "We like America. We always have liked America. We always will like America. We don't believe what we read in the papers!"

Friendly Cabbie.

And it is also symbolic of the new atmosphere that on another occasion a Moscow taxicab driver should take the trouble to warn me that the police were checking my activities. The occasion was a visit at 11 o'clock at night to a Western embassy (not American) where a number of correspondents had gone to check an important story. When I got back into the waiting cab, the driver said, "A policeman in civilian clothes came over to ask me who you were, where I picked you up. But I didn't tell him the truth. We don't like policemen, either." A year ago the driver would not have dared to mention the incident.

A year ago it would have been impossible even for an intellectual such as a Moscow literary critics to come right out and place the blame for Russia's literary shortcomings on Stalin. But this year a Moscow critic said:

"We know that our literature is stereotyped, but until now everything had to be written for the taste of one man."

"Why isn't literature improving faster now that Stalin is dead?" he was asked.

"Perhaps some writers feel uncertainty as to how long the present situation will last," he replied.

Lifting of Bars.

Why has Russia's present leadership hitched up the Iron Curtain even to a slight degree?

Why after a 15-year gap are Ernest Hemingway's latest books being translated into Russian? Why are movie houses and theaters being opened to French films, British plays, American operettas? Why are Russians—who could once be arrested for even associating with foreigners—being told not to underestimate the importance of foreign accomplishments? Why are thousands of Russians being let out of concentration camps (under the September amnesty) and allowed to return home?

Why has the Red Army taken over the responsibility of guarding such concentration camps as Vorkuta, replacing the MVD or security police? Why are cultural meetings being held at which participants are encouraged to say publicly what has long been thought privately: That Soviet plays and novels are mostly dull political tracts that don't mirror reality? Why are the Russians thinking of permitting a few Soviet tourists to visit the West?

Some Russian officials give answers like this: "The Soviet masses have matured to the point where bourgeois ideas can no longer corrupt them." Or as an official of VOX, the culture organization, said, "the Socialist system is an accomplished fact now. The counter-revolutionaries do not stand a chance. We feel secure because we know the clock cannot be turned back. Also we have mended the destruction of the war. Our country's industry is thriving. We possess modern cities, modern theaters, modern universities. Why should we fear comparison with the West?"

Consolidating Empire.

It is true that there is an air of self-confidence about Russia's present leaders. But it's also true that the greater normalcy of life inside Russia as well as the normalization of international relations fits in with the Soviet Union's current policy of gaining time to consolidate the vast expansion in territory and people achieved by the Communist empire since World War II.

But in Moscow it is felt that the present steps away from the reign of police terror that prevailed in Stalin's last days reflects a personal reaction of some of today's top leaders against the Stalinist extremism which personally threatened even them.

"This does not mean that the present leaders would not re-invoke police terror if they felt themselves threatened" said a British diplomat, "but remember that the kind of police terror practiced by Stalin exempted no one. These men at the top today must have had agonizing moments wondering if the ax might not someday fall on them. Perhaps it's only natural that they should take steps to see that no one—at least no one of them—ever gets that kind of power again."

It has been persistently reported around Moscow that Nikita S. Khrushchev, Communist party secretary, has himself been indirectly affected by the injustices of the Stalin era. It is said that Khrushchev's daughter was falsely accused of collaborating with the Germans and briefly imprisoned.

It has been noted with interest in this connection that Kornichuk, a Ukrainian playwright and a good friend of Khrushchev's, described a case of unjust arrest by the police in his play "Krillian," which is a hit in Moscow.

There is a case for saying that the mellowing of atmosphere—being newsworthy—has been exaggerated in the headlines reaching the outside world. In some important ways present-day Russia has not even gone back to the degree of freedom that prevailed in the U.S.S.R. in the twenties and thirties. Even until the time of the purges in the mid-1930s Russians and foreigners could mingle far more freely than today when a Russian still thinks twice before inviting a foreigner to his home. (On my first trip to Russia I visited three Russian homes. This trip I visited five, including the home of Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin.)

Soviet Censorship.

And in the nineteen-thirties censorship was far less severe than at the present time, although today the severity of the censorship varies radically from week to week.

But perhaps it is encouraging that one of major revolutions going on at present in Russia is public admission that there have been injustices, miscarriages of justice. There is even a satire being played in Moscow called "A Good Welcome" in which reference is made to thousands of persons wrongly imprisoned during the purges.

Is the current relaxation of pressure only temporary? Is the vice, loosened slightly, to be tightened again?

The biggest pessimist on this score was a Russian I met on my travels.

"Today," he said, "we are all crying peace—and believe me, we are crying it from deep in our hearts—because that is the government line. Whatever we might feel, if the government told us tomorrow to cry "war" we would do so just as loudly! What we Russians want is to stay out of trouble—with the government."

Nonetheless, it is this correspondent's conviction that it would be very hard for the government to suddenly clamp the lid back down. For the Russians are reveling in the new atmosphere.

Dulles's Goa Comments Called Boon to Russia

concerning the Portuguese provinces in the Far East."

There is no discernible difference in basic approach between the speech and the communique. Dr. Cunha took the position in his address the West cannot tolerate further losses or retreats. He noted Bulganin and Khrushchev were "inciting" India to expel the Portuguese. The voice of Portugal deserves to be heard because of "the vastness and importance of the Portuguese positions in the oceans as well as on the continents of the world," he asserted.

Provinces, Not Colonies.

He was specific in discussing the "vast Portuguese overseas provinces:"

"I say provinces, not colonies, for they are truly so, enjoying the same status as the provinces of European Portugal and sharing the same spiritual heritage. For centuries the policy followed by Portugal in regard to those territories and populations has been one of complete assimilation, without any distinction of races or human rights."

Since Goa is not a colony, Dr. Cunha reasoned, the problem is not one of liberating a subject people. "There is no liberation involved," he said, "there would simply be imperialistic annexation of a Portuguese people who, once merged, would then feel like a true colony. It is India which is practicing colonialism in Goa."

After warning of Communist agitation in Africa, where Portugal has important possessions, Dr. Cunha continued:

"The thoughtless spread of the anti-colonialist movement urgently requires a reappraisal. Acting as an inflexible anti-colonialist, the man of the West is unconsciously rendering the greatest service to his mortal enemy, the Communist agitator, who wishes nothing better than to remove from the arms of the Western nations the territories and populations which are indispensable to our survival.

"There is good colonialism and there is bad colonialism. Let us correct the latter, but let us not act blindly, simply by a system contrary to all colonialism and to everything resembling colonialism. Without perhaps realizing it, one is serving the cause of Communism by being so outspokenly anti-colonialist."

The effect of such an address, in Asia, where colonialism is still the number one whipping boy, can easily be seen.

Different From Britain.

It is true that by its policy of assimilation Portuguese colonial policy has differed from that of the British or French. Alphonso d'Albuquerque, who consolidated the Portuguese hold on Goa early in the sixteenth century, permitted, persuaded or forced, whatever the truth may be, native women to intermarry with his troops. Goa under the Portuguese became a seat of Christian influence in the Orient (the tomb of St. Francis Xavier, the Jesuit Missionary, is at Goa) and in succeeding generations Goans assumed distinctive characteristics. Goans have great affection for their homeland (not necessarily for Portuguese rule) and when they have left it to make a living elsewhere return as often as they can.

Indians deny Goans represent a particular social type sometimes called Luso-Indians, or that they have anything in common with European Portuguese. Some 388,000 citizens of Goa, Damao and Diu are Hindus and 234,000 are Roman Catholics, with 15,000 belonging to other religions. Goans speak Konkani, an Indian west coast dialect; residents of Damao and Diu speak Gujarati, an Indian regional language. Eight per cent or fewer Goans speak Portuguese.

The Portuguese base their claims on more than 400 years of control. Indians say the history of the Goan area goes back 5000 years, and as for four centuries, they note the Moors dominated Spain for seven. They point out that since 1775 there have been more than 30 revolts against the Portuguese in North Goa. They charge that since India gained its independence in 1947 Portugal has been bringing in European and African troops in support of its pledge to fight for Goa if necessary.

Portuguese overseas territories were called provinces until the beginning of this century when it became "smart" for European nations to have colonies. Goa then became a colony; Portugal meanwhile was turned from a "kingdom" into a "republic." In 1950, Goa again became a province. The changes in name were accompanied by minor administrative changes.

Portugal a Dictatorship.

Portugal is now a dictatorship under Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, who has said that "neither with nor without a plebisite can we negotiate the cession or the transfer of a single fraction of the national territory and its population." There is only one legal political party in Goa, the right of assembly is controlled, and censorship is strict, so that the views of the Goans are not easily ascertainable.

United States policy on Goa has undergone no recent change. In the spring of 1950 an official State Department spokesman said the department was confident the Indians would not try to absorb Goa against the wishes of its inhabitants. He added there was no reason why the United States should intervene in the negotiations between India and Portugal.

Dulles pointed out the United States has taken the position such claims should not be settled by force and that the Russians in their current tour were seeking to "create an atmosphere which might generate efforts to invoke force."

Nehru has rejected the use of force as a means of taking Goa but has been sharply criticized for this position by Indian Communists. The Indians closed their Lisbon legation in July 1953 and a year later forced Portugal to close its legation in New Delhi.

Indians unofficially have been trying to force the issue by "satyagraha" tactics, the nonviolent passive resistance methods developed by Mahatma Gandhi and used successfully in ending British rule. Thousands of satyagrahis sought to invade Goa last Aug. 15. Some 22 were killed by Portuguese soldiers after the troops fired two warning volleys. Since then, Indian guards have been posted to prevent satyagrahis from trying to enter Goa; in the last two months 170 have been turned back.

Nehru on Goa.

Nehru said in a speech last summer that Portuguese retention of Goa is a continuing interference with the Indian political system, that interference in the dispute by any other power would be interference with that system, and that continuance of the Portuguese foothold is untenable partly because when a country has a foothold so do its allies, and that might mean entanglements.

Goa is covered by article 4 of the NATO pact, which pledges the members to "consult together whenever, in the opinion of any of them, the territorial integrity, political independence or security of any of the parties is threatened."

The Portuguese say Goa is no great economic asset. It is part of the Portuguese chain of trading centers; however. Another is Macao on the China coast near the British colony of Hong Kong. Another is the territory of Mozambique in Africa, across the Indian ocean from Goa. The total area of "Portuguese India," including the separated territories of Goa, Damao and Diu (the three are usually referred to collectively as Goa) is 1537 square miles.

Most observers regard Indian absorption of the Portuguese provinces as a matter of time. Whether this will be accompanied by bloodshed no one knows. Portuguese think that as long as Nehru lives the pressures on them will be other than military. They do not speculate on what may happen after Nehru's death.

The Goa dispute inevitably recalls the furore raised in India two years ago by the United States decision to furnish military aid to neighboring Pakistan. In May of 1954, George V. Allen, United States Ambassador to India, told Congress:

"Practically all Indians are united in strong opposition and resentment at the American decision. They feel we have taken sides in a dispute between two nations with which we are in friendly relation, Pakistan and India, and see it as a very serious threat to India."

Commenting today, an Indian said he was not too sure of his ground on the arms issue, which Indians thought involved rival Pakistani-Indian claims on Kashmir, but as to Goa there was no doubt at all.

Richly Flavored Episode of an English Main Street

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

FRANK SWINNERTON

THE SUMNER INTRIGUE, by Frank Swinnerton. (Doubleday & Co., 320 pgs., $3.95.)

DR. ALEC SUMNER, the central character in Frank Swinnerton's novel "The Sumner Intrigue," is an unbelievable combination of humor, sweetness, modesty, wisdom and dedication to the highest ideals of his profession. By contrast his wife Adelaide is abnormally self-centered, socially ambitious, malicious, unmotherly and oversexed. In thus opposing two characters who are virtually unmixed representations of good and evil Mr. Swinnerton runs counter to the prevailing trend in realistic fiction. Modern usage requires "plausibility" which means that since human beings are complex mixtures of the good, the bad and the intermediate they should be so described.

Despite this voluntarily assumed handicap "The Sumner Intrigue" is an absorbing story with both a strong narrative line and an atmospheric setting. Moreover one element is as deftly managed as the other, so much so that the reader feels that he has been immersed in the life of a small English town by the time the story has unwound.

Being essentially benevolent and high-minded it is not surprising that Dr. Sumner should, in time, become an obstacle to others who are more ambitious and less responsive to major and minor scruples. Among these is another and a younger man, Dr. Camper, who wants to consolidate the medical services of the area—including the towns of Thorphill and East Thorphill—on a grander and more up-to-date basis. As Dr. Sumner is attached to the traditions of Thorphill, the older town, and wants to keep his small hospital in operation, he is Dr. Camper's enemy without knowing it.

CAMPER and the movement he is promoting is a menace only to Dr. Sumner's livelihood. His wife, Adelaide, however, becomes a threat to his home, his children and eventually to his life. At first she is just a profoundly dissatisfied wife who resents the narrow life of a small town because it offers no outlets for her social, intellectual and artistic ambitions. She never faces the fact that she would have very little to contribute even if such a milieu were accessible, and so, with plenty of time at her disposal, seeks ways and means of escape.

An opportunity presents itself when a young girl, whose sister has committed suicide, is given a temporary refuge in the Sumner home. Adelaide conceives the idea of involving the girl with her husband and thereby providing grounds for divorce. To this end she seeks the assistance of a former lover who quite subtly refuses to incriminate himself while suggesting that he would regard such an outcome—or a worse one—with satisfaction.

Then Dr. Sumner falls ill; and Adelaide, now mad with frustration sets herself the task of making sure that his illness takes a fatal turn. As the attending physician is none other than young Dr. Camper, the situation seems ominous for a while. But evil is defeated, temporarily at least.

MANY other characters are involved in the narrative line to a greater or less extent and all of them make contributions to the humors of a story which blends quite skillfully the elements of comedy, charm and irony. In general most of the characters are either for or against Dr. Sumner. The misanthropic watch repairer, who lives across the street from Dr. Sumner and secretly spies on the life of the town through a set of binoculars, is the only one who seems to change his mind toward the end.

If the characters were not so persuasively drawn "The Sumner Intrigue" would be nothing more than a suspense story with neurotic overtones. Since they are, it is a richly flavored episode of an English Main Street. As for "plausibility"—or the lack of it—Mr. Swinnerton proves quite successfully that it can be disregarded, in part, if a story conforms to experience and invites identification in other respects. So while the purity of character attributed to both Dr. Sumner and his wife seems arbitrary, many aspects of their behavior will be immediately recognized.

LITERATURE

The Hebrew Masterpiece

LIFE AND LANGUAGE IN THE OLD TESTAMENT, by Mary Ellen Chase. (Norton, 201 pgs., $3.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

MARY ELLEN CHASE'S many admirers will welcome her new work on the Bible, which is a companion, or rather an addition, to her much-loved "The Bible and the Common Reader," which appeared in 1944. The new book grew out of the first, but confines itself to the Old Testament.

In seeking to penetrate the mind and character of the people who produced that unique masterpiece of literature and to interpret their writings in the light of that knowledge, Miss Chase too modestly disclaims profound learning. She says that her book, like its predecessor, is intended only for the common, or general, reader. There is no doubt that the common reader will read it with delight, but what impresses me is the amount of learning that has been packed into it.

It is the learning of one who has thought long and studied deeply on her subject, who has taught it to class after class of college students, and who has allowed the knowledge thus distilled to permeate her mind so that she is able to set it forth with a clarity and beauty of expression and sureness of touch which completely avoids the kind of mustiness that all too often overcomes the scholar who digs into original documents.

Miss Chase shows the influence on the Hebrew mind of the physical character of the land of Canaan, of the Hebrews' concept of history—their belief that they were a chosen people, so that for them there was no history without religion and no religion apart from history—and their idea of time—which knew nothing of exact chronology.

AMONG the interesting and distinctive qualities of the Hebrews she brings out are their vigor and robustness—the fact that they are always running and never walking, except in peril or despair—and their lack of concern with sickness. Illness, when it is mentioned in the Old Testament, is presented as the consequence of sin, not the result of a physical condition.

One of the most fascinating sections of the book is where the author compares and contrasts the Hebrews and Greeks as story tellers—two peoples who lived at approximately the same time but, so far as is known, were completely unaware of each other's existence, but who possessed in common many similar ideas and points of view.

Both understood the importance of tradition in the life of peoples and both wanted to preserve their respective national epics in writing. Homer's "Odyssey" and the Jacob-Joseph saga of Genesis have many similarities—yet how striking are their differences! While brevity and omission are the marks of the one, fullness of description characterizes the other. Homer leaves nothing out, and nothing to the imagination, whereas the Hebrew writers include only the barest bones of their story, and the number of questions they leave unanswered is legion.

But, says Miss Chase, it is in these very omissions that the power of these stories lies. She very aptly compares the effect they produce to that imparted by the scattered stones of some ancient building, now in ruins, like Stonehenge.

"The stones stand about in the grass with wide spaces between them, each one a part of a whole, yet each more full of meaning in its very solitude. We can reconstruct the building if we like, but many of us will not wish to do so, seeing in the single stones an indefinable charm, nameless and ageless, which the completed building could never convey regardless of its beauty."

IN other words, the Homeric poets, revealing everything and concealing nothing, "trail few invisible meanings within their thousands of beautiful phrases and intricate, detailed similes," whereas the very silences of the Hebrew writers are laden with meaning and evoke responses impossible to Homer.

Furthermore, Miss Chase insists that the Hebrew imagination, while very different from the Hellenic, was no whit inferior to it. "Can we doubt," she asks, "that the Old Testament from beginning to end is the work of religious imagination? And that this imagination lies behind and within all its tradition, its history, even its law? Through the strange, identifying power of that imagination its history becomes a universal history, the story of mankind from the beginning of time to its end. Its emotions cease to be those of individuals living at any certain age or in any certain place, but become instead the accumulated, changeless emotions of countless generations. Its law in its highest sense is but the restless, imperfect, eternal strivings of the human soul after righteousness."

THE first of these books for the music-minded is a scholarly effort designed primarily for historians, students, performers and collectors. Dr. Winternitz, for many years curator at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and teacher of music history at Yale, has made a valuable contribution with this two-volume discussion of the evolution of conventions in the writing of music and the general history of its notation. He touches on the calligraphy of nearly 80 well-known composers in tracing the changes in musical script, shapes of notes, expression marks, scoring methods and writing tools.

The plates of volume two are of manuscripts borrowed from valuable collections from around the world. A Monteverdi composition of 1642 is the starter; Hindemith's Symphony in B Flat for Concert Band is the finale. There are pages by Handel on which notes are like hordes of ants; neat and tiny clusters of Debussy noteheads that look like "a bed of tender young grape hyacinths"; chaotic, jungle-like sketches by Beethoven; architectural blueprints by Stravinsky and Bartok. Every page has its own fascination.

THOSE familiar with the similar collection of Rodgers and Hart songs and Noel Coward songs will know what to expect in the handsome volume of Kern tunes. The lyrics by Kern's various partners are there, too. There are 50 songs, running from "How'd You Like to Spoon With Me" of 1905, to "All Through the Day" of 1946. "Sally," "Sunny," "Bill," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris" are a few of those in between. The hit-parade between these covers is a pleasant reminder that Kern, who died 10 years ago, is still very much alive musically. A book like this comes in mighty handy when the gang comes over for parlor singing.

An equally attractive anthology which would also serve well for informal group singing at this time of year is Mr. Simon's collection of carols. Editor of like volumes containing hymns and operatic excerpts, Mr. Simon gathers here more than a hundred selections ranging from the most familiar carols to traditional carols from many lands and works by such composers as Bach, Brahms, Schubert, Haydn and Mozart that have become associated with the season. There is a special section of Christmas rounds and catches. The piano arrangements (not difficult) are new and there are charming illustrations by Raffaello Busoni, plus interesting descriptive information about each song.

Leonard Feather is one of our busiest writers about jazz. And being himself a musician he speaks with more than the usual authority. Here he presents biographical material on 1065 jazz instrumentalists, singers, arrangers, composers and band and combo leaders. His people trace the art from its beginning and come right up to Dave Brubeck. Sentiment creeps in and he includes a few personages who aren't hot jazz artists, per se, but no one's complaining. This, no mistaking, is a valuable contribution to jazz documentation; it is an important reference book. Feather is a champion of modern jazz, but his book is objective. There are 200 photographs, a foreword by Duke Ellington, and a good capsule history of jazz by Feather himself.

VIOLINIST Menuhin is a qualified subject for a biography even though his fortieth birthday is still four months away. He has been and has done so much since he was a child. Mr. Magidoff covers it all—the family background, the boy prodigy, sheltered adolescence and early manhood, the breaking away from parental obsession that nothing should divert his art, the personal suffering upon discovering his violin playing technique was actually faulty, the decision finally to retool it. Menuhin's bitter struggle between genius and reality is told with sympathetic frankness.

There is no end in sight for books from David Ewen. He seems to bat out another one before the ink of his last one has dried. This one about opera may well be what the jacket says—"the first book of its kind ever published anywhere." It is an encyclopedia, all right. Just look up Farfarello, and there it is: A devil (bass) in Prokofieff's "The Love for Three Oranges." The pronunciation guide that closes the book is a good idea.

BIOGRAPHY

Benchley by His Son

ROBERT BENCHLEY, by Nathaniel Benchley. (McGraw-Hill, 258 pgs., $3.95.)

Reviewed by JOHN KEASLER

THIS biography of the late Robert Benchley is done by one of his sons, himself a good writer, as he shows conclusively in this book—it's tough to write about a subject so close to one's self without either bogging down in pseudo-objectivity or else flying off in the other extreme.

Nathaniel Benchley does neither; has instead, with his own keen humor—he's a great man with a throwaway line—produced a wonderfully entertaining, thoroughly researched story, a biography which actually brings a human being into focus.

Practically everybody is, or feels he is, an authority on Robert Benchley, the humorist. At least on the Famous Robert Benchley. Some of the funniest parts of his life, funny in retrospect anyhow, happened, however, when he was still an outstanding nonentity.

Benchley, who died in 1945 at the age of 56, was a Harvard man, not that that necessarily is funny in itself, but he failed to get his degree with the rest of his class. He resolved an essay question, on the Newfoundland Fisheries dispute, by writing from the viewpoint of the fish, for which he received an "F"—as in fish.

THE first story he wrote was published 42 years later. He collected rejection slips. Various magazines, publishing companies, and the New York World, refused to hire him.

All this would have made a better strive-and-succeed story, except Robert wasn't particularly desolated — and far from single-minded in his purpose. He had a vague idea he would like to teach, another vague idea about social work, ended up, at one point, writing advertisements for peanut butter.

How he became to be America's leading humorist was almost a case of Benchley Despite Himself. His first job, somehow—and we never got quite straight on this—was secretary at an art museum, which terminated with both him and his employers agreeing it had all been a ghastly mistake. Then he became editor of a house organ, arriving late his first day on the job, and for sometime thereafter.

His stock at one ad firm plummeted when he came up with the heresy that men's clothing wasn't worn by men who looked like square-jawed gods. But he persevered and soon reached the position where he was behind in his payment at the Harvard Club, and refused credit at Rogers Peet. He had difficulty writing ad copy because it was a matter of complete indifference to him whether the product sold or not.

HE couldn't sell his stories, but reputation as a humorous speaker was growing. Then some of his light pieces landed. But he wanted to do really Good Writing, an ambition he never got over or ever felt he had fulfilled. That was a sad thing to him, all his life.

He became drama critic of the old Life in 1920; his Vanity Fair pieces were adding to his reputation. His speeches were things of splendor. At a dinner following the Harvard-Yale game he translated from the Chinese, having introduced the eminent Professor Soong. Professor Soong's subject was the history of the lateral pass. The audience swallowed the spoof whole hog.

As Benchley became famous, through his writing and then his motion picture shorts, he gave up teetotaling. His hotel room was a gathering place in New York for all sorts of folks. He took on a secretary, a Mr. MacGregor, whom he met standing in the rain in front of the public library, holding a bunch of violets.

BENCHLEY once was dosed with a then-new "miracle drug" and was asked the next day by his rather worried doctor what the effect had been. Benchley said he had been worrying about one little thing and threw back the covers, giving the good doctor pause — inasmuch as Benchley had carefully pasted feathers all around his lower midriff.

His son's book is far from being just a collection of anecdotes. He gives a good picture of Benchley, the entire man; his sadnesses and compassion, and how he viewed the world he found here. In the last line in the book, after the undertaker opened the urn supposedly containing his ashes and to his dismay found it empty, Benchley's wife spoke.

"You know," she said, "I can hear him laughing now." So can lots of folks.

THE TRADE WIND ISLANDS, by Dane Chandos. (Doubleday & Co., 256 pgs., $3.75.)

TWO JAMAICAS, by Philip D. Curtin. (Harvard University Press, 270 pgs., $4.75.)

Reviewed by
ADELE STARBIRD

IF you have ever visited the West Indies, you will read Mr. Chandos' Caribbean sketchbook with reminiscent delight. If you are planning to go there, you will read it for information and travel tips. If you know that for some reason you can never feel the trade winds on your cheek, you will read it for the illusion that once you were a part of the Islands.

The author flew from his home in Mexico to Cuba, thence to the Dutch island of Curacao, and on to Jamaica, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and Barbados. This is known as island-hopping. From Barbados he sailed to St. Lucia, St. Vincent's, Grenada and Trinidad, reaching Port-of-Spain in time for the Carnival. His last chapter, getting himself back home to Mexico, always a delicate literary operation, is a feat of composition.

Mr. Chandos not only knows how to compose; he has the light touch, and he reports accurately. His ear caught the exact cadence of the native English sing-song and of French Creole, and he uses dialogue extensively to lighten his narrative. His nose has identified all the smells of the Islands, and his eye has photographed the movement and color of a naturally dramatic people against a spectacular background of flowering trees and shrubs. Nor is the sense of taste neglected; he describes all that he has eaten and drunk, how it is served and what it cost. As he says, "the powerful appeal of the Islands is to the senses rather than to the intellect."

No less accurate are the bits of political science, economics and history, introduced so casually between breakfast and lunch, or between one airport and the next, that the reader is scarcely aware of absorbing data.

Nor can one quarrel with his final pronouncement: "All through the West Indies you have the sense that no major culture ever flourished there, that the Islands lay always on the fringes of alien civilizations, that artistic originality is missing or barely beginning." But one wishes that Chandos had taken time to discuss the native art and literature of Haiti, which began about 40 years ago as a reaction against the American occupation, and the new books coming from Martinique, neither French nor African, but a blend of both. Something is stirring in the Islands.

TWO JAMAICAS is a scholarly work dealing with the impact of foreign humanitarian ideas upon white planters and their slaves from 1830 to 1865, together with the economic and social consequences for both groups. The planters hated the British missionaries, who, they felt, stirred the slaves to rebellion, and interfered with their own easy, not to say loose, way of life. The planters themselves, unlike some of the Southern planters in the United States, had felt no moral obligation for the religious life or the education of their slaves; they didn't even teach them to speak English, preferring to learn a kind of jargon which developed between slaves and overseers, which is spoken to this day in some parts of Jamaica.

Mr. Curtin agrees with the sociologists, M. J. and F. S. Herskovits, that the cultural focus of the Negro in the Americas as a whole has been in the field of religion, and that the religious emphasis is not simply the reflection of the interests of missionaries, but is inherent and characteristic. He feels that the cultural focus of the white planter on the other hand has been economic success. The Negroes, therefore, borrowed religious ideas from Europe, and adapted them; the whites borrowed economic ideas to help their disrupted economy. "Ideas rarely move without being transformed in the process; like the chameleons they change to fit their background."

An objective and dispassionate book, thoroughly documented, "Two Jamaicas" makes a contribution to the history of ideas in the New World.

STOCKS FAIL IN EFFORT FOR NEW HIGH CLOSING PRICE

Failure of Directors of Two Big Institutions, With Shares Listed, to Declare for Stock Splits, Brings Sharp Reactions.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—The stock market tried vainly all week to make a decisive break into record high ground, but it failed. Considerable significance was attached to this week's performance by those who lean heavily on charts for their interpretation of what the market is doing and intends to do. No alarm was raised by the market's lack of vigor. However, there was a lot of disappointment among the bullish element in Wall Street. That group has wanted a show of strength to develop so that they could firmly believe that the end of the year would see a sparkling rally, a customary development.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks ended the week at $181.30. That is a gain on the week of 80 cents, but it fell short of getting through the old record high of $181.50. That mark was established last Sept. 23, the day before the President suffered his heart attack. Then came the market's "cardiac crash." Last Monday the market marked its complete recovery when the Associated Press average of 60 stocks again got back to $181.50. Although it was able to reach that figure, it never was able to go through it on a closing basis. It penetrated the top a little during the day, but it never was able to hold those peaks to the finish.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 6.92 points to 487.64 at the end of the week, just .16 of a point under the record high. The 20 rail index was down .71, ending 164.74 and the 15 utilities off .05 at 65.82. The composite average of the 65 stocks was up .72 to 173.76 after reaching a new 1955 high of 174.21.)

The volume, 13,093,322 shares was more than the 12,490,408 of the preceding week. Of the 1414 issues traded 730 were higher, 514 lower and 192 unchanged.

The market's behavior during the week made it look as though the bulls were getting tired for the moment, even, though economic and corporate developments gave every encouragement possible to the market.

It was noted, however, that acute weakness didn't spread through the market despite a number of opportunities. When Santa Fe Railroad directors took no action to split the company's stock, it immediately fell 5½, but other rails were not hurt. It was the same when J. C. Penney directors didn't mention a split. The stock was off 4¾, but others weren't drawn into the decline.

The action of Superior Oil of California was of interest. The stock advanced to a high of 1080 and in the process became the king of the high-priced stocks. The move eclipsed Coca-Cola International which held at 1015 without trading all week. By Friday, Superior Oil was in second place again when it slipped back to 1000.

CASH MARKETS AGAIN SUPPORT GRAIN LIST

December Wheat Leads Upturn—Aggresive Buying in New Crop.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (AP)—Firmness in cash markets again provided the main stimulant for advancing grain futures on the board of trade this week. It was the second straight week of advance, although oats lagged. This was the case last week, too. On the upturn wheat took over the leadership from corn. Wheat closed 2⅜-4½ higher for the week, corn 1¼-2⅜ higher, oats ⅜ lower to ¾ higher, rye 2½-4¾ higher, soybeans ¾-2½ higher and lard 22 to 35 cents a hundred pounds lower.

December wheat led the upturn, although there also was some pretty aggressive buying in new crop futures. Dealings became uite active. Wheat has now advanced in five of the last seven weeks.

The upturn in the past couple of weeks has been much greater for cash grain than for futures. This is true of corn as well as wheat.

No. 2 hard wheat closed nominally this week at $2.13¼ compared with $2.02¼ two weeks ago. No. 2 yellow corn closed at $1.30 compared with $1.17¾. That's an 11-cent gain for wheat and a 12¼-cent gain for corn. By way of comparison December wheat, the strongest wheat future, is up 7⅛ cents for the two weeks. December corn is up 3¾ cents.

COMMODITY PRICE INDEX IS HIGHER FOR THE WEEK

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Associated Press index of important commodity prices advanced this week for the second week in a row.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

CHRISTMAS BUYING

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.

AN unprecedented burst of Christmas spending put new life in the business boom this week. Everybody, it seemed, was in the chips. Personal income, at latest count, was at an annual rate of 309½ billion dollars. That's a gain of more than 21 billions in just one year. Jobs were plentiful. Despite seasonal layoffs in farming and construction, nearly 63,000,000 Americans had steady work. Many of them put in longer hours. And factory wage rates were at an all-time high.

Stockholders had cause for cheer. Cash dividends at latest report were running 9½ per cent ahead of last year. Dividends paid out by publicly reporting corporations in the first 10 months came to nearly 7¾ billion dollars.

Free Spending Mood.

Business was in a free-spending mood, too. Government experts said spending by business firms would show a thumping gain next year. In the first three months of 1956, said the U.S. Commerce Department, companies will be shelling out money for new plant and equipment at the rate of 31½ billions a year. This year's spending came to around 28½ billions.

Output of electric power touched a never-before-equalled peak of 11,359,000,000 kilowatt hours as booming America turned on the Christmas lights.

Most striking evidence of the pre-Christmas surge, was at the retail level. The United States Chamber of Commerce said record Christmas spending in department stores and specialty shops would boost the nation's 1955 retail trade to a new high of 185 billion dollars. A sharp rise in gift buying this week was reported by Dun & Bradstreet. The gain was so large that it more than offset a decline in sales of home appliances and television sets.

TOP HOG PRICE LEVEL BETWEEN $12 AND $12.50

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Dec. 10 (USDA—Weekly review of the livestock market):

Marketings of hogs were slightly reduced but with wholesale pork trade mostly showing weakness, barrows and gilts over 230 lbs. and all weights of sows finished the week mostly 25c lower, lighter weights mostly steady with spots 25c higher. Top prices ranged from $12 Wednesday to $12.50 for about 50 head Friday. For the week, bulk of 180 to 230 lbs. sold at $11@12, 230 to 270 lbs. $10@11.50, 270 to 325 lbs. $9.25@10.75, 140 to 170 lbs. $10.50@11.50, and sows $7.95@9.

EGG PRICES MIXED ON WEEK

ST. LOUIS BUTTER, EGG and POULTRY EXCHANGE, Dec. 10—Egg and poultry market as reported by the "St. Louis Daily Market Reporter":

I HAD TO EARN $200 A WEEK

So I sent $6 to The Wall Street Journal

High prices and taxes were getting me down. I had to have $200 a week or reduce my standard of living. Like Alice in Wonderland, I had to run faster to stay in the same place.

So I started reading The Wall Street Journal. I heeded its warnings. I cashed in on the ideas it gave me for earning extra income and cutting expenses. I got the money I needed. Now I'm slowly forging ahead. Believe me, reading The Journal every day is a wonderful get-ahead plan.

This experience is typical. Each day The Wall Street Journal tells you about far-reaching changes taking place in America. New inventions. New industries. New ways of doing business. New opportunities to earn money. The Journal gives you quick warning of any new trend that may affect your pocketbook. The Journal is a wonderful aid to salaried men making $7,000 to $20,000 a year. It is valuable to the owner of a small business. It can be of priceless benefit to young men who want to win advancement.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs only $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for three months for $6. Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you.

Published daily right in the Midwest to bring you vital business and Washington news immediately. Address: The Wall Street Journal, 711 W. Monroe St., Chicago 6, Ill.

A Million of Anything is an impressive figure, but a million Want Ads is particularly impressive because it represents the hundreds of ways the average family can use advertising. More than a million Want Ads have been published in the Post-Dispatch during the past year—the Want Ad section is packed with interest for both buyer and seller! Ask about the low 7-day rate. Phone MAin 1-1111, ask for an adtaker and say "Charge It"! Adtakers are on duty daily except Sunday from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Call now!

ASSERTS U.S. SHOULD CHARTER BIG COMPANIES

O'Mahoney Discusses His Investigation of Business Practices of G. M.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP) —Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, who has just completed an investigation of General Motors business practices, said today the Federal Government, instead of the states, should charter all corporations engaged in interstate and foreign business.

The Wyoming Democrat's Senate monopoly subcommittee wound up five weeks of hearings yesterday on the relationship of giant General Motors to the national economy.

"My contention regarding corporations engaged in interstate and foreign business is that their charters should be issued by the Federal Government," O'Mahoney told the United Press. "These charters should set forth in plain words the powers, duties and responsibilities of these corporations."

Silent on Committee Report.

He declined to say whether federal chartering would be part of a legislative program resulting from the subcommittee's hearings. He said the proposed legislation would not be disclosed until the subcommittee completes an interim report next month.

He added, however, that he thought the national economy would benefit if the Federal Government became the chartering authority for many of the nation's giant corporations.

"The General Motors Corp., for example, is the largest manufacturing company in the world," he said. "It is an economic state which influences every community in the United States.

"But, it is actually governed or is capable of being governed by the 50 largest stockholders out of a total of more than 540,000."

'Wholly Nonpartisan.'

O'Mahoney said his investigation of General Motors was "a wholly nonpartisan affair" that many Democratic and Republican members of the Senate are interested in.

"If there ever was a bipartisan hearing this was it," he said.

He indicated he expected strong support for the legislation the subcommittee may recommend.

The subcommittee still has to hear testimony from five Chicago automobile and car-rental agency dealers. Otherwise, its hearings are completed.

General Motors President Harlow H. Curtice told the subcommittee yesterday that bigness was not an important factor in his company's success.

"Size has nothing to do with the ability of a company to compete in this industry," he said.

NEW, FISH-LIKE ATOM SUBMARINE PLANNED BY NAVY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (UP) —The Navy plans to build a small atomic submarine with a revolutionary-type hull. It will be more maneuverable and faster underwater than the Nautilus — the first atomic-powered submarine.

The vessel will have a flat-sided, fish-like hull design that may lead to a revolution in the shape of underwater craft. It will be about half the size of the 3000-ton Nautilus and more comparable to the efficient attack class submarines of World War II.

The new hull shape is called the Albacore design.

The maximum underwater speed of the new submarine will exceed the 25 knots credited to the Nautilus when it is submerged.

The Navy also announced that three conventional diesel-powered submarines in this year's shipbuilding program will be changed to the new hull design. The atomic submarine also is a change in plans and not an addition.

The Navy said the new small submarine will be "superior to the Nautilus, Sea Wolf or any of its other nuclear-powered predecessors in all aspects of its underwater characteristics." It will be powered by one instead of two propellers.

CARE CRUSADE CIRCULARS TO BE DISTRIBUTED HERE

Circulars describing the CARE Food Crusade to help feed needy persons of foreign countries will be distributed to customers by member firms of the St. Louis Restaurant Association and the IGA Food Stores, it was announced yesterday.

The two organizations have more than 250 members each. Their restaurants and food stores will receive the circulars this week, which explain how to send $1 CARE packages containing an average of more than 20 pounds of Government surplus food.

Orders can be sent to CARE local headquarters in the downtown or Clayton stores of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Co., to the local Railway Express Agency and CARE, New York.

DR. COMPTON TO SPEAK

Arthur Holly Compton, distinguished service professor of natural philosophy at Washington University, will discuss "Science and the Government" Tuesday at a luncheon meeting of the Greater St. Louis Federal Business Association. The meeting will be held at 12:15 p.m. at the York Hotel.

JESUS AND HIS TIMES

By DANIEL-ROPS

In the second installment of his book, "Jesus and His Times," in Monday's EVERYDAY MAGAZINE, author Daniel-Rops describes how Jesus started His mission. He gives an interesting and informative description of Christ's first public acts against the backdrop of the scenery, the customs and the turbulent events of the time. He also reveals the little known background of the meeting between Jesus and the woman of Samaria. "Jesus and His Times" is appearing daily and Sunday in 12 dramatic installments.

John Archibald Will Report Chicago Bowling Championship

JOHN J. ARCHIBALD

Eight St. Louis bowlers, six men and two women, will compete at Chicago this week in the national individual match game bowling championship. Among them is Don Carter, champion in 1953 and 1954, who has been seeded into the finals. Post-Dispatch sports writer John J. Archibald will cover the finals which begin on Thursday. For a first-hand report of this national bowling event, read Archibald's detailed report daily in the sports section.

Living Room in St. Charles Home Before, After

This is how the living room of the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Budke, 1029 Madison st., St. Charles, looked before a St. Louis interior designer took over. White ceiling, now "completely out of date", the "horse blanket" draped over the sofa, the flouncy valance, gingerbread drapes and slip covers, gave general antiquated appearance.

As seen from an angle 120 degrees to the left, same room now has seating nearly doubled without crowding. In plastic and glass cocktail table swim tropical fish. Tropical plants grow around base. Draperies match or complement wall colors.

Architects' Model Shows How New Second Baptist Building and Childress Home Will Look Together

This is a model from Architect Frederick Dunn & Associates showing how building proposed for Second Baptist Church will fit in with former Wade Childress home on property at Clayton and McKnight roads, which church acquired some time ago. Note how windows in new building will reach right into the roof line.

St. Charles Home Gets Modern Look

Fish swimming in the cocktail table, wooden cats a-tangle with yards of brass string, a hunk of driftwood twisted by nature into grotesque patterns — and Queen Nefertiti eyes it all calmly!

No gibberish, this. Just one way of describing a few of the highlights of the newly-renovated home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Budke, 1029 Madison st. in St. Charles. By this work, Norven Bly, St. Louis interior designer, has booted all traces of the gingerbread school of decorating out the window, and replaced it with the clean, flowing lines and curves of modern.

The home itself, erected nearly 40 years ago, has a charming simplicity of design, lending itself to conversion to modern much more easily than many latter-day structures.

Working with a closely guarded budget, Bly eyed the white-mantled, red brick fireplace. It would be the logical thing to rip it out, replace with crab orchard stone. But then he noticed the pleasing lines of the bricks. And for the cost of a quart of paint (cocoa), the bricks were changed to an asset. They were accented by painting the mortar buff. The traditional white mantel, of course, had to go.

French Doors Out.

Another of the living area's more painful sights was a pair of built-in bookcases flanking the fireplace. Since television and the social visit have replaced reading as the main order of living room activity, the decorator had sound reason for ripping them out. The pleasing result of this action was apparent even before painting—the areas stopped commanding attention, instead directed the eye to the rehabilitated fireplace.

A pair of French doors leading to the dining room was adjacent to the bookcases, near the far wall. In keeping with the general trend to combine living and dining areas, these doors were removed and their wood moldings, leaving a perfectly square archway, with only a token break on the far wall (concealing a load-bearing member) marking the dividing line between the two rooms. A door leading from the living area to the kitchen also was removed, forming another square arch.

The front wall of the living area was painted cocoa, together with an adjacent wall. The other two walls blend smoothly in buff. The ceiling too was painted buff.

Over the low, wide series of leaded windows on the cocoa (front) wall, hang two sets of silk, apron length draperies, hung on separate traverse rods. The inner is a perfect match of the buff wall opposite. The set exposed to the room is in chocolate, complementing the cocoa wall. Thus, by parting the outer drapes slightly, a two-tone effect may be observed, adding color and warmth to the room.

The drapery treatment of the two windows on the far (buff) wall is exactly the opposite, with the buff fabric covering the chocolate.

Monarch Looks On.

Then came the furnishings. First thing down was a plush cotton carpet. Including the foam rubber pad, the floor covering is exactly one inch thick.

With the fireplace as a focal point, one straight and one curved piece from a three-piece buff and brown metallic sectional. The third piece faces this unit, next to the fireplace. Thus was broken one of the oldest wives' tales in modern interior design—that it is unlawful to separate the pieces of a curved sectional.

Substituting for an arm on the end of the curved section is a platinum mahogany step table, and it is from this step that the ceramic bust of the Egyptian monarch, Nefertiti, casts its expressionless gaze.

A matching end table sep-

This is a view of the opposite side of the new Second Baptist Church building to be erected at Clayton and McKnight roads.

Roof High Windows in New Church

Fenestration in the new church to be erected for the Second Baptist Congregation on the former Wade Childress estate, Clayton at McKnight road, in Richmond Heights, will include a wide sweep of glass running from floor to roof on the north side and a group of more narrow windows running floor to roof on the south side, infusing cathedral atmosphere into a strictly contemporary design.

Architect Frederick Dunn & Associates have done the design for the proposed $300,000 structure, which will have a nave to seat 400 persons, and room for installation of the Avis Blewett memorial organ, which will be moved from the building that the church sold at Kingshighway and Washington avenue. The choir loft, in the rear, will provide for 55 persons.

The new building will be integrated with the Wade Childress home, a white-painted structure now being used for church purposes, by painting the brick of the church building white.

The property will face Clayton road at 9030 west. It will be 50 by 124 feet, and 35 feet high. There will be a free-standing tower for cross and carillion.

A fellowship hall, underneath the nave, will open onto a terrace and recreational area on the south side of the building.

The church is the first of two buildings to be erected on the site. The other will be a Sunday school or educational building, adjoining the church. After the church is completed next year, the residence will continue to be used for Sunday school purposes until the educational building can be erected.

Ground breaking is expected early next spring, with completion before the end of the year.

Brush Maker Buys Locust St. Building

Ralph Bentzinger Sr., president of the Bentzinger Bros. Brush Co., has purchased from the Sylmar Investment Co., a corporation, a six-story brick building numbered 308-10 Locust street, at Locust and Memorial Drive, reports the Francis P. Healy Real Estate Co., agent in the deal.

The property has 50,000 square feet of floor space. It fronts a little over 64 feet on the west side of Memorial Drive and a little over 109 feet on Locust.

Bentzinger owns property immediately south of the building, too, the agent said.

Consideration, as indicated by stamps on the deed, was $100,000.

The building is under lease to the International Hat Co.

More Details On Boat, Motor Company Sale

Because incomplete information was given to the Post-Dispatch, a report last week of purchase of the St. Louis Boat & Motor Co. by Ed Rippy, an auto dealer, contained an error of fact and led to incorrect conclusions on the part of some readers, the paper has now been informed.

The report stated that the property was sold by Mrs. Lawrence Wickett, widow of the man who had formerly operated the business, but she was, actually, only a partial owner, being a stockholder in a corporation that owned the business. The Post-Dispatch is now informed that the property, although not bankrupt, had been turned over to David K. Breed, lawyer, as trustee under a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, having approximate total assets of $108,000 and approximate total libilities of $73,000.

Breed reports that the assets were sold to Rippy for $100,000 cash. The report of the transaction last week stated that Rippy was investing $250,000. This figure, $150,000 more than was paid to Breed, included merchandise on consignment and improvements involved in restoration of the business to a fullfledged operation, which are not part of the original assets for which Breed was paid.

First Building Moved for Page Street Widening

Jess W. Schroll, house mover, reports completion of the moving of the first building undertaken in connection with the widening of Page avenue west. The building is that of the Vinita Hardware Store, 8114 Page.

The building, 30 by 50, with an 8 by 30 foot loading dock on one side, was moved back 25 feet Thursday from its former position, Schroll said.

Philos Easy to Grow Indoors

Bold leaves of members of the Aroid family, such as the "Swiss cheese" plant (Monstera deliciosa, pictured at the right) give a dramatic effect in the window of a contemporary residence. Although most Aroids can take it "hot and dry," they appreciate frequent shower baths, which may be applied with a syringe or small garden sprayer.

Aroid Plant Needs But Little Care

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE

Among the most accommodating of house plants are the philodendrons, easy-to-grow members of the Aroid family. For this reason there has been much interest in the Missouri Botanical Garden's display of 65 different philos—the largest collection in this country.

Many of these philodendrons are growing in seemingly natural settings among palms and other exotic plants in the Garden's greenhouses. Potted philodendrons in wide variety also may be seen in the new Aroid Pithouse, designed to simulate the rain-forest environment of the tropics.

The Garden's director, Dr. Edgar Anderson, declares that such special recognition is due the philodendron. "The average American now spends more time in the company of Aroids than any other plants," he explains. "These tropical vines come to us from areas that are alternately hot-and-dry and warm-and-rainy. Life in such conditions is good preparation for life in an apartment house window box, with no water at all for a week, and then a pitcher full of cold water all at once.

"Philodendron dubium (which is the juvenile form of P. radiatum) is one of the toughest of all. It often grows in rocky wells, where the light is diffuse and the air is cool during much of the day. Then, for a few midday moments, the burning sun shines directly down the well.

"Burning sun, dim light, weeks of drouth, torrents of rain! The plant had a long experience with these terrors before we brought it into our homes."

Happy On Window Sills.

The common philodendron, the Heartleaf (P.cordatum) might be called a Missouri Botanical Garden debutante. Five of these vines were brought to the Garden from their native Brazil in 1869. A sturdy veteran, which now grows luxuriantly on the wall in the wing of the Floral Display House, is one of the few greenhouse plants remaining from Henry Shaw's time.

Some 43 years ago cuttings from this philodendron were given to the Bordet Floral company, to test its possibilities as a commercial plant. This little wildling was so quickly domesticated that it now grows happily on window sills in millions of homes, stores and offices.

"The Heartleaf philodendron can be recommended for the most adverse growing conditions," says Ladislaus Cutak.

Work on Chapel Begun for County Mission

This is a sketch from Architect Froese, Maack & Becker of chapel for which excavation was begun Dec. 1 on a five-acre tract on Mason road, 450 feet south of Clayton road. William Greenwald & Sons, Kirkwood, is general contractor.

Work Begun On Mission In County

Work has been started, on a five-acre tract about 450 feet south of Clayton road on Mason road, of a 120-seat chapel, first unit in a long-range building program for the Church of the Good Sheperd, a mission of the Protestant Episcopal Church, operated under sponsorship of St. Peter's Church of Ladue.

Architects Froese, Maack & Becker have designed the building and William Greenwald & Sons, Kirkwood, has the general contract, at $67,500. Construction will include part of the church school wing of the building, in addition to the chapel, to provide for kitchen, restrooms, and multiple-purpose room for the serving of dinners and for other gatherings.

Two rooms on the second floor of the chapel will be arranged to serve as a classroom and as a "cry" room, a glass partition separating the cry-room from the nave. There also will be a study at the south side of the chapel.

The chapel walls are to be brick inside and out. The school area will have brick over haydite block, with the haydite on the exposed interior wall, painted.

The entire construction will be on concrete slab.

The altar is to be free-standing, with semi-circular railing for use of 12 communicants at a time.

Separate contracts are to be let for grading and for equipment.

Plans for future construction call for a parish hall, an extended church school wing and ultimately a church to seat 335. When the church is built, the present chapel will become part of the school.

The congregation meets temporarily in the Old Manchester School at Manchester. The Rev. Paul A. Bankston is vicar. The Rev. William H. Laird, D.D., is rector of the sponsoring Ladue church.

Agency Is Moved

The agency of P. D. Hufford, realtors, which has been 7229 Clayton road in Richmond Heights for 20 years, has been moved to new quarters at 149 North Meramec, Clayton.

Declares Buildings Do Constant Hoochy-Coochy

"Every little molecule has a movement of its own, and our buildings dance the hoochy-coochy all the time. The hotter the temperature the wilder the dance, and the dance never stops unless the temperature gets down to absolute zero, which isn't likely, because that's 459.4 degrees below zero on the Fahrenheit scale, and even scientists haven't gotten anything that cold yet, though they've come close to it.

"Because every bit of matter is in motion all the time, we ought to quit trying to build absolutely rigid buildings and put in a few lubricated ball and socket joints like those in the human body. If our bodies were built like we build our buildings we'd have arthritis from infancy," declared Prof. Walter C. Voss, professor emeritus of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, here last Wednesday night. He spoke to more than 220 persons, about 200 of whom are practicing St. Louis architects, at a dinner session in the Gatesworth hotel, sponsored by the Presstite Engineering Co.

In addition to constant movement within matter itself, every building, Prof. Voss pointed out, is subject to impingement by heat, air, sound, water, light and gravity, all of which can and do pull and push a building every which way a little or a whole lot, constantly.

Water Travels Fast.

Speaking often with slightly satirical appraisal of the work of architects and engineers in building construction, he kept the audience rocking with laughter a good part of the time. He wouldn't have sounded funny to a housewife worrying about an increasing number of cracks in the plaster of her living room or dining area, nor would he have sounded funny to the man worrying about a crack all up and down the basement wall, or to a manufacturer worrying about that crack all the way up the south warehouse wall. But that's what he was being sarcastically funny about.

Because materials are doing a dance all the time and because different materials expand and contract at different rates, one impinging on another or pulling away from another will cause the damage. Too many building materials that are put together are not compatible, not even concrete and steel (for example) and lime from mortar will corrode aluminum.

"When we come to the role of water in our problem we have a more serious situation," declared Prof. Voss. "It may appear as rain or snow, as vapor or as a condensate. It travels swiftly through capillary tubes or cracks. It penetrates absorbent material producing additional expansion or contraction problems. Being practically distilled water in many cases, it actively attacks many materials forming chemical corrosion products which, in turn, exert fantastic pressures when confined by the detail used. It has an avidity for absorbing impurities from the atmosphere and from some of the elements of the assemblage. This may result in additional chemical corrosion products of the acid or alkali variety. These, in turn, produce pressures and impair the durability of the elements attacked. It disperses readily in air and under influence of heat producing psychrometric variations and this often results in condensate when the temperature drops. This, too, is practically distilled water producing all of its deleterious effects.

"The consideration of light, another form of energy, is very often relegated to the principal role of sight and color effects.

"It, however, displays other more important effects which deserve consideration," he went on. "Light energy contains, in its multi-various components, ultraviolet and actinic rays. These rays affect the appearance and durability of materials exposed to them. (Ask the housewife about that streak in the rug.) When seriously affected the result is a breakdown of the structure of the material and the destruction of the very characteristics we prized so highly at the start. In other words, they impair durability. Consideration of this possibility of deterioration must therefore be thorough, when we presume to get durability and relatively

Formal Opening Of Subdivision In Berkeley Set

Formal opening of a 10-acre subdivision in Berkeley has been set for today. It is a development of Elmer Koob, with Van Zant Inc., as promotion agent.

The property has been named "Sharon Meadows," lies just off of Frost avenue near Ferguson Fields. Two new streets have been developed, called Georgeland and Knoll avenues. They are being paved with concrete, will have curbs and gutters.

Homes are to be three-bedroom, redwood ranchers with full basements and garages.

The property is near the new Frostwood shopping center and grade school.

Marty Marion Home Sold to Radio Manager

A three-bedroom, two-bath ranch house at No. 56 Tealwood has been sold by Martin W. Marion, manager of the Chicago White Sox, and Mary Dallas Marion, his wife, to Robert Hyland Jr., and Martha Ann Hyland, his wife.

Hyland recently was promoted to general manager of radio station KMOX, and is the son of the late Dr. Robert Hyland, former club physician of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Samuel E. Fine Real Estate Co. was agent in the transaction.

Loan Institute Christmas Party

The annual Savings and Loan Christmas Party given by St Louis Chapter 8, of the American Savings and Loan Institute will be held next Thursday in the General Insurors building 4144 Lindell boulevard. The regular Institute classes will be held at 6:30 that night, with the party immediately following in the large basement hall.

Home Buying Credit Curb May Loosen

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UP)—Industry experts feel certain the Government will soon ease credit restrictions on home buying.

There have been hints from Government officials that the declining rate of new housing construction may get some early attention.

Actions by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration to raise down payments and shorten repayment periods are only the more familiar and dramatic aspects of the Administration's credit curbing.

More serious has been the Federal Reserve Board's move to reduce lending by the commercial banks to home mortgage financial institutions and ultimately builders.

The Home Loan Bank Board, to which most savings and loan institutions belong, has also warned members to hold borrowing from the system to a minimum.

The over-all effect has been to cut off mortgage lenders and builders from the credit resources of the commercial banks and the Home Loan Bank System.

Industry experts claimed to have foreseen the current mortgage money famine coming last spring. They said they feel that credit tightening aimed at the housing industry were "not so severe, but came at the wrong time." The money market was already drying up and savings declining, they have contended, when the Government and the Federal Reserve Board stepped in with a sponge.

Observers said they feel certain that the more "sophisticated" members of the administration now realize that "whatever bloom there was in housing is now gone and the problem is how to ease up on housing without disturbing the rest of the economy."

They conceded that an overall loosening of credit when the economy is bursting its productive seams already could be inflationary. But they insisted that when, and if, a way is found to slacken off on housing alone it will be done.

Experts now fear that any relaxation may come too late. Some builders reportedly already have cut back plans for 1956 "far lower than they have been in years."

Since planning must go on many months in advance of actual construction, this was considered ominous by some experts and industry economists.

"No one is optimistic" about 1956, an industry expert said privately.

Except for a spurt in August, the new housing construction rate has been falling since May. And, for the first time in 17 months, housing starts in September and October were below the same month in 1954.

How soon the Administration will move was not certain. There have been statements to the effect that the administration's 1956 goal would be about 1,200,000 housing starts and that efforts would be directed to maintain that level.

New Office Furniture Store in Clayton Open

This is a view in the new Peeper office furniture store at 35 North Meramec, Clayton, first outlying branch to be established by the Peeper Co., who's downtown store is at 1112 Olive street. New type of store layout incorporating a leaf from the food-marketers' books, has self-service stationery department with supplies on island-type, eye-level display units (not in photo) and presentation of furniture as it would appear when in use. Four manufacturers participated in developing the design, new for office furniture stores here. Floor is gray and brown asphalt tile, walls light green, lighting fluorescent strip fixtures against white, acoustically tiled ceiling. Henry Berry, of Milwaukee, was principal designer. Gene Walker heads up stationery department, Mrs. Gene Pfeffner the furniture department.

Modern Look

arates the other end of the sectional from a smooth-lined easy chair, upholstered in a yellow tufted fabric.

A rust and black plaid sofa, with the back cushions supported by a brass and black rod, completes the integration of the other living area furniture to the fireplace.

Resting before the hearth in front of the rust sofa is probably one of the most unusual cocktail tables ever designed. Beneath a plain slab of heavy glass swim a myriad of tropical fish. And in a box around the periphery of the transparent plastic water basin appears lush tropical flora.

In a corner of the living room, away from traffic patterns, stands a walnut-finished baby grand piano, behind it a brass floor lamp, the shade of which may be inverted to provide indirect illumination.

A passage area to the dining room was formed behind the rust sofa by a platinum desk, and an extra-wide, red plaid arm chair against the far wall.

Only the final touch remained, wall hangings. A cat motif dominates the fireplace. Directly over the brickwork hang two originals, each showing a trio of pink and black abstract cats, sprinkled in gold flake. On the opposite side, resting on the fireplace itself, is a free-standing two-tone wood cheshire cat, ensnared in a ball of brass twine.

Flanking the fireplace on the right is a Ransu original. The Ransu technique consists of carving figures or shapes from thin panels of various types of wood, and mounting these on panel. An African abstraction is represented here, and a similar Ransu, "The Dancers", featuring sharply angled figures in wood, hangs on the wall leading to the dining area.

On the opposite side of the fireplace hangs a pair of primitive masks, in full relief, mounted in frames. Visible in the dining area entryway is a plaster mural in bas relief, mounted on a walnut panel. A pair of yellow and gold harlequins hang on gold cords back of the piano.

All wall hangings in all rooms are deliberately placed low—next to the furniture. This, according to the designer, creates a blend with the furniture—with the living unit. It integrates both the hangings and the functional pieces into a common whole, creating center of interest.

Even with these improvements, the rooms still had drawbacks. For one thing, old-fashioned steam radiators protruded into the room. And the free-standing air conditioning units, shaped similar to the radiators, created obstacles to good design. Both were painted in the color of the walls against which they stood.

Radiators were masked with expanded metal covers (creating a bench effect).

Old-fashioned panel style doors, together with their frames, were replaced with modern flush doors having brass knobs. Doors were painted the color of the surrounding wall.

The platinum desk near the dining area entryway was adorned with a driftwood lamp. Laminated into the shade of this lamp are several species of feathers, in varying sizes. A brass gooseneck lamp, with three shades, illuminates the curved sectional. Other unusual modern lamps illuminate the balance of the room.

The dining area is carpeted with the same Wunda Plush cotton, in cocoa. The dining table, with a hand-mitered top, can seat as many as 14. The six matching chairs, in platinum mahogany with bone white metallic upholstery, double as occasional chairs. The far wall, an adjacent wall, and the ceiling are painted buff, giving the effect of the living and dining walls being virtually unbroken. The other two walls are in a soft, easy contrast—pale cameo pink. Again, the double-hung traverse draperies are used, with the under drape of beige silk, and the rome side being a gay, multi-colored silk plaid.

The Budke's wanted absolute luxury in their bedroom, so they covered their floor with a carpet approximately twice as dense as the one in the living-dining area. Two walls and the ceiling are in a bluish charcoal, and the other two are in pale, citron yellow. A pair of black poodles, in bas relief, are mounted in a pink background along the yellow wall. The bedroom set is mahogany, with a hand-rubbed finish in Alice blue. Here, the color is actually dyed in the wood—the grain is distinctly visible. An Alice blue spread matches the bedroom draperies.

Rathskeller In Pine.

A sunroom on the front of the house was not changed structurally, but outfitted with rattan furniture upholstered in tropical flowered patterns. A student study corner is also part of the room. Stone on the entrance arch and chimney was painted in alternate shades of buff and mauve, lending color to the front, and changing the appearance considerably. The Budke family spent the better part of two winters paneling the basement rathskeller in knotty pine. Heating and air-conditioning ducts and equipment was hidden.

Mrs. Budke finds only one drawback in the entire new scheme of things. "It's wonderful, and we're so very happy with it," she states, "but it's a full time job entertaining all the people who come to see it. Fortunately, our friends are understanding when I continue with my housework while they take it all in."

Buildings Dance

permanent characteristics from any material whose function is vital to the continued successful performance of our building.

Gravity Basic Factor.

"The effects of gravity produce additional movements which must be taken into account. In the main, this is in the form of deflections under load. Inasmuch as the exterior wall construction must be attached to the structural frame, this attachment can be made so positive that the deflection of the frame is transmitted in amount and direction to the wall, if provision is made for slip joints in the connections to allow the frame to deflect without imposing excessive loads on the wall assemblage. When such loads are imposed on the wall, it is axiomatic that all provisions for movements because of other forces is of no avail. It is, therefore, quite evident that localized or accumulated movement must be provided for or it will produce ruptural stresses."

In pointing up the continued movements that go on within the structural materials themselves, together with the variations of heat, cold and moisture, inside and outside of buildings, Prof. Voss was leading up to a discussion of modern gaskets, sealants, flashings, membranes, vapor barriers and immunization barriers to be introduced into more flexible construction. Such an item as a caulking compound, for instance, has to be able to stay soft and plastic and fill its space even in coldest weather, and yet not melt and run when weather gets hot and expansion of materials, along the space it fills, starts squeezing it.

Philodendron Easily Grown

horticulturist in charge of Missouri Botanical garden greenhouses. "It will bring living green into many dark nooks. Indeed, I know of no other plant as foolhardy as this one.

"All of the Aroids are fairly easy to grow. The philodendrons (the name literally means 'tree loving') are among the most versatile and decorative of plants, presenting a bold leaf pattern which is highly appropriate to modern homes and furniture."

Recommends Giant.

Among the sturdy climbing philodendrons which Cutak recommends are P. elegans and P. radiatum, which have deep-cut ferny leaves; P. erubescens, with its huge, glossy heart-shaped leaves; the rugged arrow-leaf forms known as P. hastatum and P. sagittifolium; as well as a variety which has large heart-shaped incised leaves, P. lacerum. Another great favorite is P. dubium, with its decorative, smooth-margined leaves.

Among desirable foliage plants Cutak would also include a close kin of these large-leaved philos: Monstera deliciosa, known as the Swiss cheese plant. This giant vine thrives in almost any location, and the enormous, deeply slashed leaves are particularly effective in a "modern" interior. A juvenile form of this plant, which has smooth-margined or partly indented leaves, is sometimes sold under the name of "Philodendron pertusum."

A few philodendrons are a bit choosy about their environment. The beautiful P. verrucosum, which has salmon and violet coloring on the under side of the satiny green leaves, needs a very hot and humid atmosphere. Another form that objects to cool, dry air is P. andreanum, the "Queen of Philodendrons," distinctive for its dark, velvety leaves with whitish midveins and ribs.

Although the philodendron will stand a lot of abuse, the plants are handsomer, of course, when given good care. "Since most of the Aroids live on the jungle floor or perch on trees, they prefer diffused light," horticulturist Cutak says. "They need a well drained soil, loose in texture and high in humus. I make a potting soil of equal parts of loam, leafmold and well decomposed manure, and then add sand and spent osmundine (fern root, used in potting orchids).

Humidity Required.

"Fairly high temperatures are required, but most homes are kept warm enough. Probably the greatest need is humidity. In houses that are not air-conditioned, greater humidity can be had through the use of humidifiers or open containers of water on radiators or over warm air ducts. Frequent syringing is beneficial, and the mossed sticks used for supports should be kept moist at all times. Mulching with peat or sphagnum moss will prevent excessive surface drying."

Saik nowna ETAOI etshcmrdw

Cutak also advises feeding the plants with a balanced liquid fertilizer every four weeks or so. In addition he uses liquid manure occasionally and gives the leaves a foliar feeding.

Plants that become overcrowded should be repotted, of course. Cutak suggests putting at least three small plants of the climbing types (such as P. cordatum P. pittieri or P. micans) in a single pot, to produce full, nicely shaped specimens. "The growing tips should be fastened on moss sticks by a hairpin or string, so that the roots can become established as soon as possible," he suggests. "These sticks or 'totem poles' serve both as a support and as a medium for aerial roots."

The "self-heading" philodendrons also make especially fine house plants. One of the best for the average home is P. wendlandii, which produces a swirl of oblong leaves to give a bird nest effect. Others that may be obtainable in the near future are P. melinoni, P. evansii, P. orlando, P. fosterianum, and P. bipinnatifidum. Unlike the climbing philos, though, these compact plants cannot be propagated from cuttings.

GRADY SMITH STARS AS BILLS SPURT PAST ST. JOHN'S

Hawks Fall Before New York, 99-80, but Retain Lead

PETTIT'S 20 POINTS NOT ENOUGH FOR LOCAL PROS, STILL ONE GAME AHEAD

By Harold Flachsbart

Red Holzman's Hawks, moving slowly and hitting inconsistently from the field, couldn't match the sharp-shooting New York Knickerbockers last night and lost for the fourth time in their last five starts, 99 to 80, but held onto their Western lead in the National Basketball Association because Rochester nosed out Ft. Wayne in a 117-116 overtime thriller.

The Hawk's eighth reverse of the campaign before a crowd of 4424 put them at .500 for the season. The St. Louis pros next must play three straight times on the road before returning home next Sunday night. The games away are all against Rochester—one tonight at Rochester, another Wednesday at Pittsburgh, on Friday at Milwaukee and Rochester will be the opponent here again next Sunday night.

Bob Pettit, waging a tight battle with Minneapolis's Clyde Lovellette for the league's individual scoring championship, fell four short of his average of 24 points but didn't get much help from his mates. The Hawks as a team never could recoup from a cold second quarter in which New York outscored them, 33 to 13. That turned the tide after a 21-16 first quarter in which Capt. Bob (Tiger) Harrison sparked the St. Louis club with eight points.

Plenty T-a-l-l!

New York had an edge in every phase of play and especially in the all-important rebounding, where seven-foot Walter Dukes and 6-11 Ray Felix used their height to best advantage to nab the ball 83 times from the boards against the Hawks' 65.

The Knicks' greatest edge, however, was in shooting and it was a team effort in which Felix, Carl Braun and Jim Baechtold did the most damage with eight points each in the second period, a spurt which in a matter of five or six minutes changed a 25-23 Hawk lead into a 41-31 edge from the Eastern club. The Knicks hit 34 out of 84 from the field for a 40 per cent average while St. Louis hit only 30 out of 104.

Selvy Held to 7.

Frank Selvy, a sophomore star already in the service but still available for some Hawk contests, came in from Ft. Knox but contributed only seven points, making three fielders in 10 tries. Pettit was the one-sided game's top scorer with his 20 points. Every one of the 10 Knickerbockers helped the New York cause and Felix was high with 18. Baechtold, former Eastern Kentucky star, hit 15 points, including seven out of 14 from the field.

The 28.8 average was by far the Hawks' poorest shooting on their home Kiel Auditorium court and they didn't look too impressive at the foul line either, with 20 out of 33.

Big Charley Share, a consistent post player for the Hawks, was shut out from the field and made only one meager free throw for his lowest scoring total in two seasons of play.

As Joe Lapchick, veteran New York coach remarked, "A team can get 'killed' when it can't get the rebounds and is as cold as the Hawks were in this one. Remember our last trip here? It was just the other way—and St. Louis murdered us in New York, too. In this league, things like that are almost bound to even up."

Rochester Beats Pistons.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 10 (AP) — Rookie Richie Regan scored three baskets in succession in the last 22 seconds of overtime tonight to give the Rochester Royals a 117-116 National Basketball Association triumph over the Fort Wayne Pistons.

Who Threw the Overalls In Mr. Snider's Chowder?

ALMOST every year, when the results of the Baseball Writers Association poll on the major leagues' most valuable players are announced, there are loud complaints from various quarters. Philadelphia and Brooklyn, as we recall, beefed bitterly when Hank Sauer of the Cubs got the National League award in 1952.

There was sorrow, too, in Cleveland in 1954 when several outstanding members of the pennant-winning Indians competed so effectively among themselves that Yogi Berra emerged with enough points to take the top honor.

But after what happened this year, we're ready to throw in the sponge for the writers and urge that some better way be found to award the very important honor of being the most valuable in a major league.

We can't find any fault with the selection of Roy Campanella as the National League's most valuable player and if the final result makes everything else unimportant, then perhaps there should be no complaint. But what did happen points strongly to the fact that some of the baseball writer committee members either do not take the responsibility seriously enough or are not qualified for the voting job.

After this year's voting it was announced first that Campanella had won the award by 10 points, or 231 to 221. Then it was discovered that there was something wrong in the voting, and finally the tabulation was officially released as 226 points for Campanella and 221 points for Duke Snider, Campanella's Dodger teammate.

This indicated that somebody had booted one, either a voter or a vote-counter, and started inquiries from sport desks.

Don't You Think Duke Rated In the First Ten?

PIECING bits of information together as best we could, without any formal explanation from headquarters, this is what apparently happened:

One member of the National League committee voted for Campanella in the top spot and then wrote in his name again as the No. 6 man in his list. Thus that writer's ballot gave Campy 14 points for first place and five for sixth place. You might excuse the vote-counters for missing that duplication in the writer's ballot, but there's no excuse for a committee member being so slovenly as not to notice that he had voted twice for the same player in his list of ten most valuable.

Eventually the vote-counters caught the blunder in the voting. How it was decided to do what then was done in the emergency we have been unable to learn. But apparently all those in the committee member's list from the No. 7 spot down, inclusive, were moved up and Jack Meyer of the Phillies was given the vacant tenth spot on the ballot.

So, on that writer's ballot, Snider did not appear at all. He was not given credit for being one of the first ten most valuable in the National League. It would be difficult to justify that kind of judgment. Snider batted .309 to Campy's .318, but drove in 136 runs to Roy's 107 and hit 42 home runs or ten more than Campanella. Had Snider been given sixth place on that one ballot, he would have tied Campy.

Undoubtedly it was merely slovenly voting, with no feeling of responsibility, rather than lack of ability or knowledge of the subject that caused the mix-up. But it goes to prove that members of the committee don't do a sincere job and that they are not screened carefully before appointment to the voting group.

Anti-Rickey Writer Passed Up Hornsby.

IT isn't the first time an outstanding player has been omitted in a baseball writer's ballot. Back in the days when Rogers Hornsby was at his prime he was not listed in the first ten among the National League's most valuable players by one member of the committee. On that occasion the voter made no bones of the fact that he positively wouldn't vote for Hornsby, because of a bitter hatred of Branch Rickey, who at the time was manager or general manager of the Cardinals.

Then there was the case of a Cleveland player, an outstanding star, who was left off several writers' ballots because that was the year of the so-called "cry-baby" Indians' revolt against Manager Oscar Vitt. The writers didn't believe any player, regardless of record, deserved to be considered most valuable if he was trying to get his manager fired.

Too often, however, it is carelessness, rather than malice or reasoning, that causes the bad voting. And there has been so much slovenly voting that many observers would vote readily for a change in the system of awarding one of baseball's top honors.

Carter Wins Pin Match From Nagy

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 — Don Carter, two-time champion of the National All-Star tournament, gave indication he may try a new track in the 1955-56 match play event.

Bowling in a special preliminary match against the current champion, Steve Nagy, of Detroit, Don knocked down fewer pins but was the winner in the match on Petersen points 27.33 to 26.29.

"Maybe it's better to win the games than to knock down the pins," said Carter as he walked off the alleys. Last year, Don garnered the most pins, but Nagy walked off with the championship which is based on a combination of total pinfall and games won.

In the special match, Don shot 159, 186, 221, 225, 210, 190 and 202 for 1183, while Nagy had 221, 203, 208, 199, 184 and 189 for 1204. Thus, Don won four out of six games and the match.

A cherry in the eighth frame of his sixth and final game kept Ray Bluth of St. Louis's Budweisers from taking the early lead on the first day of qualifying for the national All-Star Bowling Tournament.

Operating with a new "slow ball" type of delivery, Bluth shot a lofty 1282 for six games which placed him a single pin behind the leader, Tim Moran of Canton, O., who bowling on the alleys next to Ray, shot 1283.

That was after 96 of the field of 160 had finished. Later Bluth slipped to third place as 128 had completed their four games with the leader being Joe Brown of Jersey City, N.J., with a score of 1290.

Bluth had a string of five strikes going when he left the innocent looking six-ten on his first ball in the eighth frame. He picked the six so clean that he left the No. 10 standing and even a double in the ninth and tenth failed to get him into the lead.

Ray had games of 207, 181, 244, 235, 192 and 223 for his 1282 total.

While Ray was getting well on opening day, Dick Weber, a Budweiser teammate, also had a good day, but Billy Welu, another "Bud" and a finalist last year, found the alleys rough to hit.

Weber shot 1223 on games of 179, 198, 201, 223, 222 and 200, while Welu had 1151 on games of 181, 180, 173, 220, 181 and 216.

Pat Patterson, another member of the Budweisers had 1183 for his six games of 191-211-152- 203-214-202.

Mrs. Don Carter had 631 for four games. She scored 183-173-151-174—681 while Mrs. Pauline Smith totaled 686 on games of 191-180-180-135.

That's what it was, three light-uniformed St. John's Redmen against dark-shirted JOE TODD of St. Louis U., clutching the ball in this action last night at Madison Square Garden. The United Press reported that despite the handicap, Todd shook away to score. The Billikens were ahead, behind, then rallied for an 88-80 victory.

Lawrence and Two Other Cards Sign; Seven Now in Fold

By Bob Broeg

The Cardinals last night announced signed contracts received from three more players, bringing to seven the number of Redbirds who've agreed to terms, and also disclosed new season-ticket prices for 1956.

Players newly signed, said General Manager Frank Lane, were Pitchers Brooks Lawrence and Ben Flowers and Outfielder Archie Wilson.

Previously announced as signed were Harvey Haddix and Harry Hoitsma, pitchers; Tom Alston, first baseman, and Bill Virdon, outfielder.

Lawrence, after winning 15 games for the Cardinals in little more than half of the 1954 season, was a bitter disappointment in '55. The Bull, as former Manager Eddie Stanky referred to the husky, hard-working Springfield (O.) righthander, was troubled by a lack of control that led to general ineffectiveness. He won only three games, lost eight, and was optioned to Oakland. On the Pacific Coast he had a 5-1 record.

2.24 Earned-Run Average.

Flowers, obtained from Detroit's Buffalo farm club of the International League in exchange for Bobby Tiefenauer and cash, impressed in a late-season trial with the Redbirds. The 6-foot-4, 27-year-old Wilson (N.C.) righthander had a 12-9 mark at Buffalo and a 2.24

Temple Scores Upset Over Kentucky, 73-61

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 10 (AP)—Temple's classy guards, Hal Lear and Guy Rodgers, fired the Owls to a 73-61 basketball upset over Kentucky, the nation's No. 2 collegiate power, tonight, though Temple was hanging on the ropes late in the last half.

Temple, assuming command at the outset and threatening a runaway, was coasting with an 18-point edge before Kentucky launched its comeback.

Successive baskets by sophomore Vernon Hatton and Junior Ray Mills cut it to 60-57 with 6 minutes left and it looked like Kentucky might pull it out of the fire.

Temple countered quickly with goals by Hal Reinfeld and Pink Van Patton, and Kentucky was unable to muster another challenge.

Temple's weaving offense and its zone defense presented a mystery Kentucky could not solve, and the Owls pulled to a 13-4 advantage after five minutes on the shooting of Rogers and Bill Smith.

Midway of the first half, Temple was in front 25-9. Kentucky, frigid in its shooting from the field and foul line alike, launched a drive but still trailed 41-27 at the half, getting no closer than 12 points in its push.

Rogers and Lear, who fired away from the circle and on driving shots, topped the scoring with 24 and 19 points, respectively.

Mills led Kentucky with 14 followed by Phil Grawemeyer with 11.

Kentucky used 12 players in an attempt to find a combination that would click.

Kentucky's downfall was reflected in its first-half shooting. It connected on 7 to 40 field goals for 14.3 per cent. Temple, on the other hand, hit 16 of 37 for 43.2 per cent.

ST. LOUIS U. BLOWS LARGE LEAD, THEN WINS, 88-80

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff

NEW YORK, Dec. 10—Blowing 31 points in the second half—going from a 23-point lead to an eight point deficit—the remarkable Billikens of St. Louis University still came back to beat St. John's of Brooklyn, 88-80, all within regulation time at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Grady Smith, the farmer boy from Puxico, Mo., who always approaches the big town with a wary eye, personally engineered the cliff-hanging escape with a total of 28 points, eight of them in a row with two minutes and 40 seconds left on the clock.

Smith's series of two buckets and two pairs of free throws brought the Bills from a 75-79 disadvantage to an 83-79 lead with little more than a minute left in the game.

Felt Like 16 Tons.

This was sufficient to quell an uprising by the Redmen from Brooklyn who had caught fire with a run of 16 straight points in the opening phase of the last 10 minutes of the game.

So Eddie Hickey's athletes continued their New York successes which show six victories in eight regular-season appearances here over a nine-year period. They also boosted their early season unbeaten record to three straight games.

They were opposed to a St. John's team that had been considered the class of this city but had failed to show it in some 25 minutes of play against the Billikens. In that time St. Louis had gained a 58-35 lead after enjoying a 43-29 halftime edge.

A slim crowd of 7245 for the Garden doubleheader had little reason to cheer the home team, for the outlander Billikens were in full command.

Going . . . Going . . . Gone.

Or, rather, that was the way it seemed. Gradually St. Louis's large advantage dwindled down to 15 points and then began the St. John's drive that saw 16 straight points made before the Billikens scored again.

The gunners of St. Louis, seldom averse to shooting, couldn't hit anything and, almost every time it got the ball, St. John's would score under the leadership of returned service-man Dick Duckett and husky Center Mike Parenti.

There was an interchange of the lead momentarily and then Dusty Destefano's boys inched ahead in an inspired offensive drive that gained a 79-71 lead with about four minutes left to play.

Duckett, who popped from outside and inside for a total of 22 points, had hit twice in succession to cap another run of points, this time seven in a row, to create that eight-point advantage.

Control Play Fails.

But then, trying to play a more cautious, control game, St. John's saw the Bills make their way back. Jim McLaughlin, who hadn't tallied for 16 minutes' play in the second half, scored on a rebound, and Harold Alcorn put in two free throws to start the return from Elba or whatever place that was the Bills had been.

Smith followed with a jump shot and shortly afterward scored two free throws to tie it up at 79-all. St. John's, which had been hot, cooled off. And Smith, driving in from a corner hand-off from McLaughlin, put the Bills ahead. Another St. John's foul gave Grady another chance at the charity line and he added two more free throws for the 83-79 lead.

Like Old Times.

McLaughlin, who finished with 12 points, drove through several Redmen for another basket, Joe Todd's tally was cancelled by a foul, but he made one of two free throws, and then McLaughlin scored again to make the final total of 88.

It was a delayed show of mid-season poise by the Billikens, who were playing in the Garden at the earliest date in any season.

Al Serkin, the junior center in whom Coach Hickey expressed faith after poor showing in the previous game, acquitted himself creditably. Only on occasions did Hickey feel it necessary to change the Bills' offensive style and put McLaughlin back at his old center spot.

Serkin came through with five baskets, 12 points and the top total of 16 rebounds, as the Bills worked the boards to the tune of 61 rebounds to 53 for St. John's. Todd with 16 and Alcorn with 14 filled out the double-figure scoring attack of the Bills.

The St. Louis team will continue on the road with a game against Indiana U. at Bloomington Monday night. Its next date at home is Saturday.

Champion Crumbles Under Sugar Ray's Pounding Blows

—Associated Press Wirephotos.

Stewart and Mizzou Rally to Beat Illinois, 74 to 73

Desperation Was the Spur.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.

THE clamorous crush in Ray Robinson's dressing room had thinned a little, making room to set up a newsreel camera, and now they brought the middleweight champion out of the rear cubicle where he'd taken his shower and they perched him on the rubbing table to pose and make conversation with Jim Norris, head of the International Boxing Club. He had pulled on trousers and shoes and had just slid a necktie under his unbuttoned collar. He had left the ring weeping but now laughter was sweeping him in waves.

"I just had to win that title back!" Robinson said, and the way he said it, it was a shout of triumph and a prayer of thanksgiving.

"You know what it means to be alone?" he asked. The words were rushing out of him, not altogether coherently. "I was champion with crowds around me and I didn't know who my friends were and then you look in your corner and there's nobody there but your wife. You look around, all those people, your friends. 'Won't somebody have a little faith in me?' Nobody there. Maybe some day I can tell you how it was."

"I had to win that title back," he said, with something like desperation. This time, indeed, desperation was the keynote of this history-making evening. Harried by financial worries — he had borrowed and spent some of last night's purse and the rest was attached for income taxes—haunted by fear that the gifts he had treasured had been left somewhere behind him on night club dance floors, Robinson went up against the inflexible law that they never come back. He fought with a kind of controlled desperation, punched Bobo Olson senseless in the second round, and became the only three-time champion the middle-weight division ever knew.

According to Plan.

"I planned to box him," Ray said, "and take potshots if I saw an opening. I thought I could hurt him if I could hit him because I was pretty sure making the weight wouldn't leave him much of a reserve. I hurt him with a punch—just what punch I honestly don't know—and I just kept punching."

The way it looked from here, Robinson was ahead all the way but he was scoring against a notoriously slow starter and he conveyed no impression of invincibility. He won the first round with a jab, a little flurry to the body and one right to the head which made Olson take cover. "Loose! Loose!" Robinson's corner was shouting, imploring him to relax. He was pulling back from Olson's punches so they missed by only this much, raising a big question: How long would the legs last and enable him to escape so narrowly?

Early in the second round, Robinson brought over a fine right hand to the chin but Olson sank a good left into the stomach. If Bobo was going to attack the body now, the pattern wasn't hard to foresee. It would be a war of attrition and it stood to reason that a man who had been welterweight champion once, middleweight champion twice and a patter-and-dance man more than two years, couldn't survive that indefinitely.

All of a sudden there was a swift exchange of head punches. Olson seemed to break ground slightly as Robinson fired one or perhaps two rapid combinations. A left hook found the jaw, curling in just beneath Olson's uplifted right hand. A right uppercut came whistling in from 'way back here, and Bobo went down on his back.

He Doesn't Get Up.

BY the time Frank Sikora, the referee, got a count started, a faint suspicion stirred that Bobo wasn't going to get up. First he was motionless, flat on his back. Then he began rocking feebly on his shoulder blades, threshing weakly. At length he rolled onto his side and lay with his head pillowed in the crook of one arm, eyes closed, blood oozing from his nose. He flopped onto his back again and was dragging a heavy head off the floor when the count reached 10.

"That fellow," said Joe DiMaggio, a ringside witness, "doesn't get up, does he?"

That's what the form sheet seems to say, and this comes as a surprise to those who have considered Olson one of the roughest and ablest gladiators now active. He has always been tough, tenacious, tireless, a swarming aggressive hustler, yet now the suspicion grows that all the while there was an untapped vein of crockery in his chin.

When he met Archie Moore last June, the first good punches of the fight put him down and he stayed down. His two showings since then were indifferent, and when he dropped last night he didn't bounce. By terms of his contract with Robinson he's entitled to a return bout within 90 days, but at the moment there is no overwhelming demand for the rematch. From the public or from Bobo himself.

The Feminine Touch.

FLABBERGASTED by the swift, convincing score by a man whose own managers gave him only the thinnest of outside chances, the pundits were still groping in all directions today for a satisfactory explanation. It seemed unreasonable that a couple of punches by Moore could have caused Olson to deteriorate sharply.

"Training down to 160 pounds took it out of him," said Dr. Vincent Nardiello, the New York Athletic Commission doctor who is Robinson's friend and physician. "It's what I said before: 'Olson can make the weight but he can't fight at it.'"

Others, including Olson's somewhat estranged wife, blamed high living, and Bobo's incurably gallant proprietor, Sid Flaherty, blamed the fighter's wife.

"It was his family troubles," the manager said.

"Family troubles?" a man said. "That wasn't his wife in there slugging him."

Star Gets 27 of 31 Points in 2nd Half

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 10—Norman Stewart paced the Tigers through a torrid last half that left Illinois bewildered long after the game as Missouri defeated the eighth-ranked Illini, 74-73, before 5300 screeching fans here tonight.

Stewart scored 31 points—27 in the second half—after being held without a goal from the field during the opening 20 minutes, counting 11 baskets as the lusterless first-half Tigers, hitting a mere 20 per cent of their shots, came back in the closing period to connect with 16 of 25 shots to raise their game's average to 40.7 per cent.

The Illini built up a big lead early in the game, holding a 28-12 margin at one stage and generally coasting along until the Tigers closed the gap a bit to trail 28-41 at the intermission.

But Illinois, 107-75 winners over Bradley in their opening game last week, lost some of their fire off the court. The Tigers ran their total to 37 before Illinois counted a point, with Chuck Denny, and Lionel Smith contributing three points and Stewart seven. Smith's long set shot tied the score at 45-45, and Stewart drove in for a hook that put Missouri ahead for the first time with 13:45 left to play.

Ridley's 21 Tops.

Illinois, however, didn't quit. Bill Ridey tied the score again on a fast break, and Paul Judson and Stewart traded baskets to tie the game again at 49. Then Ridley, high pointer for the visitors with 21, converted a fast break to three points when he was fouled, and added a couple of more free-throws seconds later. Illinois pulled to a 57-50 margin and seemingly had the game under control.

Then Smith hit for two and Stewart connected three times and the score was tied again at 57-57, but George Bonsalle gave the Illini another four-point lead, which Bill Ross and John Stephens cut to one. Smith, fouled by Larry Breyfogle, sent Missouri back into the lead.

Baskets by Don Ohl and Ridley found Illinois holding a 65-64 margin, with Ridley adding two more free-throws. But Denny got a three-pointer on Ohl's foul and Stewart hit two free-throws before Ohl and Stewart traded baskets. Then Stewart hit again and Missouri was ahead to stay, 72-71.

Stewart's tip-in widened the margin, cut to one point by Ridley. In the final 20 seconds, Illinois had a chance to forge ahead, but Judson missed a free-throw and the Tigers captured the rebound and ran out the clock.

Sharp Shooting.

Missouri hit 23 of 54 shots, while Illinois connected with 25 of 58 for a 39.6 average. In every 10-minute period except the first, Missouri outscored the visitors.

The scoring difference in the two halves rested in rebounding ability, with Illinois controlling through the first period and Missouri far in front in the second half, and the Tigers grabbing a game total of 39 to 37 of the larger visiting team. Stewart and Harvard Schmidt of Illinois led in rebounding, with 10 each.

The victory left Missouri with a 3-1 season record with victories over South Dakota and Texas Tech and a loss to Purdue. The Tigers play Indiana here next Saturday.

RICHMOND, Ind., Dec. 10 (AP)—Harvey Haddix of South Vienna, O., St. Louis Cardinals' pitcher, was married here today to Marcia Williamson of Springfield, O. The ceremony was performed in the St. John Lutheran Church by the Rev. C. M. Hallensen.

Six St. Louisans on SMU Team

Krebs Is Star As S.M.U. Wins Over Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 10 (AP)—A 36-point blast by Big Jim Krebs of St. Louis propelled Southern Methodist to an overtime 82-81 victory over Minnesota here tonight.

It was left to Guard Ron Morris to climax a terrific uphill struggle for the Mustangs after the Gophers had led throughout the game. Morris picked up a loose ball with two minutes remaining of the overtime and scored on a jump shot from 12 feet out to push Southern Methodist into the lead for the first time in the contest.

With 22 seconds remaining, Minnesota's Juerry Kindall had a chance to tie the score from the free throw line. The junior forward, who had hit 12 or 14 foul shots prior to his last attempts, hit the first one but missed the second and Southern Methodist froze the ball the rest of the way.

Krebs's superb shooting rallied Southern Methodist from almost certain defeat to tie the score at 78-78 after the regulation time. It was the 6-8 center's tough-angle marksmanship in the first half that prevented Minnesota from stampeding S.M.U. in the early going.

BARNEY VEHIGE, of the Arcade Lanes bowling team, smiles happily as he recalls his 300-game of last Wednesday night. Bowling in an Arcade Business Men's League match, Vehige rolled games of 231, 300 and 235 for a 766 total. This was his first perfect game. Five other St. Louisans have hit perfect figures this season.

$10,000 Boost For Willie Mays After 51 Homers

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—Willie Mays, the New York Giants' slugging outfielder, has signed his 1956 contract, the club announced today, and it is believed he got a $10,000 boost over his reported $25,000 salary of last season.

Contracts for other Giants have not gone into the mails, and the club explained that the only reason Mays signed was that he happened to walk into the club's Forty-second street office. Another Giant, Shortstop Alvin Dark, has a holdover contract.

Mays, the No. 1 Giant of 1955 on performance, led the National League in homers with 51, four more than Ted Kluszewski of Cincinnati. The New York center fielder hit .319, second to the .338 average of Philadelphia's Richie Ashburn. His 127 runs batted in also was second to Duke Snider's 136 RBI's for Brooklyn.

In the slugging department, Mays led the league with a .659 mark. He had 185 hits for 382 total bases, best in the circuit, and stole 24 bases.

earned-run average, second-lowest in the Triple-A league. With the Cards he was 1-0 in four games.

Wilson, bought from Toronto after the '55 season, is a right-handed hitting outfielder who finished third in the International League batting race with a .319 average. The 31-year-old Niagara Falls (N.Y.) athlete, formerly with Washington and the Chicago White Sox, had 21 doubles, eight triples, 16 homers and 119 runs batted in.

A lower price-scale for season tickets—because of the heavy Sunday doubleheader schedule which makes for fewer playing dates—was released by Nat Hall, Redbird ticket supervisor. The price reduction was described as more than 10 per cent.

Hall said the season reservations were available in all categories, though box seats will be sold only in units of four and six seats. Noting that requests would be handled on a first-come, first-served basis, Hall said he anticipated "a good demand, particularly among fans who split the cost of season tickets and share the seats throughout the season."

The season ticket scale per seat, taxes included, is $198, loge box; $165, lower deck box; $148.50, field box, and $122.10, reserved seat.

Young Skaters Show Promise In City Series

Development of young skaters has been especially pleasing to Missouri Skating Association officials as the city's speedsters prep for the Silver Skates carnival Jan. 15.

In the weekly city championship series at the Winter Garden, Dan O'Connor, 15-year-old junior boy contender, was timed in 47.6 seconds for the 440-yard sprint, a clocking that compared favorably with Harry Monteith's winning effort in the senior men's division. Monteith was a winner over Frank Till in 46.7 seconds.

Harry Cartun, in the intermediate boys group for 16 and 17-year-olds, needed 49.9 seconds for the quarter mile.

Louis Fehr was a victor in the bantam boys' division and Bill Kelly, after suffering a defeat the week before, bounced back to capture the midget boy's 220-yard event. Jerry Van Mill, victim of a spill the previous week, also sped home first in the juvenile boys' half-mile grind.

The Kristof cousins, Joan and Barbara, kept up their good work in the juvenile and intermediate girls' division, respectively. Joan's time of 26.8 seconds in the 220 was better than that of Kelly in the midget boys' race.

St. Louisans will compete against a star-studded out-of-town field in the Post-Dispatch sponsored Silver Skates next month.

McKinley Three-Sport Star Leads Goldbugs to 50-43 Win

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Sugar a Champion With Bleak Future.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.

SUGAR RAY ROBINSON'S third term as the world middleweight boxing champion, resulting from his knockout of Bobo Olson actually promises to be short lived.

There are some good boys camping on Ray's trail right now but they'll have to wait until it is determined what Olson is going to do about the return bout contract which he holds for the first shot at Robinson.

Should Olson decide to hang up his gloves, there's no doubt but that Ralph (Tiger) Jones would be first in line for a crack at Ray, because he defeated Robinson decisively last January.

Then there is Joey Giambra, who lost a bout to Olson in California which, over television, it had appeared that Giambra won. Joe has just been discharged from the Army and he's looking for a chance at Robinson.

And Edouardo Lausse, the Argentine, probably the best of the middleweights around right now, will be clamoring for recognition. No doubt he'll get it.

So if Robinson decides to be a fighting champion again, there will be plenty of work for him to do.

Ray's victory over Olson, however, proved more that Bobo had slipped far back than it proved that Robinson had regained his great form.

Not Much of Test.

ROBINSON wasn't tested sufficiently by Olson to show observers that he is able to go a distance because the pathetic Olson wasn't able to make Ray extend himself.

Against a younger, more determined fighter, Robinson might not be able to stand up under the challenge.

Ray didn't appear to any great advantage in knocking out the burned-out Olson, who has deteriorated fast in a few short months.

"Boxer of the year in 1954, bum of the year in 1955," was the way Olson was described by many observers.

Surely there is something strange in the way Bobo has gone down hill in such a few short months. After his triumph over Joe Maxim, he met Archie Moore in an effort to add the light-heavyweight championship to the 160-pound crown.

Moore knocked out Olson in the third round, much in the same fashion that Robinson turned the trick, a left hook followed by a right.

And since last June, when he fell before the fists of Moore, Olson just hasn't been the same man.

The defeat came after a long string of victories and it is possible that his confidence was sapped so that he just can't get over it. Certainly he didn't look impressive against either Jimmy Martinez or Giambra.

Family troubles enter into the picture but that's not enough of an explanation.

Back of the Third Row.

WHATEVER the reason, Olson has gone back rapidly and perhaps one who wanted to preach a sermon might find his theme in the reports that Bobo has been having too much fun of late.

It is inconceivable that a fighter could take the punches he took in bouts with Randy Turpin and Kid Gavilan, then come on to win, only to fall before the blows of Robinson the way he did.

With Moore it was different. Archie is a powerful hitter who more than held his own with heavyweights over the years.

It seemed more than likely that Olson would not be able to stand up to Moore. With Robinson it was a different story.

True, he had lost to Ray twice before, once by a knockout in 12 rounds when Olson was only a green kid and again on a decision in 15 rounds when Robinson was at the peak of his ability.

This time Olson lasted less than two rounds and went out with the first solid punches with which he was hit.

The return match Olson was guaranteed will be his, if he wants it, but about the only place where the public may buy it is in San Francisco.

Some of Bobo's California supporters on the scene when Robinson knocked him out, shook their heads and said they just couldn't believe it and said they felt he would do much better if he could get his family troubles straightened out and get his mind back on the track of fighting.

Big Loss in Prestige.

HOWEVER that might be, Olson lost a lot more than the championship to Robinson. He lost prestige. He lost the belief in his durability which he had built up in previous bouts. Worst of all, he probably lost confidence in himself. His manager, Sid Flaherty, with whom Olson had always been closer than most fighters to a manager, hardly spoke to Olson after he was kayoed by Robinson. Previously Sid was always at Olson's side during after-fight interviews, counseling Bobo about what to say and what not to say.

Not so the other night. Flaherty sat by himself and let Olson do whatever talking he wanted to do. They left the Stadium together to get a plane for San Francisco.

So it is up to Olson to make the decision as to his future. And Robinson? Well, he can't have too many more fights left in him at 35 years of age.

Cleveland Also Gains A Triumph

By Harold Tuthill

Jerry Moore, McKinley's 5-10 versatile athlete, who sparks the Goldbugs in football and baseball, saved his basketball scoring for the last quarter last night and that was enough to beat Roosevelt 50 to 43.

It was the only close game of the first round because Cleveland kept up the steady grind of the big wheels by crushing Washington Tech, 66 to 30, in the first game of a twin bill at Hadley Tech. Previously Beaumont, Sumner and Hadley Tech, all unbeaten, had won by one-sided scores in Friday's league opening engagements.

Moore was off the target in the first three quarters when he missed 10 shots, but he turned the tide for Lawrence Buschmann's Bugs when the final quarter got under way with the teams even at 33-33.

Jerry broke the tie with a free throw and later added three field goals, total seven points, to provide McKinley with its margin of victory.

Field Goal Figure.

Ken Martin paced the 'Bugs, however, with 15 points as McKinley hit 19 of 59 field goal attempts, an average of 34 per cent. Roosevelt had a percentage of 36 on 20 fielders in 55 shots.

Jim Pentland led Bob Rogers' Crimson with 10 points all on field goals.

Burkel Tops Tech.

Cleveland, looking every bit as formidable as it has in past seasons, blanketed a small but Washington Tech squad which was out-rebounded by big George Burkel, the Dutchmen's 6-8 center. Burkel, who hits well inside or out, despite his size, colected 35 points on 14 field goals and seven free throws. That was five more than all the opposing Golden Lions scored collectively.

Frank Zavoldi lent a hand with six baskets, 12 points, and John Scowcroft surprised the Dutchmen followers by outracing two of Tech's speedy track men—Jenoda Gaines and Fred Dixon—as he scored three times in the second half. Scowcroft also had a free throw.

Cleveland, getting 29 field goals on 68 efforts, hit at a 40 per cent clip, while Tech made only 11 of 42 field goal attempts, about one-fourth of their shots. It was Tech's first game as the Lions went into the league campaign without a benefit of a warmup.

Prince John Injured, May Be Out of Derby

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP)—Prince John, winner of the world's richest horse race at Garden State in October, has a broken bone in his right fore foot and may miss the Kentucky Derby next May, it was reported today.

Prince John, owned by Elmendorf Farm and trained by Walter Kelley, was being walked in front of the barn at Hialeah Park Wednesday when the lead shank of his halter broke and he dashed between barns. The injury was sustained before Prince John could be caught.

Trabert, Other Tennis Pros Here Jan. 12

The 100-match tennis series between national amateur champion Tony Trabert and the professional champion Pancho Gonzales will hit St. Louis on Thursday, Jan. 12, when they and the rest of Jack Kramer's troupe play at Kiel Auditorium.

The show will consist of one set between Australian Rex Hartwig and Pancho Segura, a two-out-of-three-set match between Trabert and Gonzales, and finally a two-out-of-three doubles scrap pairing Trabert and Hartwig versus the two Panchos.

Big money is involved, particularly in the duel between Trabert and Gonzales. There is an extra $25,000 prize to the series winner, but more important is the fact that the loser may be forced to drop out of the tour next season.

Sharing in the proceeds for the appearance here will be the St. Louis District Tennis Association. According to Frank A. Thompson Jr., chairman of the promotion, the money will be used to further development of junior players.

Trabert turned professional after winding up a spectacular amateur career by winning the Wimbledon, French and United States championships during the past year. He won at Wimbledon and in the U.S. event at Forest Hills without dropping a set.

In Davis Cup play Trabert was on the U.S. team five times and had a record of 26 victories and eight losses. He is 25 years old.

Gonzales earned his "world championship" by beating out Segura and Australian Frank Sedgman in a round robin on last season's professional tour.

Gonzales, now 27, won the U.S. singles title in 1948. He immediately turned pro to challenge Kramer, but was soundly beaten by the present tour manager in the cross-country series. Kramer, in fact, retired unbeaten in pro tours after the 1953 series.

Without a Pass.

Passing must be passe at Tulane. When the Greenies defeated Georgia, 14-0, this year they did not complete a pass.

Grid Captain-Elect Dies in Auto Mishap

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Dec. 10 (UP) — Michael Rakov, 20, guard and captain-elect of the Williams College football team, was killed today when his automobile turned over twice on a curve.

Rakov, from Kingston, N.Y., was returning to the school after leaving his date at Bennington College. The accident occurred just after the car crossed the Vermont-Massachusetts line.

Aubrey Leads Notre Dame to Victory, 71 to 61

EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 10 (UP)—Lloyd Aubrey's 26 points paced Notre Dame to a 71-61 victory over Northwestern tonight. It was the Wildcats' third loss in a row and Notre Dame's second straight win. Aubrey is a St. Louis boy who attended De Andres high school.

With Northwestern leading, 47-46, Aubrey tipped one in to give the Irish a lead they never relinquished with 11 minutes to play.

Guard Dick Mast, who led the Wildcats with 16 points, led a second half rally that put Northwestern ahead momentarily after trailing at halftime, 34-27.

Notre Dame jumped into an early 12-3 lead. The Irish hit .478 of their shots on 28 out of 73 buckets while Northwestern hit 25 of 76 shots for a .329 mark.

Bantam Champion Loses To Featherweight

PARIS, Dec. 10 (AP)—Cherif Hamia, French featherweight champion, won a technical knockout victory tonight over Robert Cohen of France, world bantamweight champion, in a non-title bout.

The referee awarded the decision to Hamai in the tenth and final round after a minute and a half.

Both contestants are from French North Africa and are good personal friends. Cohen admitted earlier he was stepping above his weight class to provide French fans with a good "money" attraction.

The fight was witnessed by more than 14,000 persons who virtually jammed the vast Palais des Sports.

Bobo's Estranged Wife Cried, 'Get Up, Baby'; Trouble Bared

MRS. CARL OLSON greeting her husband when he returned home after having been knocked out by Archie Moore last June. There was no such reception for him after he got back from another knockout—this time at the hands of Ray Robinson.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 10 (INS)—Bobo Olson's estranged wife admitted today that the knockout blow that snatched his middleweight boxing crown also broke her heart.

But the mother of four children is caught between plain anguish and a wistful hope that she and Bobo might patch up their marriage — wrecked, she asserts, by "men-chasing women."

Helen Dolores Olson last night sobbed, "Get up, baby, get up!" when she saw her husband tumble to the Chicago Stadium canvas from her television set in California. Yet she said today that any possible reconciliation first had to be talked over between them.

Ironically, a pea-soup fog delayed Bobo's plane flight from Chicago to their Hillsborough home outside of San Francisco. A United Airlines plane skirted fog-bound San Francisco and landed at Sacramento, 90 miles distance, where Olson was expected to spend the night.

Informed that Mrs. Olson who has filed a divorce suit is going to "think over" a reconciliation, Bobo brightened noticeably.

Mrs. Olson said she and three of their children huddled in front of their TV set, watching Sugar Ray Robinson kayo Olson in the second round for the title.

Confident Folks Surprised.

"We were stunned," she gasped. "I just couldn't help crying, I thought he would sure work that Robinson over.

"You know, you don't live with someone for 10 years and then learn to hate them overnight. He called me from Chicago after the fight.

"He said he was sorry for the kids' sake and that 'it was just one of those things.'

"He told me, 'I'm done with the bunch I've been traveling with. They're the ones that really flattened me.'"

In this vein, Mrs. Olson snapped she hoped the defeat had "beaten some sense into his head." She added:

"He's just been a foolish boy."

Later, as Bobo's plane neared San Francisco, Mrs. Olson declared she hoped her remarks would not be considered a public criticism of her husband. She said:

Playboy Parent.

"I did blame men-chasing women who prey on men whether they are married or not. I also said I hoped he would stop being a playboy and make the kids proud of him again.

"But I sure was sorry he lost that fight."

She said he "wants to talk things over." She added:

"He didn't say he wants to come back and patch things up. He just said we can talk over business. Maybe he only wants to reach some money settlement."

She filed suit for divorce last Nov. 17, and the case has not yet come to trial.

She now blames a remark she made for their break-up. She said:

"It was something I shouldn't have said, and I'm sorry now that I said it. It was about something that happened quite a long time ago.

"Carl didn't answer. We didn't quarrel. He just went upstairs and packed his suitcase. He didn't say where he was going. And he didn't come back.

"Now he can come any time he wants to see the kids. I'm expecting him tonight."

Maybe, Yes; Maybe No.

But on the reconciliation question she said:

"I just don't know. That is something we would have to talk over."

At Sacramento, Sid Flaherty, Olson's manager, said it was possible that he and the fighter would spend the night there.

The taciturn Olson referred all questions of newsmen at the airport to Flaherty, but when informed of his wife's statement, his glum expression turned almost eager. Then he asked:

"Why, because I got knocked out?"

Asked if he hoped to effect a reconciliation, Bobo said:

"I can't talk about that now. I haven't made up my mind yet. I just don't know."

Flaherty said that he and Olson were planning to stay at a friend's ranch over the weekend. However, three hours later they had not yet arrived, and it was believed they may have changed their plans and now may be en route to San Francisco.

At San Francisco, Olson's aunt, Mrs. Marie Barros, said she had not heard from the ex-champion since he phoned last night shortly after the fight.

Mrs. Barros, who says "Dolores is a very nice girl and I'm for her 100 per cent," had a big fruit cake waiting for her nephew.

"Every time he fights I bake a big Portuguese fruit cake for him. He's crazy about them, and, of course, he can't eat things like that when he's in training.

"Win or lose, he's our champ."

Sooners Rate Tigers Best Defensive Team

NORMAN, Okla., Dec. 10 (UP) — Oklahoma's national champion Sooners today named three players each from Texas and Pittsburgh universities to their all-opponent football team.

Pittsburgh also was voted, by a near unanimous ballot, as the best offensive team. Missouri was named best on defense with Texas a close second.

Texas Guard Herb Gray won the only unanimous vote on the team, and Pittsburgh Quarterback Corny Salvaterra got all but two votes. Thirty-eight Oklahoma players participated in voting.

The Sooner all-opponent first team:

Ends—Harold Burnine, Missouri; Menan Schriewer, Texas.
Tackles—Sam Salerno, Colorado; Bob Pollock, Pittsburgh.
Guards—Herb Gray, Texas; Harold Hunter, Pittsburgh.
Center—Johnny Tatum, Texas.
Quarterback—Corny Salvaterra, Pittsburgh.
Halfbacks—Willy Greenlaw, Nebraska; Rex Fischer, Nebraska.
Fullback—Earl Lunsford, Oklahoma A. & M.

Pro Football Windup---Bears Have Chance to Catch Rams for Title

Gillman's Club Needs Only a Tie

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (UP)—The crippled Los Angeles Rams are favored to whip the Green Bay Packers Sunday and make Sid Gillman the second coach ever to come directly from a college campus and win a National Football League division title on the first try. Adam Walsh pulled the trick with the Cleveland Rams in 1945.

Los Angeles, leading the runnerup Chicago Bears by half a game in the Western Division, is a 6½ point choice, although star Pass Catchers Bob Boyd and Elroy Hirsch are injured and may not play. Tom Fears, the other top Ram receiver, also is hurt but will play in the Memorial Coliseum contest which will draw at least 75,000 fans.

The Bears, only team with a chance to catch Los Angeles, are 7½-point favorites for their regular season wind-up against the Philadelphia Eagles at Chicago. All of Coach George Halas' Bears are ready for the Wrigley Field game which will draw at least 50,000.

The Rams could win the title by defeating or tying the Packers, regardless of whether the Bears win or lose.

All 12 N.F.L. teams end their 1955 campaigns Sunday. The Cleveland Browns, who clinched the Eastern title last Sunday, will defend the league championship in the title game at Los Angeles or Chicago Dec. 26.

Graham's Swan Song.

Cleveland ends its regular season by entertaining the Chicago Cardinals. Quarterback Otto Graham and Guard Abe Gibron of the Browns will be honored at special ceremonies. Graham, who has helped Cleveland win 10 straight division titles in two leagues, will retire after the championship game and will play his final home game Sunday.

In the other windups, the San Francisco Forty - Niners play host to the Baltimore Colts; the New York Giants visit the Detroit Lions and the Washington Redskins play host to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Since the league was split into two divisions in 1933, Walsh is the only man who came directly from college coaching and won a divisional title. Walsh, who was the center for Notre Dame's famed "Four Horsemen" backfield, was line coach at his alma mater in 1944. In 1945, he guided the Cleveland Rams (now Los Angeles) to the Western N.F.L. title.

Gillman, who was head coach at the University of Cincinnati last year, could match Walsh's feat Sunday.

The Bears-Eagles game begins at 2:05 p.m., E.S.T. It will be finished shortly after the Rams-Packers contest gets under way at 4:05 p.m., E.S.T. So the Rams will know by halftime just what they have to do to wind up ahead of the Bears.

Halas Retiring as Coach.

Boyd, Hirsch and Fears aren't the only injured Rams. Defensive Halfback Hall Haynes is sidelined with a back injury. The Packers, who could post their best record since 1945 by winning, are in good shape. They scored a 30-28 triumph over the Rams at Milwaukee earlier this season when Fred Cone kicked a 25-yard field goal with 25 seconds to go.

The Bears, for once, will be rooting for their ancient rivals, the Packers. Many of the famed Bears of other years, including Bronko Nagurski, Red Grange and Sid Luckman, will be in Chicago to watch Halas coach the team for the last time—unless the Bears win the division crown.

Halas, who also owns the Bears, plans to retire as coach after the 1955 campaign. The Bear alumni figure to have a bang-up celebration if the 60-year-old Halas gets his club into the title game for the twelfth time.

Alton Knocks Off Mt. Vernon, 78 to 68

Elgie Posey's Alton Redbirds, with veteran Gene Velloff pumping in 31 points, registered a 78-68 basketball victory over the Mt. Vernon Rams last night on the Alton court. It was the third triumph in four outings for Alton. Mt. Vernon now has a 3-3 record.

Tom Nalley gave Velloff a lift in the offensive, counting 21 points. Gerry Graham had 17 for the visiting Rams.

Pairings for the eleventh annual East St. Louis Holiday Basketball tournament were announced last night by Louis (Pick) Dehner, East St. Louis High School coach and athletic director.

The Dupo Tigers, defending champions, open the four-day (Dec. 27-30) competition at Ainad Temple against St. Teresa of Decatur. Highland's Bulldogs oppose Johnston City, Assumption of East St. Louis is matched against Cumberland, and the host Flyers battle Pittsfield.

Highland, Pittsfield and Cumberland will be making their first appearance in the East St. Louis cage classic.

Swaps Breezes Half Mile; First Workout Since Nashua Race

ARCADIA, Calif., Dec. 10 (AP)—Swaps, 1955 Kentucky Derby winner, took his first workout today since his losing match race with Nashua last summer.

With exercise boy Chester White up, Rex Ellsworth's chestnut colt worked a half mile in 50 and 2-5 seconds. Trainer Misch Tenney indicated he was satisfied with condition of the horse's right front foot, which went lame after the Nashua race.

Swaps is preparing for the Santa Anita season opening Dec. 26. Both he and Nashua have been nominated for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

"How did the Olympic Games originate?"—George Forthman Jr., 1513A Warren.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica gives a detailed description of the games which once formed part of a religious ceremony and were held in Greece near some shrine or sacred place associated with some deity or mythical hero. In the fourth century this honor was paid to a living man and then began the distinct form of Greek athletics—boxing, wrestling, putting the weight, the foot and chariot race.

Olympia, the spot of the games, was a naturally enclosed spot in the plain of Elis.

The games were not held for 1500 years until, at the instigation of Baron Pierre de Coubertin, they were revived in 1896 and held on the site in Athens where the ancient festivals ended.

"Did Stan Musial of the Cardinals or Ed Mathews of the Milwaukee Braves hit more home runs at Busch Stadium during the 11 games the clubs played here last summer?"—Carl Perkins, 2609 South Twelfth.

Mathews hit five home runs in 11 games here. In the same period Musial hit four off Milwaukee pitchers.

Liston's Foe On East Side Real 'Spoiler'

St. Louis's Sonny Liston meets an "Upset Kid" on Promoter Herman Spritz's first professional boxing venture at Ainad Temple in East St. Louis Tuesday night.

Liston's foe will be Larry Watson of Omaha, Neb., a puncher who numbers the likes of Wesbury Bascom, Danny Nardico and John Holman among his upset victims. Watson definitely could be a stumbling block for Liston, who needs an important triumph at the present stage of his ring career.

International Boxing Club representatives are interested in the bout heading Spritz's card, and the winner possibly may get a television bout against a top notch heavyweight.

The six-round semifinal bout, a middleweight number, sends Chico Ochoa of East St. Louis against Chicago's Eddie Simms. Three other matches round out the card, East St. Louis's first pro ring program in more than 25 years.

Tuesday's card:

MAIN EVENT

Larry Watson, Omaha, Nebr., vs. Sonny Liston, St. Louis. Heavyweights, 10 rounds.

SEMI-FINAL

Chico Ochoa, East St. Louis, vs. Eddie Sims, Chicago. Middleweights, six rounds.

PRELIMINARIES

Irwin Thaich, East St. Louis, vs. Joe Henderson, Chicago. Middleweights, four rounds.

David Earl, East St. Louis, vs. Jerry Mortell, Chicago. Lightweights, four rounds.

Kenny Silvers, East St. Louis, vs. Flannell Hill, Chicago. Heavyweights, four rounds.

Hadley Coach To Westminster

Randy Pitts, coach of Hadley Tech's undefeated basketball team, yesterday announced that he was leaving the Public High school system to take a job as admissions counselor with Westminster College, effective Feb. 1.

Prior to the eight-game winning streak Hadley is working on this season, Pitts's teams had won 219 and lost 72 in a nine-year period. He twice coached teams at Lebanon High and at Washington, Mo., High into state tournament spots.

J. L. Hutton, Hadley athletic director, will take over Pitts's assignment during Feburary. He was the basketball coach until Pitts took over in September, 1953.

Eastern Soccer Tests Set Up Olympic Trials

NEW YORK, Dec. 10—Soccer players representing six eastern colleges—University of Pennsylvania, Temple, Penn State, City College of New York, Brooklyn and Dartmouth, held their own against a strong select team from clubs in New Jersey, Philadelphia and Baltimore today in the Olympic tryouts held at Zerega Oval in the Bronx. The result was a 3-3 tie score. The Eastern squad will be announced and will play western selections at St. Louis next month.

Richard Packer of Penn State, who held down the important position of center forward, gave a good account of himself in behalf of the collegians and drove in one of the three goals. The others were shot by Richard Tyrell of the University of Pennsylvania, who played brilliantly at outside right. John Konstantsanon, C.C.N.Y., playing at outside left, accounted for the third tally.

On the Tri-State League side, the goals were scored by Jim Gleason of Philadelphia, John Dolan of Trenton, and W. A. Nelson of Rochester.

In the second game of the doubleheader, the players representing the U.S. Armed Forces in Germany, who flew here two days ago, distinguished themselves by defeating a select team from clubs of the American Soccer League by the one-sided score of 4 goals to 0. The first period was well contested, neither side being able to tally.

The defense was broken down early in the second half when Siegbert Wirth, who hails from Syracuse, N.Y., and played at inside right, drove in the first goal of the game. Jack Pinecich, formerly of Penn State, increased the lead with a hard drive from outside left. The third goal was scored by Albert Zerhusen of Cincinnati. Wirth was credited with the fourth tally.

The Armed Forces team was in charge of Maj. Ralph Mendenhall from the Department of the Army in Washington, and Dr. George Withey from the headquarters of the United States airport players' program.

The father of a former Marquette University basketball star suffered a fatal heart attack shortly after watching his son score 18 points in an industrial league game. RUBEN SCHUL, SR., 56, collapsed while his son, RUBEN, Jr., were walking on the street.

Middleweight PETER MUELLER of Cologne, Germany, will meet VINCE MARTINEZ, third ranked welterweight from Paterson, N.J., in a 10-round bout at 154 pounds in the Milwaukee Arena Dec. 29.

The Sands scored a surprise victory in the $20,000 San Bruno Stakes at Tanforan. Count Chic was second and Lucky G. L. third. The Sands paid $31.80, $10.80 and $6. . . . The Washington Senators announced they had signed a limited working agreement with a new Class B club at Hobbs, N.M., in the Longhorn League, and are reported to be negotiating with Louisville in the American Association.

Five Grid Classics To Be on Television

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (UP)—The National Broadcasting Company will televise the National Football League championship game, the Blue-Gray game, the East-West Shrine contest, and the Cotton and Rose Bowl classics during the holiday season.

128 Nominated For Anita Derby

ARCADIA, Calif., Dec. 10 (UP)—A field of 128 coming three-year-olds, the second largest in the history of the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby, has been named for the nineteenth running of the stakes on March 3.

The list of nominations was exceeded only by the 141 named for the 1941 running of the mile and an eighth race which tops the winter program of sophomore racing in the west.

The list was headed by Prince John, winner of the Garden State Stakes last October for the richest purse in racing history—$157,918.50. He is the pride of the Elmendorf Farm.

Included in the nominations were 19 winners of stakes during 1955 as two-year-olds.

Among prominent juveniles of 1955 nominated were Barclay Stable's Polly's Jet, winner of five stakes; L. C. Stable's Bold Bazooka; B. R. Roberts's Blen Host; Rex C. Ellsworth's Like Magic, a full brother of Swaps; and J. R. Jelks's sensational filly, Miss Todd. Other stakes winners named were Carmel, Eastgate, Ferke, Focus, Innishowen, Mobile, Nearly, Neva T. and Spring Boy.

There are 14 foreign youngsters on the list.

Santa Anita Derby winners have captured three of the last four Kentucky derbies. These winners who won the Kentucky Derby were Hill Gail in 1952, Determine in 1954 and Swaps last year.

Only 14 to Return.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 10 (UP)—Of the 30 Notre Dame football players who won letters for the 1955 season, only 14 will return for next year. Of these, eight are juniors and six sophomores.

'Showboat' Hall Is New Cut-Up Of Trotters

Bob (Showboat) Hall, a cavorting six-foot, two-inch forward, will be introduced to St. Louisans by the Harlem Globetrotters as the successor to ex-Trotter "clown prince" Reece (Goose) Tatum when the Negro basketball team opposes the Philadelphia Sphas Christmas night at The Arena.

Abe Saperstein, the owner-coach of the Trotters, says Hall's rise to the No. 1 spot in the team's comedy theme didn't happen by accident. Hall worked on fun routines for years, but was unable to work before the public so long as Tatum was a member of the troupe. But the departure of the long-armed court comedian gave Hall his chance and his didoes are one of the features of the touring Trotters this year.

Several of his comedy routines are variations or "take-offs" of those done by Tatum.

In addition to being the chief laughmaker of the Trotters, Hall is considered a ball player of all-around ability. Despite his lack of height he is one of the best pivot-players in basketball.

The Trotter-Spha game will be the feature of a double-header. In the first game the Boston Whirlwinds, with Bevo Francis, the former Rio Grande College star, are to face the Washington (D.C.) Generals starting at 8 o'clock.

Granite City Loses To Carmi, 55-47

Carmi High trimmed the Granite City Warriors, 55-47, in a non-conference prep basketball game last night on the winner's floor. Carmi took advantage of 25 Warrior fouls, sinking 27 of 40 free throws, while Granite City was converting just five of 14. In suffering its third defeat in four starts, Granite City outscored Carmi in field goals, 21-14.

Jack Roberts scored 14 points for Granite City, Mike McCombs a like number for the winners, who have won four of five.

Harrison In Second Place In $12,500 Miami Open Golf Tourney

Souchak In Lead With 133

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP)—Big Mike Souchak, former Duke end who chose golf over the gridiron as a profession, cracked par with a sparkling 65 today and grabbed a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the $12,500 Miami Open.

"I was putting real well," he said. "I think that was the main thing."

Souchak, who tips the scales at 212, stands 5-feet-11 and is one of the longest drivers in the game, tacked his 5-under score to an opening 68 for a 133 total with one round to go.

One veteran pro, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of St. Louis, and three younger stars, Jay Hebert of Woodmere, N.Y., Frank Stranahan of Toledo and Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., were tied for second at 135. Palmer matched Souchak's 65 today. Harrison had a 66, Hebert 67 and Stranahan 68.

Par for the 6620-yard Miami Springs course is a comparatively easy 35-35—70. Twenty-two players broke par and 13 others matched it.

There was a six-way tie for fifth at 136. Jack Isaacs of Langley Air Force Base had a 67-69; Bud Holscher of Apple Valley, Calif., 68-68; Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N.Y., 69-67; Paul McGuire of Wichita, 68-68; Pete Cooper of Detroit, 68-68, and Mike Fetchick of Mahopac, N.Y., 67-69. Isaacs and Fetchick were among the five tied after the first.

Souchak, from Grossinger, N.Y., carded his fine round despite a bogey on No. 17, where his drive landed beside a tree and he was forced to putt the ball lefthanded onto the fairway. He canned birdie putts of 20, 15, 7, 7, 5 and 4 feet.

Palmer, 1954 National Amateur champion, had one eagle, four birdies and a bogey. He got an eagle deuce on the 350-yard sixth when he chipped in from 70 to 100 feet out. The bogey came at No. 3 where he went over the green and then missed a six-foot putt.

The field was trimmed to the low 61 pros and 10 amateurs for Sunday's final round. Pros shooting 144 or under qualified. The tournament was cut to 54 holes after the first round was canceled because of a cloudburst.

Nashua's Diet Hasn't Changed

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

Although his earning power is now estimated in the millions of dollars, champion race horse Nashua is still eating grass, like any other equine. Here, the 1955 3-year old champion, to be sold at auction this week, nibbles blue grass in his paddock on the Claiborne Farm near Paris, Ky.

Mr. Fitz Enters Nashua in Two Hialeah Stakes

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 10 (UP)—Old Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons handed two nomination blanks to the racing secretary of Hialeah Park today, making Belair Stud's Nashua eligible for both the $50,000 McLennan and the $100,000 Widener Handicaps.

"I don't know who will own or train him when the races come up but I wanted to make sure that Nashua was eligible for these classics in case he has the opportunity to run," the 81-year-old trainer said. "I know that Mr. Woodward planned to race Nashua in these two Hialeah stakes and throughout 1956 if he remained sound."

Nashua, who won $945,415 under the guidance of Mr. Fitz, currently is at Clairborn Farm, Paris, Ky., where he will remain until the executors of the William Woodward Jr., estate open the sealed bids Thursday to decide Nashua's new owners.

3 Soccer Cup Games Scheduled at Two Fields

By Dent McSkimming

Now that the swift St. Ambrose players have proved that the Kutis team is vulnerable in national tournament play, St. Agatha may be expected to make today's match more than just a formality.

If the game had been booked three weeks ago, Kutis would have been a top-heavy favorite because of its string of successes against out-of-town clubs. St. Ambrose's 2-1 Open Cup victory has changed that. Now, St. Agatha is conceded at least a fighting chance to win this third round U.S. amateur cup contest.

Two other national tournament games are on today's program here. The cup game menu:

At Oakland Stadium: National Open Cup, St. Ambrose (C.Y.C. champion) vs. R.K.A. Jones (County League champion), 12:45; National Amateur Cup, Kutis vs. St. Agatha (C.Y.C.), 2:30.

At Fairgrounds, Grounds Three: National Amateur Cup, Brehenys (Khoury League) vs. Holy Rosary (C.Y.C.), 2:30.

One player, Don Roedner, is listed on the rosters of two teams involved in the Oakland Stadium doubleheader. He is a member of St. Ambrose in the Open competition, and he plays for St. Agatha in the Amateur field.

The Field Narrows Down.

By nightfall, assuming there are no tie scores, there will remain only three teams in the Missouri division of the national Open, that is the winner of the St. Ambrose-Jones game and the Simpkins and Carondelet teams. The latter two will meet at an early date.

In the Amateur field, today's two winners will go into the Missouri fourth round. Other teams that have not yet played their third round matches are: Spanish Society, Jack Diamonds, Meramecs, Simpkins and the Kansas City-Lincoln, Nebr., survivor.

It will be interesting to see what the feverish Kutis management will do about its center forward problem. Putting all its eggs in one basket, hoping to win its Open Cup tests, Kutis groomed no center forward specialist for amateur play. Both Bob Rooney and Rich Meisemann are listed as professionals. So is Tom Julius, utility backfield man. There are plenty of good players on the squad and one of them should be able to do a fair job at center.

St. Agatha Reinforced.

St. Agatha will be reinforced by the presence of Al Jarolimek from the St. Paul team, and Al Layton and Bill O'Toole from the Our Lady of Sorrows team . . . Sam Sapienza, a soldier at Fort Leonard Wood, hopes to get into the city to take over his center halfback post with St. Ambrose . . . Because three of the teams of the Cardinal Glennon division of C.Y.C. are involved in Cup games, that group's scheduled doubleheader has been postponed.

Khoury League leaders, Simpkins, oppose Liberty in the second game of a Carondelet doubleheader . . . Meramec, tied for second, faces Craig club in the first game . . . Earlier in the season, Liberty held Simpkins to a 2-0 score.

Ray Berdeaux to Manage.

Ray Berdeaux has taken over as manager of the Carondelet Sunday Morning A. C. soccer team of the Municipal League. He succeeds Lou Grossgloss. Although he recently underwent an operation for removal of cartilage from an injured knee, Berdeaux hopes to return to action before the close of this season. . . . Drawings for playoffs in C.Y.C. soccer will be held Monday night at the C.Y.C. offices. . . . Joe Provazek has issued a call for senior soccer players. Joe can be reached at 4232 College avenue, EV 5-9563.

Missouri's Pheasant Need: A 'New' Bird.

MISSOURI SPORTSMEN long have held hope that the pheasant population in this state would become large enough to provide good hunting, but it is becoming increasingly clear this is not to be.

One remote possibility is that a "new" species of pheasant will be found that is more adaptable to Missouri's habitat than the Mongolian ringneck now here in limited numbers.

Donald M. Christisen, the commission's expert on pheasants, told Outdoors:

"The ring-necked pheasant of composite ancestral background is not a success in Missouri.

"Somewhere in a world which supports 32 different species of pheasants there probably is a Phasianus which more nearly fits Missouri's exacting environment than does our present species.

"Our hopes and efforts can best be directed toward finding a 'new' pheasant rather than attempting to solve the mysteries of our present exotic.

"Changes in environment and natural adaptation on the part of the bird itself may one day bring about more pheasants—but when?"

Token-Scale Hunting.

Two years ago, the commission decided to put pheasants on the game list for 16 days each year, raising hopes in some quarters that the birds had become numerous enough to afford good hunting.

Actually, the decision was based primarily on recognition that pheasant shooting was never going beyond the token stage. In that event, hunters might just as well harvest some of the birds.

During the state-wide season which ended Nov. 25, sportsmen took an estimated 2000 cock pheasants—about the same as last year.

Atchison, Holt and Nodaway counties in northwest Missouri provided most of the shooting, although the northern tier of counties adjoining Iowa and portions of St. Charles county furnished some birds.

Counties along the southern border of Iowa, a much better pheasant state than Missouri, had an unusually large number of birds this year.

Figures compiled last year showed pheasant hunters in this state bagged one cock bird for each seven hours in the field—hardly a happy record.

Christensen, the biologist, calls Missouri's pheasants a "bonus baby," which hunters may add at times to their take of the more plentiful native game.

10-Year Bar Tried.

Since the supply of pheasants is so small, many sportsmen wonder why the season is not closed for a few more years until the number of birds increases, Christisen said.

He pointed out that Missouri first began importing and stocking pheasants in the early 1900s. In the ensuing years efforts were made to boost population, with little success.

For 10 years prior to 1954, the state kept the season closed, but the number of pheasants remained about the same. Iowa and Nebraska tried closed seasons with little benefit in their marginal pheasant-producing counties, Christisen stated.

"If pheasants cannot bring off young in numbers greater than the natural mortality rate, then closed seasons are mere formalities insofar as increasing the population," he observed.

"Unfortunately, keeping the season closed does not stockpile more pheasants. Nature exacts her toll each year. Seasons make no difference.

"During the winter and early spring, nature lays claim to a share of the breeders over and above what the habitat will carry. To take advantage of the summer's bird crop before natural losses take the surplus, man must harvest as soon as the crop is ripe in the fall."

Restricting shooting to cock pheasants, as Missouri does, is good insurance, since a ratio of one cock to six hens is considered sufficient to maintain a stability of production, Christisen said.

Turkeys More Promising.

Wild turkeys, as pheasants, are scarce in Missouri but this important distinction exists: Turkeys are native to this state, while pheasants are not. So the present bar on taking turkeys may show beneficial results.

Imported birds thrive in areas where natural conditions are favorable. This has been amply demonstrated in the Dakotas with pheasants.

Another example is Oregon, where 26 pheasants imported from the East were stocked in 1881. Eleven years later, 50,000 pheasants were reported killed the first day of the hunting season.

But wildlife populations will not grow if habitat is unfavorable. This is the condition existing in most of Missouri regarding pheasants.

Since the commission is adverse to large-scale stocking, contending this is a useless and expensive procedure, the outlook is not bright for pheasant hunting in Missouri.

Basketball at Sherman, First Since the Fire

Part of the Sherman Park Community Center will be put in use for the first time since last month's fire when the closed division of the Muny basketball league plays a doubleheader on the north court.

In a 1:30 game, Manchester A.C. will meet Frisco, and Sorth will oppose the St. Louis Washers at 2:30.

Two open division games are scheduled for the Hadley Tech gym. The Scotts, who defeated Venice A.C. last week, will meet Granite City Salvation Army at 1:30. At 2:30, Venice will meet the Collegians.

Tied for Pin Lead.

The Emge bowlers, rolling top team scores of 1008 and 2844, defeated the Reinekes, 2-1, to tie the losers for first place in the South Side Classic Scratch League at Du-Bowl Lanes. Other team results: Edwards 2, Thurmers 1; Seven Up 2, Alba 1; Harrys 2, Fred Willens 1. Don Bodimer's 250 and Mike Hook's 653 took the individual honors.

De Menils, Londoffs Win Girls' Contests

The DeMenils defeated the Jefferson No. 2 team, 56 to 12, and the Londoffs crushed Rock Alumnae No. 2, 29 to 17, in Mid-City girls basketball play yesterday at the Salvation Army gymnasium.

Esta Stringer of the DeMenils was high scorer for the day with 12 points.

Miss Mesker Married To William E. Maritz

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Phyllis Mesker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Mesker, to William Edward Maritz took place yesterday afternoon at the Church of St. Michael and St. George. White snapdragon, stock and chrysanthemums in vases on the altar and in tall arrangements at the chancel entrance provided contrast to the woodwardia fern screening the choir stalls. Lighted tapers held in branched candelabra stood in the arches at either side of the church alternating with clipped, stylized privet trees. The Rev. Dr. J. Francis Sant officiated.

The bride wore the gown originally belonging to her paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Frank (Pauline Gehner) Mesker. Fashioned of exquisite Brussels and rosepoint lace, the gown was worn over an ivory taffeta underdress and designed with an off-shoulder neckline, short sleeves and a skirt draped in polonnaise style at front. A narrow French blue velvet ribbon encircling the bride's waist tied at back extending in streamers the length of her train. Her long tulle veil was gathered to a dainty wreath formed of wax orange blossoms. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of lilies of the valley and stephanotis.

Miss Barbara Learnard of Newton, Mass., served as maid of honor and Mrs. Wells Atherton Hobler (Jean Maritz), sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. David L. Edwards (Sarah Shipley), Miss Sue Sullivan, Miss Erle Talbot Lund, Miss Eve McRoberts and Miss Nancy Wight were bridesmaids. Their mauve taffeta gowns featured square necklines, cap sleeves and molded, elongated bodices to which

Miss Davenport, Mark T. Neville Are Engaged

DR. AND MRS. S. M. DAVENPORT of Kingston, Pa., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Barbara Ann Davenport, to Mark T. Neville, son of Dr. and Mrs. Mark Neville of Chicago. Dr. Neville, headmaster of the Latin School in Chicago, formerly was head of the English department at John Burroughs School. He and his family lived on North Woodlawn avenue, in Kirkwood.

The bride-elect, who is planning an August wedding, was graduated from Kingston High School and Bucknell University where she became a member of Alpha Phi sorority and of the Glee Club. She is now a faculty member at the Lansdowne-Alden Jointure in Lansdowne, Pa.

Mr. Neville was graduated from Community and John

A January Wedding in Australia

Miss Rosemary Gladwell to Become the Bride of Dr. Lawrence Tyler Post Jr. in Melbourne.

THE engagement and forthcoming marriage of Miss Rosemary Gladwell to Dr. Lawrence Tyler Post Jr., has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Arthur Gladwell of Melbourne, Australia. Dr. Post, a member of old St. Louis families, is the eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Tyler Post, 44 Portland place.

The wedding is planned to take place Friday, Jan. 6, in Melbourne. Dr. Post will leave St. Louis Dec. 30 to fly to Australia.

Miss Gladwell received her education at English schools in Australia. She is the sister of Mrs. Anthony Storey, a doctor living in London. Her paternal great-grandfather owned the first sugar plantation in Queensland, Australia.

Dr. Post represents the third consecutive generation on his father's side to practice medicine. He is a grandson of the late Dr. M. Hayward Post and Mary Lawrence Ty-

Candlelight Wedding At Church

Gretchen Taussig Is Married to H. Robert Kilpatrick Jr. at Evening Service.

ONE of the largest of the pre-holiday weddings took place last night at Grace Episcopal Church, Kirkwood, when Miss Gretchen Dyke Taussig was married to H. Robert Kilpatrick Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Allen Taussig, 725 North Taylor avenue, Kirkwood, who gave a reception at Greenbriar Hills Country Club after the 8 o'clock ceremony.

Bouquets of white chrysanthemums decorated the altar which was lighted with white tapers. Clusters of the white candles were arranged in tall candelabra in the chancel, the bases of the candelabra banked with masses of woodwardia fern. Lighted white tapers also illuminated the center aisle. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James A. Doubleday.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Judith Taussig, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Louis Earl Turner, Mrs. Robert David Evans Jr., Miss Marian Reis, Miss Mary Bryan Bemis and Miss Cynthia Haw. Junior bridesmaid was Mr. Kilpatrick's sister, Miss Karan Kilpatrick.

Joseph Edward Kilpatrick was best man for his brother. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Kilpatrick, 1663 Topping road, St. Louis county. Seating the guests were Mr. Turner, Herbert Marshall Sayers, Paul L. Robertson Jr., Thomas Parker Jones, Herbert Warren Sayers and Dr. F. Eugene Pennington Jr.

Chantilly lace and tulle were combined for the wedding gown which was styled with a long-sleeved lace bodice, the small lace collar sprinkled with iridescent sequins. Two lace panels, at front and back, fell over a

Their Marriages Announced

MRS. WILLIAM PAUL BEECHER

MRS. ROBERT McLARAN SAWYER

California Wedding For Marlene Weigel, William P. Beecher

NEWS has reached St. Louis concerning the marriage Nov. 19 of Miss Marlene Weigel to William Paul Beecher in Riverside, Calif. The ceremony was performed at St. Ignatius Church in Riverside by the Rev. Hugh McNelis.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Weigel, 4 Lake Pembroke drive, Ferguson, who went west for the ceremony. Afterward they gave the reception at historic Mission Inn.

The former Miss Weigel wore a short white cotton lace gown. A lace cap held her full, shoulder-length veil and she carried a shower of white orchids.

Miss Nancy Rogers of San Bernardino, Calif., a former roommate of the bride at the University of Missouri, was her only attendant. She wore a Dior blue peau de soie gown and matching accessories and carried pink chrysanthemums.

Mr. Beecher, so nof Mrs. William Paul Beecher of Riverside, and the late Mr. Beecher, had Warren Pilcher as best man. Ushers were Hugh Butler and Jerry Thomas.

Mr. Beecher and his bride, after a wedding trip to Arizona, will live in El Paso, Tex.

Patricia Covert Is Married to R.M. Sawyer

MISS PATRICIA COVERT was married to Robert McLaran Sawyer in a double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. J. R. Miss Punch Married To J. N. Kilburg Jr. In Syracuse, N.Y.

MISS SALLY PUNCH and Joseph N. Kilburg Jr. of St. Louis were married Saturday, Nov. 26, at St. John the Evangelist Church in Syracuse, N.Y. Msgr. Joseph B. Toomey performed the wedding service.

Miss Mary Jane Punch was maid of honor for her sister.

MRS. JOSEPH N. KILBURG JR.

They are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Punch, Syracuse. Another sister, Miss Mary Jane Punch, and Miss Rosemary Mallor were bridesmaids. The young women wore blue taffeta and carried American Beauty roses.

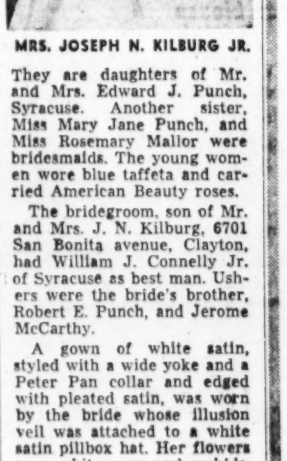

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Kilburg, 6701 San Bonita avenue, Clayton, had William J. Connelly Jr. of Syracuse as best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, Robert E. Punch, and Jerome McCarthy.

A gown of white satin, styled with a wide yoke and a Peter Pan collar and edged with pleated satin, was worn by the bride whose illusion veil was attached to a white satin pillbox hat. Her flowers were white roses and orchids.

After a reception at the Punch home, Mr. and Mrs. Kilburg departed on a southern honeymoon. They will live in Syracuse.

Betty Jane Gieseler Married at Church To Edwin J. Barutio

THE first wedding in the new Mary Queen of Peace Church in Webster Groves took place yesterday morning when Miss Betty Jane Gieseler became the bride of Edwin Joseph Barutio, Specialist, Second Class, stationed with the Army at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. The Rev. Joseph O'Toole officiated at the service.

Afterward the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester John Gieseler, 9446 Litzsinger road, Ladue, gave a breakfast at Le Chateau.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a white taffeta gown with lace appliqued at the neckline and on the bouffant skirt. Her lace tiara held an illusion veil. White orchids, carnations and lilies of the valley were combined for her bouquet.

Miss Kathryn Hardesty was maid of honor while Miss Grace Barutio, the bridegroom's sister, Miss Jacqueline Schutte and Miss Pauline Weller, were bridesmaids. They carried nosegays of turquoise and white carnations with their turquoise gowns. Charlotte Anne Birge, the flower girl, wore a white ruffled dress over turquoise.

Mr. Barutio, son of Mrs. Edwin J. Barutio, 7715 Brookline terrace, Richmond Heights, and the late Mr. Barutio, had Richard Bena as best man. Ushers were Edward Gieseler, the bride's brother; James Keithly, Richard Quick, Robert Burch, Patrick Ash and Peter Iwasyszyn.

After a brief honeymoon, the newly-married couple will live at San Antonio, Tex., until his release from the Army.

Party at St. Joseph's Academy.

A Christmas party and meeting will be held at St. South Lindbergh boulevard, Thursday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Holthaus will be social chairmen, assisted by Mrs. Peter Kovel. The junior class representatives will be Mrs. Fred Switzer and Mrs. A. O'Neil Croak. Mrs. Thomas R. Lyons will be in charge of refreshments.

Harriet Cohen Becomes Bride

THE marriage of Miss Harriet Betty Cohen to Dr. Joseph Bergal of Winnipeg, Manitoba, took place last Sunday afternoon in the Tiara room of the Park Plaza Hotel. Rabbi Ephraim Epstein performed the ceremony under a heart-shaped canopy of white flowers.

Guests remained for a dinner given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cohen, 7353 Dartmouth avenue, University City.

The bride's gown of white chantilly lace over satin was fashioned with a satin cummerbund which tied in back in a large bow. The full skirt ended in a train. Her lace and satin coronet held a tulle veil. She carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Three cousins of the bride, Mrs. Jerome Scissors, Mrs. Alan Lander and Miss Elaine Choslovsky, served as matron of honor and bridesmaids, respectively. Donna Sue Scissors was flower girl. Pale pink flower bouquets blended with their light blue peau de soie frocks.

The bridegroom, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bergal, were here for the wedding, had his brother, Harley Bergal, as best man. The bride's brother, William Cohen, Willard Schacter, Mr. Lander and Mr. Scissors, were ushers.

After a wedding trip to New Orleans and Biloxi, the couple will reside in Winnipeg.

The bride attended the University of Miami, Fla., while the bridegroom received his medical degree from the University of Manitoba.

Miss Reisman Becomes Bride

MISS HANAROSE REISMAN was married to Dr. Leo J. Eschelbacher of Mount Vernon, Ill., at a small, informal ceremony Sunday morning, Nov. 20, in the Lido room of the Chase Hotel. Rabbi Jacob Mazur officiated in a setting of white lilies and chrysanthemums. The bride, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Reisman of Cairo, Ill., has been living here at 5540 Pershing avenue. She was given in marriage by her brother, Julius Reisman of Hughes, Ark. Her sheath gown was Dior blue satin brocade, street length, and was fashioned with elbow sleeves and a V neckline with rhinestone button trim. She carried a white Bible with a cascade of white orchids encircled with lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Dorothy Marinov, Chicago, was her sister's only attendant. She was dressed in dusty pink lace, ballet length, with a full flaired skirt. Her flowers were red colonial roses. Dr. Ernst Aufrecht of Benton, Ill., served as best man for Dr. Eschelbacher.

The couple spent a short honeymoon in New Orleans. Dr. and Mrs. Eschelbacher will make their home in Mount Vernon.

Joan Livingston Is Married to John W. McMahon

MISS JOAN BEVERLY LIVINGSTON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil C. Livingston, 5336 Walsh street, St. Louis Hills, became the bride of John W. McMahon yesterday morning at Our Lady of Sorrows Church, with Msgr. Henry F. Schuermann officiating.

Miss Rosemary Faust attended the bride as maid of honor. Thomas F. McMahon was best man for his brother. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Brandon P. McMahon of Butte, Mont. Mr. Livingston gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride wore a gray wool princesse dress designed with a cowl neck, bracelet-length sleeves and a short skirt. She wore a white satin hat ornamented with a rhinestone clip and carried a white prayer book to which was fastened a white orchid. Miss Faust was in a sky blue wool dress trimmed with a satin collar and cuffs, and a matching hat. She held a spray of mauve orchids.

The bride is a senior student in medical technology at St. Louis University. She is a member of Kappa Beta Gamma, social society, and Alpha Delta Theta, professional sorority. Last year she was crowned Homecoming Queen at the university.

Mr. McMahon received his B.S. degree from Santa Clara (Calif.) University and is now a junior at St. Louis University School of Medicine. He belongs to Alpha Sigma Nu, Jesuit honor fraternity, and Alpha Kappa Kappa, national medical fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Livingston gave a family breakfast at Bippin's Estate after the wedding.

Loth-Sundhausen Chapel Wedding

MISS JANET KATHRYN SUNDHAUSEN became the bride last night of Airman Second Class Wayne Loth at Elizabeth Holloway Woods Memorial Chapel of Webster Groves Presbyterian Church. White flowers, greenery and candlelight provided a setting for the ceremony performed by the Rev. Dr. Harry T. Scherer. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil R. Sundhausen, 45 Moody avenue, Webster Groves.

Miss Janet Carol Reifsteck served as maid of honor and Miss Ruth Willing and Mrs. Frank Blair as bridesmaids. They wore tangerine colored crystallette gowns over taffeta and carried white carnations and variegated holly.

The former Miss Sundhausen chose a white satin gown trimmed with chantilly lace. The long-sleeved bodice featured a scalloped neckline and the full skirt extended into a wide train. The bride's veil fell to her fingertips from a pearl and sequin crown and she carried a bouquet of white orchids.

The bridegroom, son of Roy A. Loth of Toledo, O., had the bride's brother, Seaman Second Class James Sundhausen now stationed in Tacoma, Wash., as best man. Ushers were Mr. Blair, Walter Edwards, Wilbur Reed and Frank Kramer.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the La-Vergne Blisner Studio in Webster Groves. White flowers adorned the studio.

MADISON

GUESTS last week at the home of Mrs. D. A. Smith, 1520 Fourth street, were her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Odle, and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Rogers, West Frankfort, Ill.

the only blanket with everything I'm looking for...

the 100% Acrilan blanket

I LOVE THE WAY IT FEELS! It's so rich, and fluffy, and soft – I never thought a blanket could be so luxurious!

IT'S COMPLETELY, COMPLETELY WASHABLE! I know it sheds dirt in a hurry. I know it dries so fast you have to see it to believe it. I know... because I've heard my neighbors rave about their Acrilan blankets.

IT WON'T SHRINK OR LOSE ITS SOFTNESS. I want a blanket that simply won't shrink. I want to know it won't fade, or mat down, or get all boardy. And I'm tired of feeding blankets to the moths! It's wonderful to know I don't have to worry about any of that with Acrilan.

IT'S SO WARM... AND SO WEIGHTLESS! I like a blanket that's light... really light... yet that won't leave me shivering if the temperature drops. I can tell just by lifting it... what I need is Acrilan acrylic fiber.

I LOVE THE WAY IT LOOKS! Christmas is for pretty things, and believe me, this Acrilan blanket's a beauty! But don't just take my word for it. Stop in at your favorite store. See its luscious colors for yourself. If you're like me, you'll start hinting for an Acrilan blanket, too!

In blue, pink, yellow, green, white, and lots more rich colors... at only $16.95

VIRGINIA GOOD STOP-OVER STATE ON WAY SOUTH

RICHMOND, Va.—Visitors to warmer climes in the South will find Virginia a delightful stop-over state to and from their winter vacations.

Winters in Virginia are seldom too cold for outdoor activities, including golf, horseback riding and visits to historic shrines and natural wonders. It is a season when guests at resorts, hotels and motels find surroundings ideally conducive to a much needed rest.

Outstanding among the seasonal events is the Yuletide program in Williamsburg. Starting in early December, the program's major events are scheduled from the week before Christmas through New Year's day.

During this period, the historic Colonial Capital dons its holiday dress, giving visitors an opportunity to see and participate in a community-wide recreation of the Yuletide season 200 years ago in this historic city.

All of Virginia's historic shrines are appropriately decorated for the Christmas season. Open also during the entire year are Virginia's famous natural wonders—Natural Bridge, the several spectacular limestone caverns in the Shenandoah valley, and natural tunnel, in the great southwest.

Third Largest.

Canada is the third largest country in the world.

School Was Never Like This

—St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce.

This is learning the easy way. Students at Central High School in St. Petersburg absorb winter sunshine along with "book larnin'." The resort also has an outdoor bus terminal and outdoor church.

PEACE AND QUIET

Peace and quiet for Miami Beach's winter vacationers is preserved by the city's anti-noise ordinance, effective Dec. 1-Mar. 31, thereby curbing building activity.

The law prohibits construction work within 150 feet of apartment houses or hotels in densely populated areas. Noisy activities may only be carried on between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. in residential sections.

ST. PETERSBURG PLANS TO BUILD ANOTHER BRIDGE

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — This somewhat conservative city of homes and churches, only a small village five short decades ago and now populated by 135,000 permanent residents, is confronted with the immediate problem of housing and entertaining 1,000,000 visitors annually. That's seven tourists for each man, woman and child who lives here.

The Sunshine City's position on a peninsula, surrounded by glamorous islands, accounts for much of its popularity and some of its headaches. The four bridge and causeway systems now connecting St. Petersburg with the gulf Keys, as well as the 30-mile highway along these islands are proving inadequate. So is the famous Gandy bridge spanning the bay between here and Tampa, but this bottleneck will be relieved in March when a second $3,000,000 bridge is opened.

Traffic on the 15-mile $22,000,000 Sunshine Skyway, now across-water connection with the Florida mainland, is nearly double the predicted figure. Now the king of all bridge systems, linking the gulf Keys with the group of islands to the south and connecting with the Skyway, is on the engineers' drawing boards.

Glows at Night.

Phosphorus, which glows at night in southern waters such as those around Miami Beach, is due to presence of myriads of tiny marine animals containing luciferin, a substance which produces light when combined with oxygen.

RESORT AREAS DEVELOPING ALONG TEXAS COASTAL BEND

With 131 miles of unbroken beach its principal asset, one of North America's most beautiful and inexpensive resort areas is rapidly developing along the Texas Coastal Bend.

Its boundless beaches on Padre and Mustang islands, its excellent fishing at Port Aransas and Rockport, and colorful Old Mexico just three hours away by car, are its chief attractions.

From Corpus Christi, key city of the Coastal Bend, a visitor can view the million-acre King ranch, or enjoy excellent fishing less than 30 miles either way.

While the area with its unending beaches, Latin atmosphere and warm climate impress most visitors it is particularly a paradise for the outdoor man. Hunters find ducks plentiful, but if one prefers deer, bear, mountain lions, jaguars or wild turkeys, inexpensive hunting tours can be arranged into Mexico.

Although the development of the area into a vacationland is still in its infancy, plans are underway for the construction of hotels and other resort sections on Parde island.

NASSAU DELIGHTFUL IN WINTER SEASON

NASSAU, Bahamas—"Boat to Paradise, Mister?"

That is the query of boatmen along the docks at Prince George's wharf in Nassau, as they scramble for an opportunity to take visitors across Nassau harbor to one of the most beautiful beaches in the world—Paradise Beach.

It is little wonder that the phrase has been picked up so often by visiting writers, for it is descriptive of all of Nassau and all of the Bahamas.

Here sun, sea and sand—plus the glitter of society during the winter months—have turned the area into a mecca for those who seek the tranquility of a modern community that has succeeded in living at a leisurely pace without the pseudo benefits of neon lights, traffic lights or billboard advertisements.

True, when one is in a gay mood and wants to hear and see the native music, the Goombay singers and dancers, the calypso rhythms and the fire dancers, there are places to go—not honky tonks and not as sedate as the Waldorf. Just places where the natives go for entertainment, but where the visitor is also invited and treated with respect.

Winter temperatures range in the mid-seventies. A "norther" brings a chill that has been known to send the thermometer down to 55 degrees, but that is usually only when blizzards have blanketed with snow the Southern states as far down as New Orleans and Tallahassee, Fla.

What does one do in Nassau? Well, there is water skiing, swimming at any of a score of fine beaches, fishing for the hundreds of varieties of piscatorial fighters, sailing, golfing, tennis, horseback riding—to name but a few of the participant sports.

Then one goes to Hobby Horse Hall to watch the horse races on Tuesday and Friday afternoons; goes sightseeing in a surrey with the fringe on top or in a modern limousine with a well-informed driver; bicycles around the quaint British streets; or just wanders down Bay street, the fabulous "bargain" shopping street of imported goods from all over the world.

By sea and by air, by cruise ship and airliner, by private yacht and executive plane, visitors reach Nassau quickly and comfortably. Such luxury liners as the S.S. Nassau, Ocean Monarch, Queen of Bermuda and others from New York make regular trips to Nassau. Twice weekly the Queen of Nassau comes on an overnight journey from Miami.

A dozen or more daily flights over B.O.A.C., Pan-American, Trans-Canada, and Mackey airlines connects Nassau with Miami, New York, Fort Lauderdale, Palm Beach, Tampa, Bermuda, Jamaica and England. Trips across the Gulf Stream from Florida are but 50 minutes, soon to be lessened when turbo-jet service is started.

Then, when one gets here, Bahamas Airways opens up new vistas to the beautiful Out Islands of the Bahamas.

'Needle Squad' for Gridiron Party

THE "NEEDLE SQUAD" FOR THE ANNUAL GRIDIRON DINNER TO BE GIVEN BY THE WOMEN'S ADVERTISING CLUB IN APRIL MAKES A TOUR OF ST. LOUIS POLICE HEADQUARTERS. SGT. FRANK B. RUFF, IN CHARGE OF THE DEPARTMENT LABORATORY, GIVES MRS. HENRIETTA BAKER, SEATED, CLUB PRESIDENT, A LIE DETECTOR TEST. LOOKING ON ARE MISS BONNIE DEWES, LEFT, LT. COL. JAMES E. CHAPMAN, CHIEF OF DETECTIVES; MRS. E. GARY DAVIDSON, MISS HELEN HARDESTY AND MRS. NORRIE PASSINO. MISS BEATRICE ADAMS, THE SIXTH MEMBER OF THE "NEEDLE SQUAD" WAS NOT PRESENT WHEN THE PHOTOGRAPH WAS MADE.

Special Group Organized for 1956 Gridiron

IN preparation for the 1956 gridiron dinner, to be given in April by the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis, a special committee called the "needle squad," has beeen organized. Serving on this committee are Mrs. Henrietta Baker, club president; Miss Beatrice Adams, Mrs. E. Gary Davidson (Clarissa Start), Miss Bonnie Dewes, Miss Helen Hardesty and Mrs. Norrie Passino. A group of socially prominent women, who are not club members, are serving anonymously on the squad which has been in operation since the Veiled Prophet ball in October.

"Needle Squad" members attend personally or by proxy important local functions getting information on personalities, political issues, civic projects and social activities which seem to merit special needling at next year's gridiron. The squad also helps to screen the guest list. Each year great numbers of women ask to have their names added to the regular invitation list for the party in the Jefferson Hotel's Gold Room, which accommodates only 1000 guests.

The "needle squad" is working to make the twenty-second annual gridiron party the most spectacular in the history of the club. The 1956 gridiron chairman will be announced before the advent of the New Year.

Miss Taussig Bride Of H. R. Kilpatrick Jr.

bouffant tulle skirt. The bride wore a fingertip illusion veil, held in place by a sequin-trimmed lace headdress, and carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and orchids.

The bride's attendants were in deep French blue velvet ballerina gowns designed with scoop necklines and short sleeves. Empire waistlines were emphasized with velvet bands tied in bows at back. The young women wore small matching hats and held bouquets of pale pink rosebuds.

Guests were received in the club lounge before an arrangement of white chrysanthemums and greenery about the mantel. White flowers and lighted white tapers adorned the bridal and buffet tables. Mrs. Taussig wore a beige lace gown over pale blue peau de soie, a small iridescent sequin hat and a white orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother was in a cocoa lace sheath gown over beige taffeta. Her hat was also cocoa lace and her corsage was brown slipper orchids.

On their return from a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga., Mr. Kilpatrick and his bride will live in Manhassett Village.

Out-of-town guests here for the wedding included the bride's sister, Mrs. Robert A. Donovan of Ithaca, N.Y., and her three children and Mr. and Mrs. George Nethery of Golden, Ill. Dr. Donovan, who is on the faculty of Cornell University, will join his family at the Taussig home for the Christmas holidays.

MISS JEAN MARIE MAUTNER FIANCEE OF DONALD FLOYD EMILY, SON OF MR. AND MRS. MAX EMILY, SEYMOUR, IND. SHE IS THE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM MAUTNER, 8719 HOOVER AVENUE, RICHMOND HEIGHTS.

Jean Hudson, Mr. Zimmerman Are Married

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH in Ferguson was the setting yesterday morning for the marriage of Miss Jean Hudson to Arnold William Zimmerman Jr. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank Branson.

The former Miss Hudson, who until her marriage was an airline stewardess, is the daughter of Mrs. Lyndola A. Hudson of Perryville, Mo., and Floyd O. Hudson, 4820 Anderson avenue. The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold W. Zimmerman, live at 321 Newport avenue, Webster Groves.

The bride chose a pale pink wool dress, fashioned with princesse lines, and carried white glamellias. Her sister, Miss Mary Lou Hudson, who served as maid of honor, was dressed identically in American Beauty with matching satin accessories. Her corsage was of pink glamellias.

Charles C. Christian served as best man for Mr. Zimmerman. The bridegroom is an alumnus of Webster Groves High School and the University of Missouri. His fraternity is Sigma Nu.

A wedding breakfast was served at the couple's new home, 7230 Marlton lane, St. Louis county, where they will live after a honeymoon in New Orleans.

Miss Barbara Nutter Married in Kansas To Robert L. Hayden

MISS BARBARA JEAN NUTTER became the bride Nov. 19 of Robert Louis Hayden at St. Benedict's Church at Atchison, Kan. The Rev. Ambrose Keating officiated. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Edward Nutter, 301 South Woodlawn avenue, Kirkwood; Mr. Hayden's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Albert Hayden, live in Mannford, Okla.

The bride and bridegroom both attend college at Atchison, she is at Mount St. Scholastica while he is a student at St. Benedict's.

For her wedding the former Miss Nutter wore a taffeta and chantilly lace gown previously worn by her sister, Mrs. John Michael Easterday. The dress is fashioned with cap sleeves, a fitted bodice and a full skirt. A lace cap held the bride's veil and she carried white roses.

Miss Cecile Louise Hayden, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor wearing a blue velveteen princess gown. The bridesmaids, Miss Jacquelyn White, St. Mary's, Kan., and Miss Marlene Erna Merten, El Segundo, Calif., were identically gowned. They wore juliet caps of the velveteen trimmed with seed pearls and carried white chrysanthemums and pompons. Rita Anne Hayden, sister of the bridegroom, was flower girl wearing a white velveteen frock.

Philip Franklin Arthur served as best man and ushers were Philip James O'Reilly, Marvin Boes, Charles Combs and Arthur Miller.

Miss Schnable Hostess.

Miss Willa Afin Schnable, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Schnable, 7370 Carleton avenue, University City, gave a buffet dinner recently in honor of a Stephens College classmate, Miss Lucy Nokes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John M. Nokes of Charlottesville, Va.

Wedding at Church For Phyllis Mesker

were attached full circular skirts. Layers of matching malines formed their crownless hats which were accented with green leaves. Their bouquets, crescent-shaped, were composed of pink roses and camellia leaves.

Mr. Maritz, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Maritz, 24 Carrswold, Clayton, had his brother, James A. Maritz Jr., as best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, David Warren Mesker, C. Peyton Daniel Jr., Herbert C. Phillips Jr., William H. Petring Jr., Richard Hungerford, Jefferies M. Arrick, Robert Frantz, East Orange, N.J.; Roger Smith, Chicago, and J. Rodney Edwards, Morristown, N.J.

The reception was given at the Mesker home on Old Jamestown road in Florissant. Among the out-of-town guests were the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Crowell, Duxbury, Mass.; her cousins, Richard Hale, Boston, and Mrs. Stanley Richter and Mrs. Anna McNally, New York, and Dr. Sydney Blandford Jr., Denver.

Guests were received in the living room between towering boxwood trees studded with pink roses. More of the roses were arranged in bouquets throughout the room. A white marquee, with large windows affording a view of the Missouri river, covered the formal garden where tables, centered with hurricane lamps set in clusters of purple violets and lilies of the valley, were arranged. In the dining room the bridal table was adorned with gold-encrusted crystal goblets, heirlooms in the bride's family, holding violets and lilies of the valley and an antique gold-adorned bowl held a centerpiece of the valley lilies.

Mrs. Mesker chose for her daughter's wedding an ice blue brocaded satin sheath gown with which she wore a blue feather hat and a corsage of variegated camellias. The bridegroom's mother was in gray-blue satin. Her hat was in the same shade and her flowers were orchids.

Mr. Maritz and his bride will spend their honeymoon at St. Croix, in the Virgin Islands. They will live temporarily in New York.

At Pompano Beach, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer B. Klein, 96 Heatherbrook lane, Greenbriar Hills, Kirkwood, accompanied by their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Russell P. Sproull, 2029 Modoc Trail, Greenbriar Hills, and the Sproull children, Douglas and Stewart Sproull, departed recently for Pompano Beach, Fla. Mr. Klein already has returned home from the resort, the others will spend about two weeks at a cottage there.

Graf Spee Machinist Runs Michigan Power Plant Diesel

Rudi Mittag Fled Argentine Internment, Married American Girl and Seeks Citizenship.

LOWELL, Mich., Dec. 10 (AP)—It's a long way from the shell-rocked decks of the pocket battleship Graf Spee to chief diesel engineer of the municipal power plant in Lowell, but Rudi Mittag, 36 years old, made it.

In the process, he fled from an Argentine internment camp, dodged snakes in the jungle, met and married an American girl and is about to apply for U. S. citizenship.

So far as he knows, Mittag is the only member of the suicide German warship ever to reach this country.

He was a machinist's mate aboard the fast, heavily-gunned Graf Spee when World War II broke out as it cruised the South Pacific. Its mission was against Allied shipping, but three cruisers of the British Navy—The Ajax, Exeter and New Zealand's Achilles—caught it on Dec. 13, 1939, near the mouth of the river Platte, off Montevideo.

First Big Naval Battle.

The clash was the first great naval battle of the war. The Graf Spee disabled the Exeter, but was so badly damaged it sought safety in Uruguay's neutrality.

International law allowed refuge of only 72 hours. Just before the time was up Hitler's orders came to destroy the ship.

"Most of the crew was transferred to a German merchant marine vessel," says Mittag, "and a skeleton force took our ship about four miles out into the harbor, where explosives destroyed it."

The crew was interned in Argentina. Mittag and 80 others were sent to the little town of Santa Fe, where he found work as a diesel maintenance man on road building projects. In January 1946 the men learned of Germany's partition, and were told they would be returned to Germany.

Mittag's native Saxony still is behind the Iron Curtain. Rather than return to live under Russian control, he and 15 others headed north to settlements 700 miles away, where they had the names of former German nationals.

On Jungle Trail.

"I kept going by working at odd jobs along the way," he recalls, "beating along jungle roads infested with snakes." He finally reached the town of Posadas, and for 18 months lived in obscurity. Then police picked him up and sent him to military prison in Buenos Aires. Expecting to be sent home, they were released instead by government decree in three months.

Back he went to Posadas, to work in diesel maintenance shops for the highway department.

Meanwhile, Virginia Hoover of Byron, Mich., had gone to Buenos Aires as a missionary of the United Lutheran Church. After a year of studying Spanish, she left for Posadas to assist in founding a mission. There she met Mittag, and in 1949 they were married. They planned to stay, and their two daughters, Erika, now 5, and Ruth, 4, were born in Argentina.

"But my parents asked us to come home," says Mrs. Mittag. "We sold our furniture to pay for air passage." Their son, Gerhardt, 3, was born in Michigan.

Mittag's English, still halting but accurate, is the result of brief schooling in Owosso, Mich., and a short stay with his in-laws at nearby Byron.

"This is a very nice country," he says. "I like it and want to stay. I will try to get my citizenship if I can."

His ability as a diesel engineer, his determined quest for more knowledge and his will to work have brought swift promotion. His post as chief diesel engineer at the Lowell municipal power plant was attained in less than six months on the job.

KETC LISTS TALKS ON LABOR MERGER, EDUCATION PARLEY

Programs discussing local and national aspects of the recently concluded AFL-CIO merger and the White House Conference on Education will be presented, each for 30 minutes, on educational television station KETC Tuesday and Thursday evenings, it was announced yesterday.

Participants in the first joint convention of the two labor bodies will explain the merger plans at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday John I. Rollings, president of the Missouri State Federation of Labor, and Delmond Garst, regional director of the CIO, will lead the discussion. At the same hour on Thursday labor and management representatives will discuss local implications of the merger.

The Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S.J., and other delegates to the White House Conference on Education will report its conclusions at 8 p.m. Tuesday. At the same time Thursday delegates will discuss local implications of the report.

Identification for Children.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 10 (AP)—Henceforth, all Belgian children under 12, as well as persons above that age, must carry identity cards to help identification in case of war or major disasters. The cards, bearing the name and address, will be contained in a plastic envelope.

ARTHUR BESTOR TO ADDRESS WASHINGTON U. PROFESSORS

Arthur Bestor, professor of history at the University of Illinois, will speak on the "Fundamentals of Education" at an open meeting of the Washington University chapter of the American Association of University Professors at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Brown Hall on the university campus.

Bestor, an educational critic as well as a historian, is author of the recently published book, "The Restoration of Learning." He was recently elected Harold Vyvan Harmsworth professor of American history at Oxford University for the 1956-57 academic year.

Douglas Urges Full Disclosure Of Union Welfare Fund Income

Senator Whose Committee Has Bared Abuses Says He Will Raise Question of Regulation.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—Senator Paul Douglas (Dem.), Illinois, said today that he favors complete public disclosure of all employe welfare fund income, management and investment.

"Sunlight is a great disinfectant," says Douglas. He is chairman of the Senate Labor subcommittee that is investigating abuses of welfare and pension funds.

Douglas reports he is ready to bring up in Congress the question of regulating all welfare funds. But he said he does not yet know how far his committee will be willing to go.

Insurance interests he thinks, will fight federal controls.

Douglas's investigation into welfare funds made headlines when Angelo Inciso of Chicago told of giving $1000 diamond rings to his union pals and taking luxury trips to gambling resorts.

The Senate subcommittee also heard two other key witnesses:

The United Mine Workers boss, John L. Lewis, demanded the Government jail corrupt "jackals" feeding on union welfare funds. Lewis runs one of the nation's largest funds at extremely low cost.

A United States Steel Corp. spokesman, Enders W. Voorhees, said he doesn't want any public disclosure of how "Big Steel" invests its $728,000,000 welfare and pension funds.

A Major Headache.

The three witnesses illustrate three sides of a major congressional headache.

In less than 10 years collective bargaining has provided 12,000,000 workers with welfare insurance and pension rights they did not have before.

Industry payrolls today pour $130,000,000 a year into health and accident funds.

All of it has come about without effective public supervision, or even much popular attention.

Representative Clare Hoffman (Rep.), Michigan, stumbled into the welfare fund problem when he investigated Detroit and Kansas City brawls of the Teamsters Union in 1953.

Representative Samuel K. McConnell (Rep.), Pennsylvania, explored some union welfare abuses in 1954, and Senator Irving Ives (Rep.), New York, conducted an inquiry that for the first time disclosed the tremendous growth of these funds.

This year Douglas has continued the Ives inquiry.

There will be several bills proposed at the next session of Congress.

Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, already has introduced one calling for full publicity. Representative Ralph Gwinn (Rep.), New York, and Hoffman have introduced regulatory bills in the House.

Taft-Hartley Provision.

The Supreme Court ruled in 1949 that health and accident insurance funds were properly subject to collective bargaining, after the 1947 Taft-Hartley Law had provided a union-management trustee formula for these funds.

There are three kinds of funds today. Most are operated by employers, some are under union-management trustees, and some are run by unions.

Any law written will have to cover all three.

The Taft-Hartley trustee device hasn't worked well in all cases. Management representatives sometimes have not accepted responsibility. Union representatives often have proved inexperienced.

The most spectacular instances of misconduct have been in the union-run funds.

Inciso's scheme was a typical union-run deal. As president of Local 286, AFL United Auto Workers, he persuaded 36 employers to pay the union $5.15 (later $6.15) per worker a month. Some of these employers have been providing their workers with health and accident insurance.

But Inciso got them to turn the money over to him.

At first Inciso insured his 3500 workers with the Continental Assurance Co. of Chicago. Later he had a friend buy control of a similar company and then he moved in as chairman of the board of directors.

Nobody supervised what Inciso was doing. He spent money as he pleased and even lent $40,000, at no interest, to one of the employers he dealt with.

An Astonishing Case.

An even more astonishing case was that of Edward J. Gallagher, president of the AFL Painters, Cleaners and Caulkers Union, Local No. 52, of Chicago.

Gallagher got 130 Chicago employers to contribute 7.5 cents per wage hour to a welfare fund that was entirely under Gallagher's control.

He never accounted for it. The Senate committee reported that $200,000 was spent without explanation.

In checking through the Chicago accounts of the Laundry Workers International Union, the Ives committee concluded that something like $900,000 had been diverted under the schemes of an insurance broker named Louis J. Saperstein and a union leader named Eugene C. James.

In this case the union secretly bought its own insurance company, the California Life, after New York insurance inspectors had objected to the way a new York company, Security Mutual Life, handled the account.

The sudden flood of health and accident business demoralized some insurance groups. The scale of commissions had been based on the cost of obtaining individual or small group policies. Applied to policies covering thousands of union members, the resulting commissions were fantastic.

Kickbacks and Bonuses.

Congressional reports relate a bewildering maze of special payments, kickbacks and bonuses.

The Douglas committee found a plumber, Roy E. Graver, fixing a sink in Newark, N.J., and asked him why an insurance broker, C. J. Simons Co., had paid him $30,800.

Graver said he wasn't sure, but presumed it was because he had once told a broker about a union local that wanted insurance.

A Jersey City municipal justice, Milton Rosenblum, said he thought he was paid $8500 "for good will in the labor field." And so on.

The McConnell committee listed these ways in which it found welfare funds getting into trouble:

Employer lack of interest and avoidance of responsibility.

Union bullying of employers over contributions and trustees over fund management.

Irregular practices by insurance companies, amounting to a tendency to charge whatever the inexperienced buyers would pay.

Irregular practices by brokers to get business, including deals with union officials and with insurance companies.

Trustee conduct amounting to breach of faith.

Squandering of assets by administrators of funds.

Requiring workers to be union members to obtain benefits.

INTERNATIONAL DAY EVENT

An International day open house, sponsored by the College Activities Council of the Red Cross, will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. today in Liggett Hall, on the Washington University campus.

Students from 10 colleges and universities, including the University of Missouri, have been invited. A panel discussion on "Christmas Customs in Other Lands" will be held. "Native land" entertainment will be provided by some of the foreign students studying here.

WOMAN WHO KEEPS IDENTITY SECRET GIVES COLLEGE $500

DOUGLAS, Ga., Dec. 10 (UP)—Cashier Harriel Norris of the Coffee County Bank said a woman wearing a black raincoat with the hood shielding most of her face asked him whether the South Georgia college was located in Douglas.

Informed that it was, she plunked down $500 in cash and told Norris to deposit it to the school's account. She left without identifying herself, he said.

Part of Old Philadelphia Being Restored by U.S., Pennsylvania

2 Parks Will Include Independence Hall and Other Historic Buildings, Seek to Recapture Colonial Flavor.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10 (AP)—A dramatic memorial to American independence is rising amidst the faded elegance of historic Old Philadelphia.

The state of Pennsylvania and the Federal Government are building two parks in the area in which they hope to recapture some of the flavor, as well as the actual scenes, of Old Philadelphia when its cobblestoned streets echoed the sounds of liberty that convulsed colonial America in the struggle for independence.

Behind the project are years in which the historic site deteriorated as Philadelphia spread into the surrounding farmlands. Progress left Old Philadelphia a drab, rundown commercial district, almost forgotten and seldom visited.

Old Philadelphia is an area about one mile square along the Delaware river. It was the original city, the largest in the colonies during the Revolutionary era. As such, and because of its central location in the colonies, it became the gathering point for early America's most eminent statesmen.

Declaration of Independence.

It was here, in Independence Hall on July 4, 1776, that a document written by Thomas Jefferson to express the thinking of these statesmen, called the Declaration of Independence, was adopted.

Eleven years later, with the war won but the Independence frayed, a convention met and drew up the Constitution.

The area played its role as the national capital and financial center of the new nation for a number of years. Then the pageant moved elsewhere.

Through the years there have been a number of attempts to recapture some of those early moments. All were unsuccessful. Then one day in June 1942 representatives of the many historical and patriotic groups in and around Philadelphia met and decided to form a special group, the Independence Hall Association, to work for the preservation of Independence Hall and its environs.

They persuaded Judge Edwin O. Lewis of Philadelphia's common pleas court No. 2, Virginia-born and educated, and president of the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the Revolution, to be their president.

Judge Lewis has put all the considerable energy and experience of his 76 years behind the project.

Planner and Lobbyist.

He has been planner, inspirationist and lobbyist in the years since, a familiar figure in Washington and Harrisburg, pleading with the Congress and the Pennsylvania General Assembly for support and money. He has been amazingly successful. His secret: "I never bullied anybody; I never lost my temper."

Judge Lewis is credited with expanding the original intentions of the association. Under his direction, plans were drawn up calling for the two parks: The Independence Mall, an ornate pattern of walks and gardens, to be built by the state; and the Independence National Historical Park, the Government's project, including Independence Hall and the other historical buildings that still remain. Among them are Carpenter's Hall; the first and second Banks of the United States; the Bishop White house, home of the "father of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States"; Christ (Episcopal) Church; St. Mary's (Roman Catholic) Church; the Philadelphia Exchange, and the Dilworth-Todd-Moylan House, once the home of Dolly Payne Todd, who became one of the most famous of First Ladies when she married President James Madison. All played significant roles—socially, politically, culturally—in the early days of the nation.

Congress has appropriated nearly $8,000,000 just for the purchase of the land for the national park, a three-block square area to the east, or Delaware river side, of Independence Hall, plus isolated plots nearby. About 98 per cent of the land has been bought, with little resistance from the owners.

The state, which has spent about the same for the purchase of the three blocks facing Independence Hall to the north, has completed more than one-third of its project, but has run into constant difficulties with landowners not particularly enamored with the historical significance of the project.

May Take 10 Years More.

Demolition, reconstruction and renovation for the project have been going on since 1949 and may take 10 more years to complete.

Other groups have been active in some of the restoration work. The General Federation of Women's Clubs, for instance, donated $215,000 to restore the first floor of Independence Hall to its revolutionary period decor, a project now under way.

The American Philosophical Society, which has its headquarters on Independence Square, is contributing one of the most peculiar aspects of the project. Workmen are tearing down a latter day landmark, the Drexel building, across Fifth street from Independence Square. In its place, the A.P.S. will rebuild Library Hall, its headquarters that was torn down in the 1890s to make way for the Drexel building.

Odd Accidents of 1955

Think Everything Happens to You?

By Paul Jones
Of the National Safety Council

SO everything happens to you? Maybe you just think it does. For instance:

Have you been shot by your car door? By your dog? By a fish?

Have you swallowed your toothbrush? Has your dog driven your automobile? Ditto your 2-year-old son or daughter?

Have you proudly named your place Dew Drop Inn, only to have it do just that—into the lake?

All these odd little happenings and many others were uncovered by the National Safety Council in its annual roundup of freak accidents. Here's the rundown on the dizzy doings in 1955:

In Milwaukee Animal Trainer Robert Bierwirth had been painstakingly teaching two baby elephants to step safely on and off a small platform 18 inches high. He blithely tried it himself, slipped, fractured his left ankle.

Ordinarily, a hung jury is one that fails to agree. But the jury that hung midway between the first and second floors of the courthouse in Reading, Pa., in a stalled elevator for almost an hour agreed perfectly. It wanted down!

● GENE SCOTT, of Rushville, Nebr., had hoped his hunting trip would turn up something special. It did. He got shot by his car door. Gene was getting out of the car when a gust of wind blew the door shut on his coat pocket. In the pocket was a rifle shell. Bang! You can bet the next hunt will find Gene astride a good old-fashioned doorless horse.

In New Liberty, Ia., 12-year-old David Dahl placed his rifle against a ladder in the barn and started to climb to the loft. His dog Terry jumped on the ladder, struck the rifle trigger with his paw, and shot his ascending master just below the hayloft.

● SOME FISH STORIES are greeted by raised eyebrows. But when Bobby Bright, of Gonzales, Tex., reported that he had been shot by a fish, no one could doubt him. He had the fish, the gun and the wound to prove it. A freshly caught catfish flopped around in the bottom of Bobby's boat, struck the trigger of his rifle and shot him in the arm.

And in Detroit Mrs. Dorothy Gazzeny brushed her teeth so vigorously she swallowed the toothbrush. Fortunately, she had another.

At least two dogs tried their paw at driving an automobile in 1955—a Doberman pinscher in Fort Wayne, Ind., and a boxer in Black River Falls, Wis. Both ended up by crashing into something. They also ended up in the dog house.

Traffic experts say it's safe to go on the green light. Try to tell that to Motorist E. T. Drake, Jr. of Atlanta. As Drake dutifully obeyed an overhead traffic light that flashed him a green go-ahead signal, the light fell on top of his car and sent him to the hospital. Drake saw red.

● THE SIGN over the door of a used car salesroom in Los Angeles said, "We need your car—drive in!" Lewis Jackson Jr. did—with his throttle stuck. The car crashed through a heavy wooden door, sideswiped two glistening cars on the showroom floor, ran head-on into a costly convertible, and bounced the convertible into another car. They took down the sign.

The Dew Drop Inn at Port Huron, Mich., lived up to its name during a wild wind and rain storm, and dropped into Anchor Bay. One brink too many!

Stanton Sapp and his brother Daniel happened to run into each other on the street in their home town, Mount Vernon, O. That would have been perfectly all right, of course, if each of the brothers hadn't been driving a car. Neither was injured in the head-on crash, but it did prove the need for the safety slogan, "Be Your Brother's Keeper—Stop Accidents!"

Four-year-old Walter Adams Jr. was showing his younger brother some of the acrobatic stunts he had seen on TV, when he happened to glance out the window of his fourth-floor apartment in New York City. He noticed that several small girls on the sidewalk 40 feet below were observing his antics. Walter decided to show them something really good. He opened the window, put his hands together like a high diver, and took off. The girls pulled him out of a big snowbank and carried him up, crying, to his mother. Nothing was hurt but his pride.

Walter Bergman of Ashton, Idaho, was aware that his jalopy had served him long and well. But he didn't realize how faithful it was until he parked it in front of the post office and hurried in to get his mail. Somehow the car slipped into gear and followed him in, right through the post office window. Move over, old dog Tray!

● AND OUT IN LOS ANGELES there's a man who just can't stay out of accidents. He's had several traffic escapades that made news for the papers. And this year he fell through the floor of the laboratory where he works and landed nine feet below with a bang that knocked him out. His name? No kidding, folks, it's Safety First!

Still think everything happens to you? Monotonous life you lead, isn't it?

• Social Planning Council and Post-Dispatch Are Co-operating Again in Annual Pre-Christmas Campaign for the Forgotten

By Mary Kimbrough

WILL you add a gift of hope, of health, of happiness, to your shopping list this Christmas?

You will never know the name of the person who receives it, and he will never know yours. It may be a little boy, crippled since birth, huddled quietly in a big armchair watching his playmates run. It may be an aged widow in her bleak, cheerless room. It may be a young mother, deserted by her husband, trying against odds to keep her family together.

This unknown person on your list may be blind, or deaf—or just forgotten.

These are the ones who need your special gift of friendship and concern, a gift that can't be tied with gay wrappings or placed under a Christmas tree, but a precious gift, nevertheless.

It may mean a good meal for a hungry household. It may mean medicine or braces or needed dental work. It may mean a little girl's first doll or a teen-ager's first new suit of his own. It may take a family over the hump and back into self-respect.

Today, the Post-Dispatch begins publishing the stories of 100 of our community's neediest families, taken from the files of the Christmas Bureau, an activity of the Social Planning Council of St. Louis and St. Louis county. Some 190 health and welfare agencies comprise the Council's membership. Each case is listed on the case rolls of one of these agencies.

This is the fifth year that the Post-Dispatch has sponsored this fund, in co-operation with the Christmas Bureau. Last year, generous readers contributed $16,075 so that other fellow human beings might be happy on Christmas morning.

As in the past, donors are asked to make their gifts in the form of cash so that specific needs may be met. Also, it means that families can maintain their self-respect and parents may have the joy of buying little Christmas gifts for their children, shielding them from the hurt of a charity Christmas.

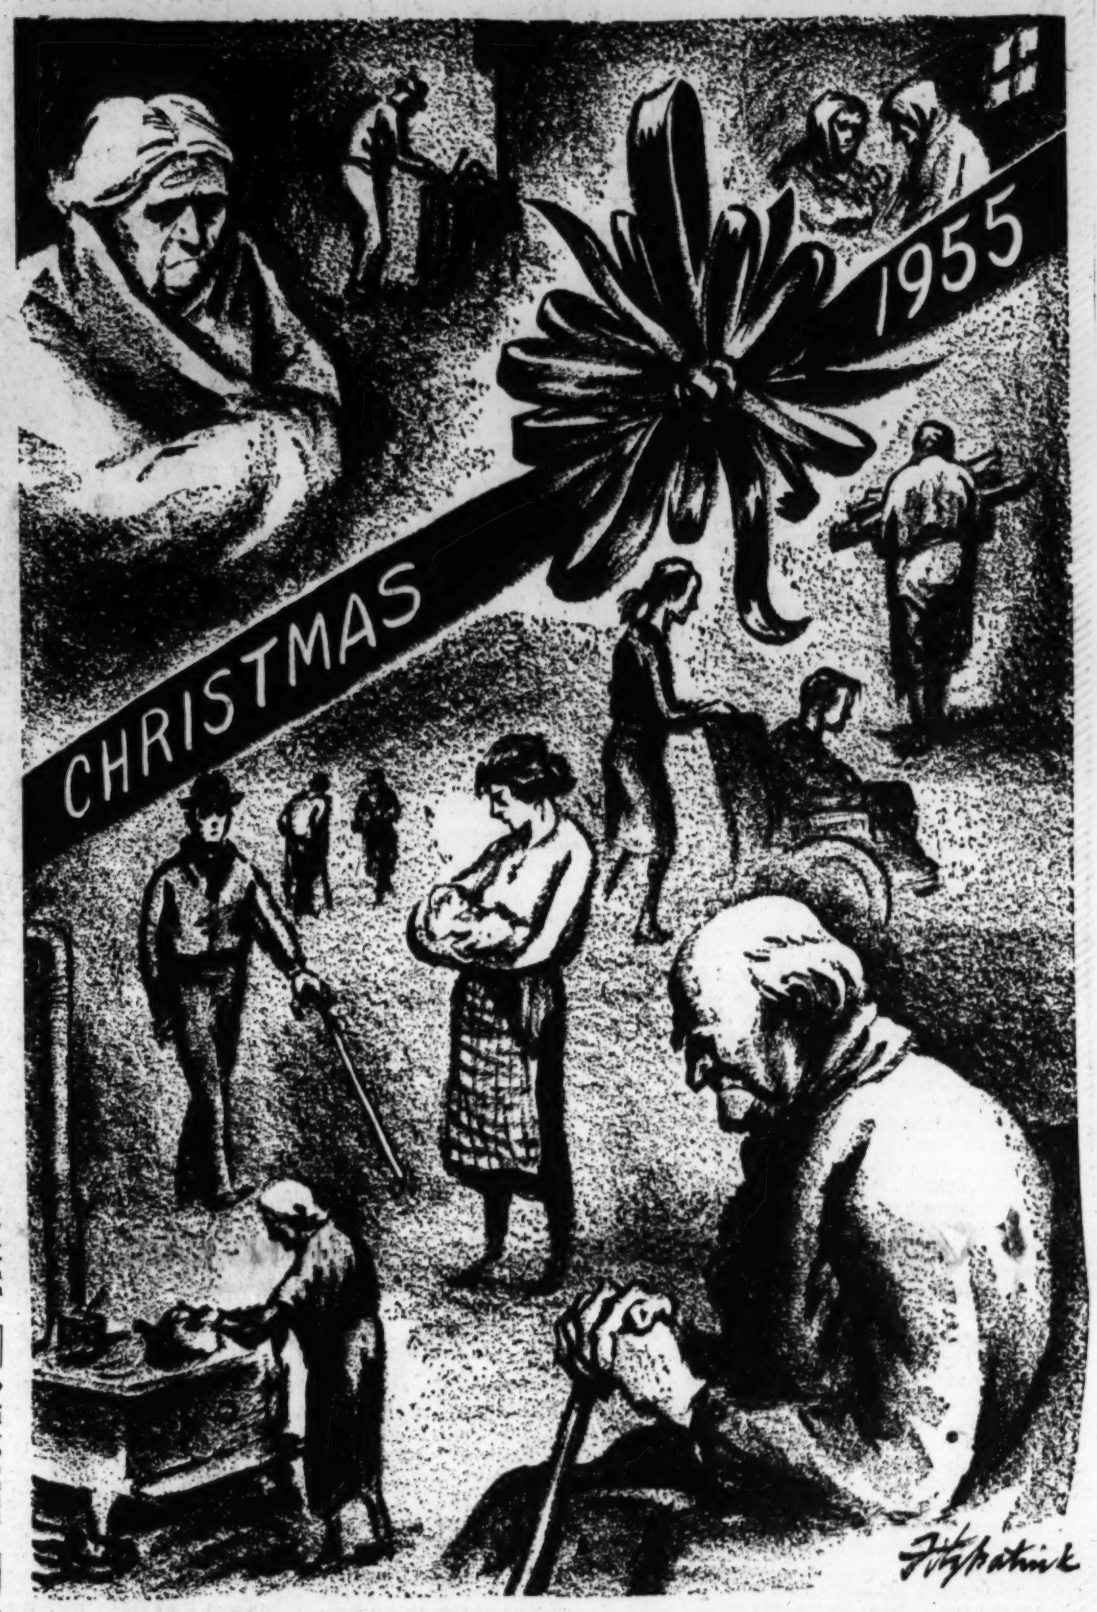

The Christmas Bureau is carrying on a 31-year-old tradition by serving as a clearing house for Christmas giving. Those who organized the Bureau wanted to encourage the remembering of the unfortunate, but they also wanted to make sure that one family was not neglected, while another received a lavish Christmas.

At first, the Bureau's volunteer workers sought fair distribution of Christmas baskets, a familiar part of Christmas giving in the past. But, through the years, the philosophy of giving has changed from the basket taken to a humble doorstep in the "Lady Bountiful" tradition to anonymous cash gifts and the slogan, "Let Mother do the Christmas Shopping."

Where to Send Contributions

CONTRIBUTIONS of money for St. Louis needy families should be mailed to the Christmas Fund Editor, St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The contributions will be made available to agencies of the Social Planning Council of St. Louis and St. Louis county. Agency case workers will distribute the money to underprivileged families before Christmas. Please make checks, no matter what the amount, payable to the Christmas Fund.

For further information, or to discuss contributions other than money, please contact the Christmas Bureau of the Social Planning Council, 505 North Seventh street. Telephone numbers are GArfield 1-2600 and GArfield 1-1618.

"THESE ARE THE ONES WHO NEED YOUR SPECIAL GIFT OF FRIENDSHIP AND CONCERN."

Case 1

TWO AGED SISTERS, Sarah and Martha, live together in the second floor apartment of a drafty house. They have only a hand-fired stove to heat the bleak rooms. Since Sarah is crippled and cannot manage the steep back steps, Martha, painfully thin, must haul the coal up for the small stove. A gift of $100 would enable them to purchase a gas heater which would give them warmth and comfort in the cold months ahead.

Case 2

IT'S PRETTY TOUGH for a 7-year-old boy to get along without his mother, who walked out on him just when he needed her most. But Johnny, now in a foster home, is trying to accept her loss and do the best he can. It will be a drab Christmas for Johnny if no one remembers him and he feels that others, like his mother, just don't care. Johnny's foster mother could buy several thoughtful gifts for a lonely little boy with a gift of $10.

Case 3

MRS. J., 90, widow of a Civil War veteran, lives with her widowed daughter in a converted store building. The daughter, 64, cannot seek employment as she must stay with the mother. They are finding it hard to manage on their public assistance income of $85 a month, and they need $30 at least to purchase fuel and maybe a small remembrance or two at the Christmas season.

Case 4

MR. R. is a young man just recovering from tuberculosis. He has no relatives to help him. Out of the public assistance he receives, he has only $5 left each month after paying room and board. He needs that for medical supplies. A gift of $30 would enable him to buy some clothing which he needs desperately.

Case 5

MISS L. AND MISS R. are two elderly sisters living together in a few small rooms. One is a semi-invalid in desperate need of a wheelchair to enable her to get around the apartment and occasionally out of doors. As it is now, she must sit in a chair throughout the day. She is unable to read because of cataracts and her sister, somewhat feeble, is unable to assist her a great deal. A wheelchair, which could be purchased for $85, would mean much to this lonely woman on Christmas.

Case 6

MRS. M., mother of Sue, who is blind, and another child, manages pretty well on her Aid to Dependent Children allowance. But their home is two poorly furnished rooms. A cash gift to buy shoes, a doll or a wagon for the children would make Christmas a really special day for this family.

Case 7

MR. AND MRS. J. used to own property in St. Louis and in happier days there was no hint that they were destined to depend on others for help. But now they are elderly and ill. In addition to losing their home, they have been forced to cash in their insurance policies. For business reasons, they moved to another state and now that they are back must wait to meet the Missouri residence requirement before they can receive public assistance. Meanwhile, they are hungry. They need warm clothes. They need a friend who will help. A gift of from $50 to $100 would mean much to this deserving couple.

Case 8

THE CASEWORKER who calls on Mr. S. says he is a person you would like on sight. He is dignified and well-groomed, even though his clothing is old. He would like to work, but there are so few jobs for the elderly. He has found part-time work but there is nothing to meet the accumulated back bills or to buy new needed clothing. In his new job he meets the public and must make a good appearance. A gift of $25 would do much to keep up his pride and self-respect as a working man.

Case 9

MRS. L. and her mother have lived together since the death of Mr. L. The mother is thin and pale. She is semi-paralyzed and cannot walk. A gift of $50 would provide a wheelchair so the daughter could take the elderly woman out occasionally and let her have fresh air and sunshine.

Case 10

BILLY AND ROGER are 2 and 3 years old, respectively. Their father has deserted their mother. She can't take care of them as she must work. So they are temporarily in a foster home. Their mother loves them and wants them back with her as soon as possible. Meanwhile, they need some warm clothing and maybe a toy or two, for a little boy can't understand why Santa Claus would visit others and miss him on Christmas Eve. A gift of $20 would let the mother make Christmas seem real to her two sons.

Case 11

FOR MANY YEARS Mrs. F., a widow, earned her living by laundry and day work. Now her hands and arms are crippled and she can no longer support herself. She cannot go to church unless friends take her, because she has a heart condition. But she loves her church and the hymns and sermons she can hear over the radio on Sunday morning. A gift of $30 would buy a small radio so that she could have this joy.

Case 12

SALLY IS 9. Her sister, Jean, is 7. Neither has ever owned a new dress of her own. Always hand-me-downs, provided by relatives since their mother must struggle to make ends meet for the little family. She has been ill and now can work only a little. It would be a bright Christmas morning for two little girls if they could have new school dresses so that they could hold up their heads among their classmates. A gift of $15 would make this possible.

Case 13

CHRISTMAS will be bleak indeed for the S. family unless someone can help. Deserted before the birth of her last child, Mrs. S. struggles to feed and clothe her five children. The father had bought a small, delapidated house, but since his desertion, the mother must make the payments. He sends a small amount of money to support the children, but too little to help much. Clothing and shoes for the entire family are badly needed. A gift of $100 would make Christmas a truly happy day for them.

Case 14

MRS. C. and her married daughter share an apartment with Mrs. C.'s three other children and the daughter's two children. One of the little boys is blind. Mrs. C. supplements her Aid to Dependent Children allotment with day work, despite poor health, in order to send the little boy to a nursery school where he will receive the care and training he needs in his lonely world of darkness. They have only a small kitchen table, and the mother would appreciate most a low table and chairs for the small children. A gift of $10 would purchase this.

Case 15

MR. AND MRS. E. used to work a small farm in the Ozarks. His health began to fail, so he brought his wife and daughter to the city and took a light job. He couldn't hold that long and his wife obtained work as a cleaning woman. Their home was drab and cheerless and the daughter, hoping to find escape, married hastily. Her husband deserted her after the birth of their third child, so her little family moved in with her parents. Then the children's mother ran away, leaving the grandparents to care for the youngsters. Mr. E. is suffering from an incurable illness. His wife, old and weary, is still working, trying to keep the little home together. But the children, in need of clothing, shoes, and a toy or two, will have no Christmas unless an anonymous friend comes to their aid. A gift of $50 would bring cheer to this unhappy household.

Case 16

MR. AND MRS. K. and their 10-year-old son, James, are receiving public assistance. Mr. K. was a skilled worker and provided well for his family until an illness almost 10 years ago incapacitated him and made him completely dependent on others. His wife must lift him from the bed into a wheelchair. Despite her heavy duties at home, she finds it necessary to work in the evening to supplement the public assistance. If several gifts of cash could be combined to purchase a special patient lift, costing $200, which would relieve the physical strain of caring for Mr. K. and permit him to leave his home and attend the clinic, it would mean a happier future for his family. Through proper treatment, he may regain sufficient use of his legs and arms to permit him to learn a new vocation.

Case 17

BETTY JEAN is a 9-year-old rheumatic fever patient. She has lived with her grandmother since her father's death and her mother's desertion. The grandmother tries to do what she can for Betty Jean, but it's hard for both of them. A gift of $35 would provide some warm clothing for those long trips to and from the clinic for medical care.

Case 18

MRS. F. is a young mother with two small children to support. She has been in poor health for some time and is unable to work at a strenuous job or for long hours. Because of her irregular employment, the two youngsters are badly in need of clothes. Unless someone will help, there is no prospect of any Christmas in this drab little household. A gift of $45 would mean much.

Case 19

PAULA AND MARCIA are not twins but everyone thinks they are because 4-year-old Paula is almost as tall as 5-year-old Marcia and they do look alike. Their mother deserted them when they were both babies. While their father is trying to re-establish a home, so that the little girls and their four sisters and brothers can be together, Paula and Marcia are in a children's home. The father has been ill and there is no money for clothing or toys. They have dreamed of baby dolls and toy dishes, and they need warm sweaters and shoes. A gift of $20 would make this possible for two lonely little girls.

Case 20

MRS. W. and her five children were deserted by her husband and now are attempting to eke out an existence with funds from public assistance. Last Christmas the children had no tree or toys. The family is desperately in need of help, and a gift of $50 would buy coal to keep the children warm, and a second-hand bed so that two of the children will no longer have to sleep on pads on the floor. It also would help buy token gifts for children to whom Christmas has meant so little.

BEHIND THAT WINDOW: A FAMILY IN NEED?

TUESDAY: More case histories of needy families, taken from the files of the Christmas Bureau.

Special Quality to Hills of the Ozarks

By Leonard Hall

DECEMBER brings a special quality to the timbered Ozark hills which is to our liking. Some mornings are clear and frosty and still, so that the whole countryside is etched in sharp relief. Fields stretch away gray and brown and beyond them the silhouettes of Buford and Round Hill, Belleview Mountain and the ranges to westward rise in dark masses. Against these the cedars stand in black clumps and only the scattering pines and an occasional patch of wheat show bright green. At this season with the foliage gone, the granite ribs of the land are laid bare, so that one gets the feel of its great age. In summer the green mantle of the forest softens the outlines of the landscape. In winter we are conscious of the countless centuries of erosion that have carved our ancient hills, leaching away the layers of limestone and sandstone which once overlaid the parent rock.

There are other mornings when a wind comes out of the south so wet you can feel it on your face; when low scudding clouds race across the valley and obscure the crests of the ridges. And still other days when, at sunrise, the timber atop the mountains is covered with a heavy coating of white frost, though there is none on the lowlands. Altogether it is a good time of year and only during times of cold rain or when an icy wind comes roaring down out of the northwest do we think with some longing of spring which is months away. On such days the cattle keep to the cedar thickets, heads down and faces to the wind. In this they are unlike the horses which drift along with their hindquarters to the gale. When we come in from feeding on these windy days there are icicles on our noses and ice on our cheeks from eyes that water steadily, for we've ridden the tractor across the fields for an hour.

Nowhere is the year's ending more clearly marked than in the trees. And few things in nature are more marvelous than the action of the cambium, that microscopically thin layer of living cells between wood and bark which completely envelopes the trunk and every limb and branch without a single break. During the growing season, the cambium cells carry the fluids which hold in solution the nourishment for the tree; this being necessary because the inner core of the trunk is inert and nongrowing. When autumn comes, the cambium cells divide lengthwise, rearranging themselves with the new "daughter" cells outside the old cells. These latter now harden into a denser fiber to make the ring which marks the annual growth, while the new cells remain alive and ready to resume their food-carrying function when spring comes again.

● TREES MAKE THEIR GROWTH in spring and summer and I recall August Bielmann at the Arboretum showing us how all the members of one species start out on pretty much the same date and end their growth for the year at the same time, remaining dormant throughout the winter season. This is in contrast to many other plants. Our grasses, especially fescue and blue grass, make some winter growth. Barley, rye and wheat continue to grow throughout winter, stooling out from the first pair or frail shoots. Many biennials such as the mullein form a new rosette of leaves close to the ground which remains green all winter long. The trees and shrubs, although actual growth may be confined to spring and summer, are hard at work during this period making ready for the year ahead, forming the cells that will make next season's twigs, leaves and flowers.

All these materials which will constitute next year's growth have been completely formed in miniature by the time autumn arrives. Tightly creased and folded and packed into tough, waterproof coverings, they will remain throughout cold weather in a state of suspended animation. These make up the winter buds which we see on trees and shrubs—or at least can see if we look sharply enough. Thus on the black haw in our yard the buds of the white flower clusters which will open next May are plainly visible, as are the button-like flower buds at the tips of dogwood branches. Also to be seen are other buds; those at the ends of branches containing next year's flower or twig—and others just above each leaf scar which contain the new leaf in miniature.

● AN INTERESTING PASTIME when walking through the winter woods is to identify the deciduous trees, now that the leaves have fallen. First there are broad characteristics, like the "witches brooms" in the hackberry or great patches of snow-white bark and hanging seed balls of the sycamore. Many smaller trees and shrubs such as flowering dogwood, wahoo, possum haw or deciduous holly, black haw and buckthorn may be identified by their fruits or the conspicuous buds of next year. White oak is distinguished by its light gray bark and great arching branches, scarlet oak by the heavy growth of green lichens on the trunk. Burr oak grows a thick, sturdy trunk and heavy branches and generally has a goodly crop of mossy cupped acorns which cannot be mistaken for any other. Sour gum sends its trunk straight upward with many small branches which grow out horizontally or with a slight droop.

There's a remarkable amount of color in the winter woods for the walker with an observant eye. Early in the season there are fruits of many species; brilliant red of dogwood, bittersweet, wahoo and possum haw, frosty blue of cedar berries, bright orange of wild rose hips, purplish red of coralberry and deep blue-black of buckthorn and black haw. Winter buds of the willow and red maple; twigs of young cottonwood and rough-leaved dogwood; the changing tones of the oaks to which the leaves still cling. All these are things which add to the interest and beauty of our Ozark winter.

Petite Star From Paris

By Edward A. Harris

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

Leslie Caron, Daughter of Topeka-Born Dancer Mother and French Father, Has Gained Film Prominence at Tender Age Of 23 — Outstanding Ballet Performer

SEVENTH OF A SERIES

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10.

ONCE upon a time there was a skinny little French girl with eyes as big as blue lollipops who dreamed a Cinderalla-dream of becoming a great ballet dancer. Her name was Leslie Caron.

She was anemic at times and wore glasses and had braces on her teeth. But she was also a tomboy at heart and played games in the Paris streets as strenuously as any of the boys, including her brother Aimery, whom she adored and followed around like a spindling puppy.

Perhaps Leslie sometimes wished she were a boy, like Aimery. She didn't like girls. She wore her dark brown hair in a boyish haircut, and the tomboy activities gradually made her healthier and gave her body strength and suppleness. Most of the time she lived with her parents in the Caron apartment on middle-class Avenue Marceau, but four months each year she stayed in a big house near the Spanish border with her paternal grandparents, Marcel and Andree Caron.

It was here, near San Jean de Luz in France, that Leslie began doing acrobatics on the beach playground. It was here too, at the age of four, that she showed her first interest in ballet when she insisted on being dressed as a ballet dancer for a dress party. She became so expert at arcobatics that she won a raft of prizes as the best amateur acrobat in the whole San Jean de Luz area.

This especially pleased Leslie's mother, Margaret Petit Caron, a Topeka-born dancer who had given up her career to settle down in Paris with her husband, Claude Caron, a French pharmacist-chemist. If Leslie sometimes wanted to be like Aimery, she wanted much more to be a dancer like her mother.

SHE was only 10 when her mother enrolled her in the National Conservatory in Paris, where she studied ballet with Olga Preobrojenska, formerly of the Imperial Russian ballet. But her professional bow was made as an actress, rather than a ballet dancer. She was hired, at the age of 14, for a part in "Lord Fauntleroy," at the Paris Champs-Elysees Theater, appearing for one year on Thursday and Sunday afternoons.

"In France, children have no school those afternoons," she explained on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, between shooting scenes for a new film, "Gaby." As she answered questions she sat erect and rather stiffly at first in a corner of her small dressing room, unsmiling and wary. She wore a nightgown and pink robe from the scene she was doing that afternoon with John Kerr (who scored a hit on the stage in "Tea and Sympathy"), and her hair was a curly hennaed red. She wore no makeup and no jewelry—in real life she also never wears jewelry.

She seemed even smaller than her five-feet-three, but her appearance was striking — the big luminous ink-blue eyes, the full, pouting lips, the mobile elf-like face that became beautiful when she smiled or broke into laughter, as she eventually did during the course of the interview.

As she talked in French-accented English, she became convinced finally that the writer had no wish to pry into her short-lived marriage to George Hormel III and she became more relaxed. A suppressed warmth edged to the surface, her inherent shyness partially dissipated, and she became more buoyant in speaking of her childhood and her career, a career that has made her famous as a ballet dancer and as the star of such big film hits as "An American in Paris," "Lili," "The Glass Slipper" and "Daddy Long Legs." It is also a career that has brought her moderate wealth, at the relatively tender age of 23.

If there is any word that accurately describes Leslie Caron, it is petite. And the French name, Petit, has threaded her destiny, beginning with her mother, born Margaret Petit. It was Roland Petit, looking in 1949 for dancers for his newly-produced "Les Ballets de Champs-Elysees", who saw Leslie practicing ballet at the National Conservatory. This was just a year after Leslie's twice-a-week stint in the boy-girl role.

PETIT signed her for his company. She was 15 at the time. She made her professional ballet debut as a girl clown in a production called "Thirteen Dances." Until then she had kept up her formal studies at the Convent of the Assumption in Paris, but now she turned all of her attention to her career. Delighted with her initial work, Petit next cast her as the Sphinx in Christian Berard's ballet, "Le Rencontre."

Her appearance in this ballet electrified Paris. Overnight she became the youngest dancing star in all France and the toast of Paris. The production employed a shock technique, as a climax, in which Leslie, the Sphinx, becomes so furious and frustrated when her riddles all are answered correctly by Oedipus that she stumbles headlong from a high trapeze, falling to within a few inches of the floor and swing-hanging by one foot for five minutes. It shook up Leslie and made her dizzy, but it also made her famous.

Among those in the audience impressed by Leslie's first performance as the Sphinx was Gene Kelly, the dancing film star. He went backstage to meet her, but Leslie, hearing that he was on the way, shyly slipped out before he got there. But the next year Kelly was back in Paris preparing for the picture, "An American in Paris." He still had vividly in mind the childlike but forceful ballerina, and this time met Leslie and talked her into a screen test.

The test was rushed to Hollywood by Kelly, and M-G-M promptly cast her in the picture. The film won six Academy Awards, including awards for technical excellence, and Leslie, signed to a long-term contract, went on to enchant audiences in "Lili" and subsequent films.

But Hollywood did not make her forget her old friends, nor her love of the stage. Before going to Hollywood she had been excited and thrilled by a ballet tour of Europe and Asia, highlighted by command performances before the King of Egypt and the Queens of England and Greece. After several successful films she made a new tour with Roland Petit's troupe.

Nor could she resist when the French director, Jean Renoir, son of the great painter Auguste Renoir, wrote a play, "Orvet," especially for her. "You alone can play it," the director wrote her.

LESLIE went to Paris and did the play, which tells the story of a wild nymph-like creature of the woods which is tamed, temporarily, by the love of a sophisticated writer. The play was something less than a hit, but Leslie wasn't discouraged. She still cherishes the stage, and one great ambition is to play Joan of Arc on Broadway.

Leslie's consuming passion used to be the ballet, the dance. Now she will tell you that her great desire, career-wise, is to be a great actress, to play serious, dramatic roles. This change in goals perhaps reflect her change also from a child to a woman of versatile talents; in any case, she fears being "typed" as a waif-like pixie. She is enormously alive; she is extraordinarily nimble-minded; she is sensitive and flexible in her talents, and she doesn't want to be fenced in.

An when Leslie wants something, she usually gets it. She's a hard, conscientious worker, giving up much of her time to rehearsals. She's quick to learn her lines, and is never upset when the dialogue is changed a few moments before the cameras start turning.

She likes the music of Bach, Wagner, Stravinsky and Gershwin, but is not too classical-minded to overlook jazz and bebop. Her brother Aimery taught her to jitterbug, and she has a surprisingly robust taste for noisy parlor games such as charades, and for American slang.

One reason she would like to do Broadway plays is to "get contact again with reality," as she put it. "I think it takes some courae to go back to the stage after being in Hollywood," she said. "For one thing, there's a prejudice against Hollywood actors and actresses. Another thing, you are before a live audience."

BUT she prefers a live audience, even though there can be no "retakes" if a line is flubbed. Motion picture acting is much harder, she believes. "In the movies," she explained, "sometimes you must do the same scene over 20 or 30 times, and yet in each scene you must keep the same spontaneity and freshness."

She made clear, however, that she doesn't dislike the film capital. For one thing her brother is here, attending college, and recently she was visited by her parents, who now reside in the Virgin Islands.

But eventually, she intends to make New York and Paris her twin homes, commuting to Hollywood only for actual picture-making.

She likes America, but is overwhelmed by its massive productiveness, which at once frightens and impresses her. Suburban communities which spring up overnight, row on row of identical houses, sometimes make her long for her native land with its century-old stone houses and their traditions of deep family roots.

What she sees here often makes her feel insecure—makes her miss the security, for example, she felt when she worked with the peasants on her grandparents' farm near the French-Italian border, cultivating and watering the jasmine plants, which were grown for perfume.

To recapture this feeling, she likes to do farm work on vacations. With her fingers in the soil, the good earth smells as fragrant as the jasmine to her, and there is peace of mind. But there also is always Hollywood beckoning—and a career that has given the screen one of its most talented, fascinating and complex personalities.

NEXT WEEK—Dana Wynter.

LESLIE CARON . . . TALKED INTO A SCREEN TEST BY DANCER GENE KELLY.

To Daughters

How to Handle Fathers

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

SOME fathers take a less tolerant and, unfortunately, less intelligent view of the rights and needs of their growing daughters than do mothers. This is shown clearly by numerous studies and is reflected in my correspondence. My mail is filled with complaints from young girls against their fathers' restrictions against dating and their daughters' relationship with boys generally.

Here's one, for example, from two young women of 16 years who remind me, "You stated that the normal girl starts dating between the ages of 13 and 15. But what if your parents won't let you date? It isn't so much our mothers as our fathers, who think we will become pick-ups or tramps if we ever go out!"

Similarly Annette reports that "The other night my father caught me (16) and my boy friend (18) kissing goodnight. We have been going steady for three years and plan our future lives together. The next day I got a terrific lecture. Is there anything wrong about kissing goodnight?"

MRS. H., IN TURN, writes that "My husband won't let our 17-year-old daughter even talk to a boy. This causes terrible friction at home."

Fathers doubtless think they understand their own sex—and don't trust it. But all the girls mentioned above are old enough legally to marry. Can we figure out any policy that would be fair to both sides? I think these procedures might help many girls:

Let your father meet your friends. Tell him who their fathers are.

Behave yourself. Of course it's all right for Annette to kiss her boy goodnight at the door. But if she prolonged that goodnight kiss into a 20-minute clinch in the automobile, it would not be all right.

Talk over your plans with your parents. They have a right (and really, a legal obligation) to know where you are going and what you are doing.

Get them to read some of the good books and inexpensive pamphlets written for the parents of teenagers. Write me (with stamped, self-addressed envelope) for my reading list on adolescence. The library can do the rest. If your fathers know how other parents look at these matters, and how they manage them, they will feel more secure.

Answers to Questions.

Q. When a 17-year-old boy comes home and tells you he wants to go steady, what should be your answer?

A. Answer OK, provided he has gone around with others and dated a number of girls for several years past.

Q. I want to be a pal with my daughters, but find it hard to get down to their level . . .

A. I should hope so! Try to bring them up a little nearer to your own level, instead. It is a great mistake for parents to attempt to descend to their children, both because it makes parents themselves too childish and because it helps to prevent the children from growing up.

Q. Young man wants me to become engaged to him but says he is not ready to marry—is vague about this. Is he a good risk?

A. In principle I'd say No. Sometimes a man merely wants to tie a girl down, deprive her of freedom, and enjoy his own possessiveness. Unless there are exceptional circumstances, any girl should refuse to tie herself down by an engagement until she can make fairly definite plans to turn it into a marriage.

Q. IS IT TRUE that the first year is the hardest in marriage?

A. Yes, and more divorces occur in that year than in any other one. Get good premarital instruction before you say, "I do."

Q. Must a mother never say anything while a father is correcting a child?

A. Exactly. She can talk things over with him afterward.

Q. Isn't it a good idea occasionally to give children tasks that are beyond their ability?

A. No.—it may produce feelings of frustration and build up chronic fear of failure, therefore willingness to try. Push them close to the limit—but not beyond.

Secrets of Charm

Exercise for School Girls

FOR girls who have taken their place in school in a more advanced class, this may be the season when more grown-up clothes are in order.

The first thing you think of is the party dress you've always dreamed of. Now that you're old enough to wear it, how will you look in it? How about collarbones that show too much, or shoulder blades that stick out as sharply as wings?

A little fattening up in general provides smoother contours. You may be helped by the booklet, "Your Beauty Diet." Yes, it includes eating to gain weight as well as to lose it. (The booklet is yours for 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to Secrets of Charm, in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch).

The exercise specialists also prescribe routines for tackling collarbone and shoulder blade problems, and here they are:

Collarbones. 1. Stand on tiptoe, facing a wall. Place both palms on the wall at shoulder level with the fingers pointing toward each other. In slow motion, let the body fall forward. When you're as close to the wall as you can fall, push yourself back to starting position. Be sure to keep your back straight all the time. 2. Sit with your arms raised straight overhead. Curl your fingers under as if you were grasping a rod. With maximum tension, pull the imaginary rod downward to your chest.

Shoulder blades. 1. Sit on a stool or bench with your hips pushed against a wall. Place your arms against the wall with the elbows close to your waist and your hands opposite your shoulders. Without losing touch with the wall, slowly slide your arms upward as far as you can, then return to starting position. 2. Rotate your shoulders in lazy circles.

Perform each of these exercises 20 times.

Practical New Furniture

By Elizabeth Hillyer

IT'S hardly ever necessary any more — to choose between something you like which isn't practical—and something you don't, which is. The most practical of furniture catches the fashion-conscious eye.

Tables and chairs which must stand the hardest use, and wipe clean with a damp cloth, for example. It's particularly notable now how rapidly this kind of furniture strides along in style.

WHERE DOES dinette set styling leave off and dining room furniture styling begin? Here are two examples among many of the new furniture styles which keep all the practical points of the dinette type while it takes new shape.

The hardy metal is black with brass tips on the legs, brass edging on the tables. Damage and heat-resistant tabletops show fashionable wood grain. Chairs are larger for more comfort. One design takes deep foam rubber on wide backrests as well as seats, and plastic covers in geometric patterning. The other floats trim seats in graceful outline framing and fills in a wide backrest in textured plain color.

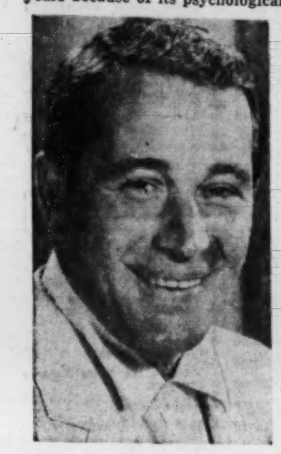

MRS. A. L.: "I'd like to paper my living-room walls with a new plain wallpaper, and have thought of using a dark shade on the wall behind the sofa and a lighter shade of the same color on the rest of the walls. The sofa and one chair and the rug are maroon, and I use maroon draperies in the winter which have a beige flowery design. The other chairs are gray."

If you were to use a dark color, the wall behind the sofa is not the best place for it since its use there would concentrate too much dark color on one wall. A better idea is to paper all the walls in a light color, gray or a soft shade of rose or pink with beige tones.

Telegram from Liberace: "Dear Mr. Winchell: I want to tell you why I made the picture 'Sincerely Yours.' It was my hope that I would bring about a closer realization of my lifelong ambition to make this world a little happier and better through my humble though sincere efforts. This is the philosophy that rules my life and its underlined principles is the very theme which I brought to the attention of Warner Brothers and around which the screen play was written in conjunction with excerpts of a former script ('The Man Who Played God') which George Arliss did several years before. I still have every confidence that eventually the world will accept this type of movie story which brings about a closer relationship between an individual and his fellowmen and their combined faith in God. If 'Sincerely Yours' can help achieve this in real life my prayers for the success of this new venture in my career shall be answered."

Present for Boss?

By Emily Post

DEAR MRS. POST: I work in an office with three other girls. One of them has suggested that we each contribute a certain amount of money and buy our boss a Christmas present. I think in addition to being out of order, it would embarrass him to receive a present from us. What is your opinion?

Answer: I can't answer definitely since I do not know the personality of your boss, but my inclination is to agree with you.

Dear MRS. POST: Is it improper for the bride and groom to kiss at the altar as soon as they have been pronounced Mr. and Mrs.? Someone told me it was and I can't see what the objection is. I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter.

Answer: Of course it is not improper, but neither is it usual at a fashionable wedding for the groom to kiss the bride in church.

DEAR MRS. POST: Would it be proper to have my brother-in-law walk up the aisle with me at my wedding in view of the fact that my father refuses to do this, or would it be better under the circumstance, if I walked up the aisle alone?

Answer: If your father is very old or otherwise feeble it would be quite all right to walk with your brother-in-law. But if your father is young and able-bodied, your walking up the aisle with your brother-in-law would proclaim your father's disapproval.

DEAR MRS. POST: I have been invited to dinner at my boy friend's house this coming week. This will be my first visit there. I would like to know if you think I should bring a box of candy to his mother and also whether I should help with the dishes afterward. I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter.

Answer: Do not take any gift. It would be thoughtful of you to offer to help with the dishes but if she says "no thank you" do nothing further.

Story of 'Jesus and His Times'

'He Shall Be Great . . . Called Son of the Highest . . . Shall Reign Forever'

(Editor's Note: Under the name of Daniel-Rops this author has become one of the leading writers of France. He received his schooling at the Universities of Grenoble and Lyon, becoming a Fellow in History. An earlier book received high distinction from the French Academy, but he has had his greatest success with "Jesus and His Times." Already in its 400th edition in France, its appearance in English marks the fifteenth language into which it has been translated).

By Daniel-Rops

CHAPTER 1

IT had happened the previous year in the village of Nazareth, hidden among the hills of far-off Galilee, from which the travelers had set out.

At the time Mary was only betrothed to Joseph. An angel had appeared to her and had said, "Hail, thou that are highly favored, the Lord is with thee. Blessed are thou among women."

When she saw him she had been troubled; what could such a salutation mean?

"Fear not, Mary," said the angel, "for thou hast found grace with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever."

"How shall this be," asked Mary, "seeing I know not a man?"

The angel replied, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

This famous scene has inspired so much great art that whoever seeks to visualize it is at the mercy of the thousands of pictures which rise up before the eye of the mind.

It may be that beautiful Florentine garden where the angel kneels between the ordered cypresses and the bright flowers, a lily in his hands, or one of those interiors of homely simplicity but substantial comfort which the Rhenish masters drew, with the angel in a beautiful crimson mantle and the Virgin in a bright blue Sunday gown. The painters have embroidered the scene of their fancy.

But archaeology indicates nothing so sumptuous. The houses of Nazareth of that day would be hovels not too far removed from cave-dweller style—one room divided into two, half for the family and half for the cattle, or else the little wattle and daub huts, low and square, straggling among the olive trees, such as one can see today anywhere in the Galilean country.

The Church of the Annunciation, which is modern but is believed to occupy the site of the church which St. Marcarius erected at the order of Constantine, includes a tiny crypt beneath its high altar; tradition has it that this is the chamber where the Archangel Gabriel appeared to Mary, and an Apocryphal account of the Nativity adds that she was spinning wool for the use of the Temple.

ALTHOUGH the mystery announced by the angel was of the supernatural order, upon the very humble human plane it was going to raise a problem.

Mary was affianced to Joseph and that was sufficient to establish a contract between them which our own betrothal custom does not approach.

Among us, according to both canon and civil law, only the ceremony of marriage is absolute and binding; a broken engagement is not considered damaging unless the circumstances are scandalous.

But among the Jews a betrothal was almost as irrevocable as marriage and conferred most of the privileges of marriage. For the period of a year, in the case of a virgin, or a month, in the case of a widow, the fiancee was placed under the jurisdiction of her betrothed husband.

It follows that fidelity was a strict obligation during their prenuptial period, unfaithfulness was equivalent to adultery and if denounced by the betrothed husband, it carried for the woman the penalty laid down by Deutronomy (xxii, 23); death.

When Mary had conceived "before they came together," Joseph, her husband, being a just man and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily.

"But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost."

Just as Mary accepted the words of the angel, Joseph accepted the revelation of the dream. They reverted at once to the supernatural world of the Old Testament in which contact with the divine power was common and its revelations came naturally to men who were humble and obedient.

At the entrance of the town of Bethlehem, there was, for the reception of visitors, a large building in which St. Luke has called an inn.

Perhaps it was that same "kahn of Canaan" which the Gileadite, the son of a friend of David, had built for his flocks some 10 centuries before. This type of caravanseral, which is still to be found in Oriental countries, is very far from comfortable; there is a square enclosure, open to the sky, for the cattle, and a wooden porch which offers indifferent shelter for human beings, together with a very few rooms to rent, extremely small and excessively dear for their quality.

Even this "hotel," most of it exposed to the four winds of heaven, would have been welcome to Mary and Joseph, that weary pair of travelers, if there had been room among the crowd for them.

BUT it was packed full of those nomads who came regularly to Bethlehem to buy their grain and to sell their woven cloth and their cheeses, as they still do today, and there would be, in addition, all those who had come to Bethlehem for the census.

It is easy to visualize the picturesque confusion, wagons piled up, the noisy and smelly crowd of tethered camels straining at each other, braying donkeys, women disputing possession of a corner sheltered from the drafts.

Over all this varied assemblage would float that enveloping smell of hot grease which, from Greece to Egypt and from Algiers to Tehran, is invariably exhaled by an Oriental crowd. We can well understand that Joseph sought to take Mary away from all this.

There was very little time, for "the days were accomplished that she should be delivered." The most ancient tradition says that Joseph installed his wife in a cave such as was used, and still is used, to shelter sheep and cattle. The hills around Bethlehem are full of them.

One short verse in the Gospel of St. Luke (ii, 7) tells us all that we know definitely about this stupendous, yet simple event.

"And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manager because there was no room for them in the inn."

The manger must have been like one of those which can still be seen today; hollows scooped out of the earth to hold the grain for the cattle. That complete humility which was to be the mark of Him who was meek and humble of heart is already manifest from the beginning.

IT could not be said that the Church of the Nativity today has retained that touching simplicity so characteristic of the Gospel scene. It is approached as if it were a fortress. A gigantic encircling wall is breached by a massive tower, pierced only by loopholes and by a low entrance door. A narthex containing some fine mosaics admits to the basilica, one of those fourth or fifth century Byzantine buildings which convey such a powerful impression of majesty.

There are five aisles, the piers of red marble with white capitals. This magnificent edifice, which covers the spot where the divine mercy was made manifest, is the battleground of warring sects. It was even, in 1873, the scene of a physical assault by the supporters of the Orthodox Church on the Catholics.

The deep subterranean crypt below the church is long and narrow but it does not in the least resemble one's conception of a manger; it does not communicate with the exterior and can be reached only by a steep stairway. The alcove which is designated as the creche is studded with gold and precious stones; it is lined with rare marbles, jasper and porphyry, and lit by the radiance of half a hundred lamps.

"It was not among gold and silver that Our Savior came into the world," said the harsh old hermit St. Jerome, who lived in a cell near by.

In the middle of a slab of porphyry a brilliant vermilion star purports to mark the exact spot where Jesus was born.

The event which took place in the poor grotto was not destined to remain private. Near by were some shepherds spending the night in the fields with their sheep, possibly some of the village herdsmen who, having driven their flocks into the caves, were taking turns to see that they came to no harm from wild beasts or robbers. This routine of watching the flocks by night is still followed in Palestine, the cries of the watchers piercing the darkness and the silence, sometimes alternating with the thin melody of a flute. Or perhaps they were genuine nomads who never call in their sheep but restrain them at night by attaching a foot to the long heavy tail characteristic of the Levantine breed.

"And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, 'Fear not! for, behold, I bring you tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord . . .'

"And so . . . the shepherds said one to another, 'Let us now go even into Bethlehem and see this thing which has come to pass' . . . and the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God."

And so, to the humble guardians of the flocks, Heaven revealed what the world as yet did not know, the coming of Him who was to be called the Good Shepherd.

NAZARETH has always been depicted as a little green and white town, cut into the sides of the snow-crowned heights which seal the plain of Esdraelon on the north. Now, it is a town of some three or four thousand inhabitants distinguishable from other such towns only by the multiplicity of churches, convents and belfries.

It is surrounded by a graceful circlet of hills, sprinkled with primitive farm buildings of wattle and daub, the dark columns of the cypress standing out among the vineyards, the olive groves and the grain fields. The gardens are fragrant with lilies and verbena and the bougainvillea trails its cope of episcopal purple over the white walls. This is the setting in which we can visualize the child Jesus.

The physical reality was probably less like that charming fourth century statue, now in a museum in Rome, showing a serene, composed child in a long pleated tunic, and more like one of those vivacious Jewish children who can be encountered anywhere along the roads of Palestine and in the Zionist settlements of the plain of Esdraelon, those sparsely clad, barefooted children whose faces display at once a lively intelligence and a sober intensity of passion.

THE surroundings of the Holy Family, which so many painters have striven to depict, can have been very little different from those which we can see in any small house in the locality today. Ordinarily there is only one room, pervaded by the sweetish smell of olive oil. Often there is no outlet for the smoke save by the door. At night a lamp made of clay, hung on an iron chandelier or placed on a projecting slab in the stone wall, provides a poor light.

A church marks the site which certain archeological researchers have identified as that of the house where Joseph brought up Jesus. The house was largely subterranean, hollowed out of the soft local limestone, with a crude stairway (now richly decorated with mosaics) where the child could climb up and down.

He would have received the same education as all the young Jews of His time. There seems to have been a regular course of studies which the Talmud describes. They revolved around the synagogue and were presided over by the hassan, who seems to have been a sort of beadle or administrative official of the sacred places where the faithful foregathered.

At the beth-hasepher or primary school, sitting on the ground around the scrolls of the law, the children repeated the verses in unison until they knew them by heart.

The familiar picture of Jesus growing up with His father and mother in the humble household at Nazareth has a good deal of historical probability.

OUR information about His childhood is scanty. A single episode is reported to us, about the time He was 12 years old. Like all pious Jews, Joseph and Mary would go to Jerusalem for the Passover. Perhaps this would be the first time they had taken their son. The long journey would be lightened by the chants of the pilgrims, reciting those psalms which the Ancients had composed to the rhythm of the march.

The pilgrims would eat lamb prepared with bitter herbs and a red sauce, according to ancient custom. So they ate unleavened bread and drank their wine and then, when the last hallelujahs had died down, they started on their way back. At the first stopping place, Joseph and Mary went to look for their child, whom they had not seen during the march but whom they supposed to be with their friends and relations among the pilgrims. He was not to be found, and, perturbed, they went back to Jerusalem to look for Him.

After three days' search He was discovered in the Temple, in the place where the doctors of the Law and other learned men were accustomed to teach their disciples. Groups of children commonly sat around with students; sometimes they were even permitted to ask questions. There Jesus was, among the learned men of Israel—"And all that heard Him," said St. Luke, "were astonished at His understanding and answers."

His mother, relieved as she was, had to chide Him gently and ask Him why He had treated them thus, "Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing." And the Holy Child replied in those strange harsh words which stated, for the first time, the requirement that whoever would follow Christ must forsake all human ties, even the dearest:

"How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my father's business?"

SO the years passed by; many years, for it was not until He was about 30 that Christ came out of obscurity and began to teach.

We know nothing about these hidden years. In this small and remote province of the empire, a humble Jew would be as unknown to the great world as one ant on a hill, and the historical events of the period took place without the slightest connection with those by which the divine soul received His human grounding.

One fact concerning the early life of Jesus may be read between the lines of the Gospel, that is the death of Joseph. He is mentioned in the incident of the Temple but during the whole public life of Jesus he does not appear at all. An old tradition states that Jesus was 19 when Joseph died and the legendary history of Joseph the Carpenter even makes Jesus himself tell the circumstances of it. The portrait of Mary given by the Gospels is definitely that of a woman without a husband and we are probably right in imagining her as a grave matron in widow's weeds, presiding at the table in the house at Nazareth in the place of honor which the Talmud allotted to the mother of a family when her husband was dead.

Joseph, the good foster father, disappears from the story with the simplicity of one who knew that his task on earth was accomplished and who was content to leave the rest to God. It was probably Joseph who taught Jesus the craft by which He made His living. In the Jewish community every man had to work with his hands, even those devoted to the study of the Law. Thus the great Rabbi Hillel was a woodcutter and Rabbi Schammai, a carpenter.

Jesus led the ordinary life of poor men of His time. He lived in a very humble house, such as has been described, and ate the common food of the Galilean people, barley bread, very little meat, vegetables and sour milk, and on feast days the "grilled fish which makes man's body fruitful," as a rabbinical writer put it. It is clear from the parables and the teaching of Jesus that He had no acquaintance with riches or of the great ones of the earth; His references to luxury have that simplicity commonly to be remarked among those who have little experience of it.

IT was a life of extraordinary simplicity which we should bear in mind when we contemplate the Messiah in glory drawing the crowds to follow Him. Among such poor people, fishermen, workmen, laborers in fields and vineyards, Jesus received that grounding in human nature which each of us acquires from those among whom his lot is cast.

Galileans were simple people, less preoccupied with formalities than the Jews of Judea, kind hearted if somewhat rough mannered. Jesus used their language, their customs and many sayings and idioms from their common speech. He was to be all His life one of those men of the people whose natural nobility allows them to meet all men as equals.

The face of Galilee itself was also to influence Him. As a workman in a small town, He would almost certainly have cultivated a small plot of land as well. The whole Galilean landscape gives an impression of luxuriance and beauty which contrasts with the harshness of Judea. The hills are round and the rich vegetation hides the rocky skeleton. The rainfall is heavy, more so than at Jerusalem and very much more than in the valley of the Jordan.

Life is better there and it is fitting that Galilee should have been the scene of the happy part of Jesus's life, His childhood, His peaceful and obscure working days and, later on, the first successes of His ministry. Judea was to be the land of sorrow.

It is not without significance that during His formative years the book of nature should have showed his friendliest aspect; throughout the gospels we can trace references which show that the memory remained.

So we leave Him, on a certain day of the winter of the year 27 on the way to that ford of Bethabara where the impressive figure of the Baptist was to reveal His destiny. "Behold, there went out a sower to sow."

But no man knew where the seed was to fall.

TOMORROW: How Jesus started His mission. The author paints a fascinating picture of Christ's first public acts against the backdrop of the scenery, the customs and turbulent events of the time.

THE NATIVITY—An interpretation of the Rembrandt etching (about 1645) at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Praised by Church Figures

THE RT. REV. HENRY K. SHERRILL, Presiding Bishop Protestant Episcopal Church: "Jesus and His Times" by Daniel-Rops is a most helpful, indeed an inspiring book. I found this a worthwhile book, and believe that it will prove interesting and helpful to many."

DR. PAUL A. WOLFE, The Brick Presbyterian Church, New York: "A timely and inspiring book. It should have wide appeal for all Christians. It will also be helpful to non-Christians."

BISHOP IVAN LEE HOLT of the Methodist Church: "It is both scholarly and fascinatingly written. It takes more of genius to select a theme like that of this book and bring out something which is both refreshing and stimulating. That the author has done. I think of it as a very great book."

DR. ROBERT J. McCRACKEN, The Riverside Church, New York: "In every sense a major work . . . Protestants as well as Catholics will read with interest this new 'life' of Jesus. The scholarship, dedication and insight back of it are unmistakable."

RICHARD SHERBURN, S.J., The Catholic Review Service: "Oursler's recent works . . . the many devotional and dogmatic studies of Christ's life in English, cannot approach the general and popular audience which 'Jesus and His Times' will inform."

CHRIST DISPUTING WITH THE DOCTORS—An interpretation of the Rembrandt etching (about 1654) from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

TV Preview

Rice's 'Dream Girl' Hall of Fame Play

ANOTHER Maurice Evans production, "Dream Girl," by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Elmer Rice, will be presented on Hall of Fame on KSD-TV from 3 to 4:30 this afternoon. Starred in the play, about a girl who spends more time day dreaming and dramatizing herself than she does in running her bookstore, will be Vivian Blaine, Hal March and Evelyn Varden.

VIVIAN BLAINE . . . STAR OF "DREAM GIRL" ON KSD-TV THIS AFTERNOON.

"Miracle on 34th Street," a comedy about a Santa Claus in a New York City department store, will be the Television Hour presentation on KWK-TV at 9 Wednesday night. Starred as Santa Claus will be Thomas Mitchell, with Macdonald Carey and Teresa Wright as co-stars.

Comedian Ernie Kovacs will be seen in a new Monday-through-Friday series starting on KSD-TV at 9:30 tomorrow morning. Included in the regular cast will be Kovac's wife, singer-comedienne Edie Adams.

A "frank and unprecedented" telecast on the problems of alcoholism will be presented on March of Medicine on KSD-TV at 11:30 tonight. The program will include demonstrations of early treatment of acute alcoholics and the use of psychotherapy and a new drug therapy.

KWK-TV at 7 Friday night will present a special telecast of Christmas with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus, direct from the circus's winter quarters at Sarasota, Fla. Charlton Heston will be master of ceremonies.

Comedians Abbott and Costello will return for the second straight Sunday on the Ed Sullivan Show on KWK-TV at 7 tonight. Other guests will include singer Teresa Brewer, British comedienne Joyce Grenfell, and Metropolitan Opera star Mimi Benzell.

Eddie Fisher in Spectacular

Star Jubilee, a 90-minute CBS spectacular on KWK-TV at 8:30 Saturday night will star Eddie Fisher, comedian Red Skelton and singer Ella Fitzgerald in "I Hear America Singing." The program of song, dance and comedy will tell the story of America's music from its birth to the present day. Fisher's wife, Debbie Reynolds, will make her first professional appearance with him.

EDDIE FISHER . . . SINGS IN COLOR SPECTACULAR ON KWK-TV SATURDAY NIGHT.

Starting this week, KSD-TV will present films of the Trouble With Father series, starring Stu Erwin, at 1 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday; the Willy series, starring June Havoc, at the same time Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and My Little Margie, starring Gale Storm, at 1:30 daily, Monday through Saturday. The hour of programs will be known as The Housewives Theater, and Carl McIntire will act as host and master of ceremonies. The Russ David Show will be on daily, Monday through Friday, from 4 to 4:30.

CBS-TV's musical version of Charles Dickens's "A Christmas Carol" will be the Shower of Stars program on KWK-TV at 7:30 Thursday night, with Basil Rathbone and Fredric March in leading roles.

Variety Hour on KSD-TV at 7 tonight will salute one of Broadway's top showmen, George Abbott. Helen Hayes will be seen with Abbott in a scene from "Skin of Our Teeth." Others on the program will include Eddie Albert, Gwen Verdon, John Raitt, Nancy Walker and Fran Warren.

Week's Color Programs

Color programs on KSD-TV this week: Sadler's Wells Ballet production of "The Sleeping Beauty," 7 tomorrow night; Matinee, 2 p.m. Monday through Friday; and Howdy Doody, 4:30 p.m. tomorrow through Friday. Color on KWK-TV: "A Christmas Carol," 7:30 Thursday night, and Star Jubilee starring Eddie Fisher, 8:30 Saturday night.

A report on the recent White House Conference on Education will be heard on KETC at 8 Tuesday night.

A special Jewish religious program in observance of Hanukkah, the Feast of Dedication, will be presented on KSD-TV at 11:30 this morning.

"Sleeping Beauty" Ballet on KSD-TV

Sadler's Wells Group Stars Margot Fonteyn and Michael Soames

MARGOT FONTEYN, internationally celebrated prima ballerina, will star in the Sadler's Wells Ballet presentation of Tchaikovsky's "The Sleeping Beauty" on the Producers' Showcase color spectacular on KSD-TV from 7 to 8:30 tomorrow night. Miss Fonteyn will play the role of Princess Aurora, and premier danseur Michael Somes will be the Prince Florimund.

Co-starring with them will be such top-level Sadler's Wells Ballet dancers as Frederick Ashton, Beryl Grey, Rowena Jackson, Brian Show and the entire Corps de Ballet. It will be the first appearance of the Corps on American television. The occasion also marks the first time the Sadler's Wells group has done a full-length ballet on television, and the first time that "The Sleeping Beauty" has been presented in its entirety in this medium.

PRECEDING the actual ballet and between the three acts, David Wayne will appear in a narrative play written by John Van Druten. Wayne will portray Harlequin, who leaves the cover of a fairy book to explain the wondrous story of "The Sleeping Beauty" to a small girl and her two brothers, who listen in spellbound rapture. Thus the action of the colorful ballet will be clear in its meaning to viewers of all ages.

"The Sleeping Beauty" is possibly the most popular story in the realm of fairy literature and, as interpreted by Miss Fonteyn and her colleagues of the Sadler's Wells Ballet, it provides entertainment for the entire family.

Who has not thrilled to the exotic tale of the beautiful princess, doomed by the Wicked Fairy to die from pricking her finger, but saved from this fate by the Lilac Fairy, who puts her into a long, deep sleep from which only a prince's kiss of love can awaken her? And so he does and so they are married, in as gala and splendid a nuptial celebration as was ever attended by the whole faerie coterie including Puss-In-Boots, the White Cat, Bluebeard, Goldilocks and her Prince and a host of others.

MARGOT FONTEYN AND MICHAEL SOAMES, WHO WILL HAVE LEADING ROLES IN SADLER'S WELLS COLOR PRODUCTION OF TCHAIKOVSKY'S "SLEEPING BEAUTY" ON KSD-TV TOMORROW NIGHT.

TCHAIKOVSKY composed "The Sleeping Beauty" in 1889, just after the completion of "The Fifth Symphony." The liberetto was written by Ivan Alexandrovich Vsevolozhsky and based on some of Charles Perrault's fairy tales entitled "Contes de ma Mere l'Oye" ("Mother Goose"), first published in 1697.

Although Tchaikovsky considered "The Sleeping Beauty" one of his best scores (as has history, eventually), it is interesting to note that initially both public and critics received the work with comparatively mild enthusiasm when it was premiered at the Mariinsky Theater in St. Petersburg on Jan. 2, 1890. Despite this, it subsequently became one of the most popular ballets in all choreographic repertoire. Until the present world-acclaimed Sadler's Wells production, a shortened version, "Aurora's Wedding" (consisting of a suite of dances), was danced by most companies.

The Sadler's Wells Ballet, whose official home is the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, London, England, has won world acclaim in its visits to Europe's capitals, as well as throughout the United States and Canada. Its present American tour is the fourth one it has undertaken here since 1949.

Cotten Stars In KSD Radio Drama Today

YOUR RADIO THEATER on KSD at 4:05 this afternoon will present "The Glass Idol," starring Joseph Cotten. The play is about a matinee idol who tries to destroy the career of a beautiful singer who plays opposite him in a new production. Pat O'Brien is the host of the weekly series.

Singers Dorothy Sarnoff, Margaret Whiting and Al Hibbler and violinist Florian ZaBach will be the guests on What's New in Music on KMOX at 1 this afternoon. ZaBach will play some of his own compositions.

FAMILY THEATER on KWK at 9:30 tonight will star Lyle Bettger in "Ladies' Man," about a man who goes fishing to get away from his wife and two daughters and finds himself in a net not of his own choosing.

A feature of NBC's Monitor at 2 o'clock this afternoon on KSD will be a visit to the International Airport in Vienna. At 8 tonight, Monitor will visit a boomerang factory in Australia. There will be interviews during the afternoon and evening with a number of celebrites, including Marion Anderson, Peggy King, John Scott Trotter and Jose Greco.

St. Louis Story on KMOX at 12:30 this afternoon will be about the Obear Nestor Glass Company.

From 1:30 to 2 this afternoon, KSD will carry a description of the Stix, Baer and Fuller Christmas Party for children in the Shriners Hospital.

Message of Israel, on KXOK at 7:30 this morning, will present Rabbi William F. Rosenblum of New York speaking on "The Lights Must Never Fail."

"Redeem the Time" will be the topic of Dr. Oswald Hoffman on Lutheran Hour on KWK at 11:30 this morning and on KFUO at 2:30 this afternoon.

As Crosby Sees It

Commercials Fun If Cleverly Done

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.

THERE'S BEEN A LOT of grumbling about commercials, which is sort of a national pastime like grousing about the weather. Well, there have been some pretty terrible ones but they aren't all that way. Somewhat hesitantly I must admit that I like some commercials.

Garry Moore's commercials on his morning show are never very hard to take and are frequently a lot of fun. Also, the tone of them fits so smoothly into the Moore type of entertainment that you're never quite sure when he's selling something or when he's just fooling. Just the other day, for instance, Moore announced blandly that he was going to do another television first—a soap opera:

"YOU NORMALLY think of soap opera as one of those sentimental stories about women that go on and on. But a real soap opera should be an opera about soap."

Which they forthwith presented, Durward Kirby coming on in Siegfriedian costume to moan in song that while all the other warriors are off in a monstrous battle, he was on KP. In came Denise Lor dressed as a Valkyrie to tell him—to the tune of "The Anvil Chorus"—all about the virtues of a product for cleaning pots and pans. For the final chorus, Moore joined in dressed as a kind of Brunhilde and singing, if my ears weren't playing me tricks, contralto.

"I sure would like to see more funny commercials like that on TV," announced Moore. I would too. Moore's commercials, incidentally, are prepared for him, not by his crew of writers, but by the ad agencies (in that case McCann-Erickson) and are especially tailored for his show.

THE REGULARS on the show —Durward Kirby, Denise Lor, Ken Carson and Moore—regularly pitch in to sell the soaps and perfumes and whatnot; they're dressed in a wild melange of costumes and, there again, you are never quite sure when the entertainment leaves off and the selling comes on—which is the mark of a good commercial.

ERNIE KOVACS . . . DAILY COMEDY SERIES TO START ON KSD-TV TOMORROW

Of course, the Moore show offers a lot more than commercials. Week in week out, half an hour from Mondays through Thursdays and an hour and a half on Friday, it's an amiable, spoofing show with sketches, songs and monkeyshines that maintain a high level. I don't know how they keep up the pace.

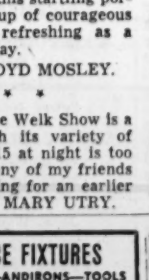

Kirby, who used to be a straight announcer, has developed into one of the most versatile muggers and comedians on the air and Miss Lor, a singer who could hardly say her own name without blushing when she joined the show five years ago, has turned virtually into the Nanette Fabray of daytime TV.

Concerts on Radio, TV

A MEMORIAL tribute to the late composer Arthur Honegger, who died Nov. 27, will be heard on the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert on KSD at 7:15 tomorrow night. Conductor Charles Munch will lead the orchestra in the first movement of Honegger's "Fifth Symphony." Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4" also will be heard.

The New York Philharmonic Symphony in its program on KMOX at 10:15 tonight will feature music of Jean Sibelius, Finland's great composer who was 90 years old last Thursday. A major selection will be the Sibelius "Symphony No. 2 in D major."

Renata Tebaldi

Soprano Renata Tebaldi will be the guest of the Donald Voorhees orchestra on KSD at 8 tomorrow night. Her selections will include the aria "Ebben ne Andro Lontano" from Catalani's "La Wally" and "Poveri Fiori" from Cilea's "Andriana Lecouvreur."

"O tu Palermo," from Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers," will be sung by Jerome Hines as a guest with the Howard Barlow orchestra on KTVI and KXOK at 7:30 tomorrow night. Other Hines numbers will be Bullard's "A Winter Song" and Kaye and Mossman's "Full Moon and Empty Arms."

Paul Lavalle will feature trombone soloist Erwin Price playing Ray Noble's "Cherokee" on the Band of America program on KSD at 8:30 tomorrow night. Another feature will be Fillmore's "Klaxon March."

Paul Holmes's "Adagio and Allegro" has been chosen as the contemporary American work to be featured by the Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestra on KWK at 8:30 tonight.

"Cosi Fan Tutte," Mozart's comic opera in two acts, will be heard on the Metropolitan Opera series on KXOK from 1 to 4:30 Saturday afternoon. Singers in principal roles will include Eleanor Steber, Blanche Thebom, Patrice Munsel, Cesare Valletti, Frank Guarrera and Lorenzo Alvary.

Television Letter Box

CONGRATULATIONS on the excellent presentation of "The Bamboo Cross," starring Jane Wyman on KSD-TV Tuesday night. In a period of dull soap operas and unrealistic life situations, this startling portrayal of a group of courageous women is as refreshing as a warm spring day.

LLOYD MOSLEY.

The Lawrence Welk Show is a good one, with its variety of music, but 11:15 at night is too late for it. Many of my friends join me in asking for an earlier time for it. MARY UTRY.

Cheap commercials about Santa Claus (for instance putting on beards) ought to be eliminated from television. Little children have so few years in which to believe in Santa, and all that poor acting and commercials certainly put doubt in some little minds. I noticed it was done last year and it's off to a good start again.

MRS. H. PETERSON.

NBC Opera Tour

By Thomas B. Sherman

A GROUP of artists to be organized, sponsored and financed by the National Broadcasting Co. will make a tour of prominent North American cities during the fall of 1956 presenting opera in English. Announcement to this effect was recently made by David Sarnoff, chairman of the board of NBC and RCA-Victor. A request for additional information elicited the reply that casts, other personnel and the itinerary had not yet been decided but that the two operas to be presented were Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" and Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro."

Apparently this touring company will be a by-product of NBC's operatic program on television, an effort which has already resulted in two productions of superior quality and which will include about four more before the winter season is over. Among these will be a new treatment of Mozart's "Magic Flute" with an English libretto by W. H. Auden, a poet with an extensive knowledge of music and a particular affection for Mozart.

What makes this project seem unusually promising is that NBC has resources—artistic and otherwise—that are not available to the ordinary touring company that must take in more than it puts out. In general the production of opera is not a money-making enterprise and there is no reason to believe that NBC will so regard it. Its television operas have been undertaken for reasons of prestige and good will; and presumably the tour will have the same purpose.

NEEDLESS TO SAY such a purpose will not be attained if the performances are second rate. If a production demands a mammoth chorus, a stage band, moving scenery or snorting dragons then that's what it should have. Fortunately many of the best operas require no such lavish outlay; they can be mounted smartly and with optimum effectiveness without recourse to extravagant accessories. "Butterfly" and "Figaro" fall in that category. Both require choruses but they need not be large.

What the American public rarely sees even in the few cities that support regular opera season is a production in which the ensemble has been perfected and an appropriate style realized through an adequate number of rehearsals. If the singing is good we ask for little else and as a consequence are likely to regard the plot and the action as of minimum consequence. Such an attitude leads to wavering concentration.

NBC will therefore have an opportunity to fill a void. Smart, ship-shape and stylish productions could provide many music lovers with an experience they never had before by leading them to realize that opera is an extension of the theater rather than a concert in costume.

I do not mean to imply that tight ensemble and an appropriate style can be realized without first-class singers. The meaning of the dramatic situation cannot be conveyed merely by vocal precision, good timing, and effective stage business. The voice itself is the most vital means of expression of any involved and if it's an insensitive voice then drama is no longer dramatic.

But not every singer of artistic quality is an internationally famous star. As a matter of fact the star system plus the demands of large auditoriums are not always favorable to the best results. One star shifts the focus too much to one personality. And even an all-star cast is not ideal if its members are not subject to the intensive rehearsing and preparation along one line of musical thought that's requisite to a closely integrated ensemble.

THE ARTISTIC ADVISERS to NBC know all this. One only hopes that they will choose to do what is possible with their great resources rather than what they think may be expected. The ideal, in my opinion, should be productions along the lines of those at the Glyndebourne Festival rather than the Metropolitan Opera. This could only be approximated since there are not many auditoriums through the country that are small enough or sufficiently well equipped. But there is no need, in these circumstances to think in terms of audiences of from five to ten thousand.

According to Gen. Sarnoff an announcement of itineraries will be made shortly.

Theater Tickets Suggested as Gifts

Gift certificates which would enable anyone to give subscriptions for Theater Guild-American Theater Society stage attractions coming to the American Theater after Jan. 2 as Christmas presents are being distributed by the Theater Guild office, 318 North Grand boulevard. The certificates may be purchased there, by mail, or by calling OLive 2-7928.

LEO G. CARROLL CHECKS A SPIDER-ENLARGING EXPERIMENT IN A SCENE FROM "TARANTULA," A SCIENCE FICTION FILM WHICH IS SCHEDULED NEXT AT THE FOX. ALSO STARRED IN THE PICTURE ARE JOHN AGAR AND MARA CORDAY.

GISELA DEEGE AND GERT REINHOLM, SOLOISTS OF DANCE THEATER-BERLIN, WHICH WILL BE PRESENTED IN KIEL AUDITORIUM OPERA HOUSE TUESDAY.

Broadway Perplexed By Success

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP). BROADWAY, now at the midway mark in a season of record success, is finding prosperity pleasing—and perplexing.

The big delight: Boxoffice grosses nearing an all-time mark of a $1,000,000 per week.

The big poser: How to find room for other shows.

Main reason for such a strange dilemma is the exceptional series of remarkable dramatic offerings which have arrived on the Great White Way since September. The trade doesn't recall such a brilliant surge of activity in many moons.

Take a comparison with last season alone:

Through mid-December of last year, 24 shows arrived, including a couple for limited engagements only; 10 quickly flopped. Through mid-December this year, 25—including four limited engagements — have come to town; only seven have had to quit. Further, the quality of the winners has been exceptional.

* * *

ADD TO the current crop, 11 holdover shows from previous seasons and it is easy to see why every available auditorium is booked while an envious swarm of other plays have to delay production or remain out on tour in the hinterlands.

It's this that has a lot of Broadway's wisest heads wondering.

"When the Lunts have to stay out of town for weeks and weeks—and then take only an interim booking, the theater jam is bad indeed," one veteran said.

He referred to the Lindsay-Crouse comedy "The Great Sebastians," which stars Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. The show comes into the ANTA on Jan. 5 amid hopes that some other theater will become available before its four-and-one-half-week lease expires. Another show is already booked to move into the ANTA then.

Although the current wave of boxoffice hits has emphasized the problem, the housing squeeze has been developing for several years.

SMALLER HOUSES no longer provide enough revenue to pay the mounting costs of show production—so are torn down for garages. Conversely, some of the larger houses have been rented to television networks for studios by landlords tired of gambling on finding a successful show for a tenant.

No one, of course, saw the 1955-56 boom season coming.

The extent to which that boom may develop was forecast recently by the trade magazine Variety: Broadway stage shows between Christmas and New Year may register their first weekly ticket gross over $1,000,000. Several weeks ago the sale figure passed $900,000. Capacity business during the holiday week, together with the upper scales of New Year's eve performances, can achieve the million mark.

'Auntie Mame'

HOLLYWOOD — The screen rights to "Auntie Mame," have been acquired by Warner Brothers. The story will be a screen adaptation of the best seller by Patrick Dennis.

Dance Theater-Berlin at Opera House Tuesday

DANCE THEATER-BERLIN, a German ballet troupe, will appear in Kiel Auditorium Opera House at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday under auspices of the Civic Music League.

Each of the 14 dancers is said to be a soloist in his or her own right, but the troupe expresses the style and views of its director, Tatjana Gsovsky, who believes that the dance "should also be great theater—not simply in its visual appeal but in its dramatic themes and musical scores as well."

The program reflects this, ranging to Shakespeare, the Greek classics, and a modern dramatist for its themes. The program will include "Hamlet," with music by Boris Blacher, an adaptation in five key scenes of Shakespeare's tragedy; "Orphee," with music by Liszt, based on the Greek legend of Orpheus seeking his dead wife, Euridice, in the Underworld; and "Labyrinth," also drawn from Greek legend; "Souvenirs," a satire based on Schnitzler's "Reigen," itself a comedy on the merry-go-round of love; and "Ballade," with music by Mendelssohn, a romantic interlude about a lady and two knights.

The troupe came to international attention in 1953 at the International Festival in Berlin, where its presentation of "Hamlet" created a critical stir. Mme. Gsovsky, born in Moscow, was trained in Russia. Fleeing Russia, she established herself in Berlin in the Allied sector. She has staged and produced ballets in the opera houses of Buenos Aires, Rome, Paris, Milan, Venice and Stockholm, and has created more than a score of ballets.

Pre-Christmas Concert Today in Kiel Opera House

THE Christmas season in the St. Louis area will be musically inaugurated today when the 150-voice St. Louis Bach Society Chorus, the entire St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and three nationally-known soloists present a special Pre-Christmas Concert and Candlelight Festival in the Kiel Auditorium Opera House at 3 p.m.

This afternoon's concert will combine traditional Christmas music with three choral masterpieces: Bach's Cantata 63 and excerpts from his Cantata 65, and excerpts from Berlioz' oratorio "The Childhood of Christ."

Selections by Brahms, Coleridge-Taylor, Gabrieli, Palestrina, Katherine K. Davis, Saint-Saens, Gruber-Heyne, and Carl August Fischer will be featured in the Christmas Festival in Candlelight section of the program. The processionals will be the French melody "Masters in This Hall," the German carol "Good Christian Men, Rejoice," and the Latin hymn "O Come, All Ye Faithful."

The three soloists at the concert will be mezzo-soprano Frances Bible, tenor Leslie Chabay, and bass Paul Ukena. The combined musical groups will all be under the direction of William Heyne.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

A MAN ALONE—Western that starts out on the right track but succumbs to the old horse-opera pattern before the final shot is fired. Stars Ray Milland. FOX.

QUEST FOR THE LOST CITY—Dana and Ginger Lamb, two determined and intrepid explorers, go through lots of hardships to reach an Indian village and some Mayan ruins on the Mexican-Guatamalan border, but, while you must admire their courage, the film, which they made themselves, is somewhat amateurish and has several contradictions. The narrative is over-dramatized. With a reissue of Alex Guinness's very amusing comedy, "THE CAPTAIN'S PARADISE." PAGEANT and RICHMOND.

HONKY TONK—Reissue of the big money-maker starring Clark Gable and Lana Turner. Also BILLY THE KID, the 1941 version, with Robert Taylor as the notorious young western killer. ORPHEUM.

LUCY GALLANT—Slick, plush picturization of the rise of an independent girl to the ownership of a great fashion store in a Texas oil boom town. Lightweight as to drama, but a natural as a "women's picture." With Jane Wyman as the couturiere and Charlton Heston as the rancher who carries a torch for her a dozen years. ST. LOUIS.

THE TALES OF HOFFMANN—Return of the brilliantly beautiful and bizarre 1951 British production of the Offenbach opera. With Robert Rounseville, Moira Shearer. SHADY OAK.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—Tourist's view of Paris, Switzerland and American points in the sensational depth process. AMBASSADOR.

LANA TURNER AND CLARK GABLE ARE STARRED IN "HONKY TONK," REISSUE AT LOEW'S ORPHEUM.

Gallery Notes

THE 1955 Artists' Guild exhibition of prints, drawings and crafts will open with a reception today at 3 p.m. at the guild galleries, 812 Union boulevard. Prizes, determined by an out-of-town jury, are to be presented at the reception. The display will continue through Dec. 22.

* * *

At the City Art Museum, the Art Directors' Club of St. Louis will open an exhibition of commercial illustration and advertising design tomorrow. The work will remain on view through Jan. 3.

Current St. Louis shows include "Collector's Choice," closing next Sunday; "Graphic Outlook, 1955," Dec. 31, both at the museum; the 1955 Christmas sale of the People's Art Center, 3657 Grandel square, Dec. 24, and a one-man show of anaglyphs, or low reliefs, by Fred J. Carpenter, at Petit Pigalle, 4207 Lindell boulevard, Jan. 7.

Singing Debut

HOLLYWOOD — Olivia de Havilland will make her singing debut on celluloid in "The Ambassador's Daughter," a Norman Krasna production.

Art and Artists

New Books With Plates in Color

By H. S. Derrickson

TWO handsome picture books, both eminently suitable as gifts for the art-lover, invite comparison and contrast because they are published by rival firms and reproduce some of the same masterpieces.

The books are "Art Treasures of the National Gallery, London," by Sir Philip Hendy (Harry N. Abrams, New York, 199 pp., $15) and "The Fifteenth Century: Van Eyck to Botticelli," by Jacques Lassaigne and Giulio Carlo Argan (Albert Skira, Geneva, Switzerland, and New York, 236 pp., $20).

Among paintings reproduced in both are Antonello da Messina's "Portrait of a Man," Jan van Eyck's "Giovanni Arnolfini and His Wife" and Piero della Francesca's "The Nativity."

Processes used by Skira have resulted in remarkably sharp delineation of detail, extending even to tiny cracks in paint surfaces, and in the kind of intensification of color that, in the same firm's earlier books, has been adversely criticized by Jonathan Marshall, editor of Arts, and Frederick Hartt, associate professor of art history at Washington University.

At this distance from London, direct comment on fidelity to original tones is impossible. Flesh tints and a "five o'clock shadow" effect in the Antonello portrait, however, seem normal in Abrams's version, whereas a heightened flush, an unnatural ruddiness in Skira's suggests a stubblefield at harvest time, raked by the rays of a setting sun.

THE PAINTING, measuring 14 by 10 inches, is given 8-by-6-inch reproduction in both books. In the new Christmas annual of Art News, the same portrait is reproduced in a plate only an inch and a half narrower than the original. Here the color is closer to Abrams's than to Skira's.

What is a brick red skull cap in the Art News annual and the Abrams book becomes a flaming tomato red in the Skira plate.

Color photography, of course, cannot take the place of an original oil, but Skira's processes, while inevitably distorting color a bit, achieve an astounding linear accuracy that has advantages of its own.

In the Skira reproduction of the Antonello portrait, the artist's fine brushwork in eyelashes, eyebrows and hair fringing the forehead is caught with a sharpness of focus that indicates both the fuzzier American reproductions must be off-register by infinitesimal degrees.

WHILE THE DEGREE of chromatic distortion in the Skira plates remains a moot point, they retain a clear margin of superiority in linear clarity over the Abrams pictures in both the famous Van Eyck marriage painting and Piero della Francesca's "The Nativity."

Skira's enlarged detail of the mirror in the Van Eyck picks up glints of color and surface fissures that are completely lost in both the Abrams and the Skira reproductions of the whole picture.

The books differ most in organization. Abrams's centers on one great museum's 100 outstanding treasures. Skira's, with its 116 color plates from many sources, is part of the firm's "Great Centuries of Painting Series."

Thus Sir Philip conducts his readers on a chatty gallery tour, whereas Messrs. Lassaigne and Argan provide theirs with an intensive, cohesive course in the art history of a significant period.

This was an age that encompassed discovery of the laws of perspective, Masaccio's fusion of human and monumental qualities and Van Eyck's technical advances in presenting the visible world's beauty in sparkling, jewel-like paint.

JUST HOW Van Eyck managed his brilliant vision of form and color under the incidence of light is not precisely known. It is characteristic of their approaches that Sir Philip suggests it was mere will power and that Lassaigne cites the fact distillation had made turpentine readily available for the first time.

The liveliest writing is that of Sir Philip, who is not above noting a fault of composition in a Vermeer but abstains from the art historians' wrangles in which Lassaigne and to a greater extent Argan are embroiled. And Stuart Gilbert, Skira's translator, has a linguist's preference for legitimate but lesser known variants of common words — "hotchpotch" for "hodgepodge," "depositary" for "depository."

Either book, however, should prove a welcome addition to the art-lover's bookshelf, with Skira's the more suitable for the scholar or advanced amateur. Each, moreover, is so tempting as to be an excellent introduction to the collecting of art books. For this purpose the more widely appropriate choice is the Abrams volume, because of its less complex structure and more popular method of exposition.

Dance Program

The St. Louis Dance Theater will give its first performance of the season Saturday. The program will be presented at 8:15 p.m. at the Y.M.H.A., 724 Union boulevard.

Villa-Lobos To Conduct Symphony

HEITOR VILLA-LOBOS, famed Brazilian musician and composer - conductor, will make his first appearance as guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra next weekend.

Villa-Lobos, sharing the podium with Vladimir Golschmann, will direct the orchestra in concerts at Kiel Auditorium Opera House 8:40 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. next Sunday.

The South American conductor will direct two of his own works—"Alvorada Na Floresta Tropical" ("Dawn in a Tropical Forest") and "Choros No. 6."

Villa-Lobos is coming to St. Louis to honor Golschmann, who this season is celebrating his twenty-fifth year as conductor and music director of the orchestra. Villa-Lobos asked Golschmann to share direction of the concerts with him. As a result, Golschmann will conduct the first half of each concert, Villa-Lobos the second half.

Selections to be played under Golschmann's direction include Handel's Suite from the opera "The Faithful Shepherd," Arthur Honegger's "Pastorale d'Ete," and Richard Strauss's tone poem "Death and Transfiguration." The Honegger work, which Golschmann conducted in its world premiere, will be performed in memory of the composer, who died Nov. 27.

Villa-Lobos, born in Rio de Janeiro in 1881, has written 1500 separate compositions. He began to study the 'cello with his father at the age of 6. In later years he learned to play most of the other instruments of the orchestra, principally by teaching himself. Villa-Lobos is—except for a few harmony lessons—musically almost completely self-educated.

Villa-Lobos's "Choros No. 6," one of his major works, is for a large orchestra, including native percussion instruments. The choros form, a sort of street serenade, emphasizing rhythm and popular and native Brazilian melodies, was invented by Villa-Lobos.

American Dark: Inge's 'Bus Stop' Dec. 26

The American Theater continues dark this week. The next scheduled attraction is William Inge's comedy, "Bus Stop," which will open Monday, Dec. 26 for a week. Peggy Ann Garner, Albert Salmi and Glenn Anders head the national company, which will be seen here. The play is still running on Broadway after 327 performances.

Sidney Kingsley's comedy, "Lunatics and Lovers," has been booked for the week of Jan. 2. The musical comedy hit, "Plain and Fancy," starring Alexis Smith and Craig Stevens, will open Tuesday, Jan. 10, for two weeks. The musical has had 366 performances on Broadway and is still running there.

STAN KENTON JAZZ SHOW TO FEATURE ROY HAMILTON

Stan Kenton and his company of twenty-five will appear in concert which also spotlights singer Roy Hamilton, at Kiel Opera House, Wednesday, December 14, at 8:30 p.m.

Tickets on Sale at Goldie's Ticket Office, Mezzanine — Arcade Bldg., and Kiel Opera House Box Office, $2.00-$2.50-$3.00-$3.50.

'Y' Group to Present Three One-Act Plays

The "Y" Players will present three one-act plays at 8:15 tonight in Brown Hall of the Downtown Y.M.C.A. The plays, staged by member directors Edna Horvath, Francis Lane and Herb Monk Jr., are part of the group's experimental program.

Tryouts for the Players' next production, "The Young and the Fair," will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Downtown "Y". The public is invited to audition for the all-feminine cast.

Answers to Housewives' Questions

By Dorothy Brainerd

"I HAVE a full-time job, in addition to keeping house," writes Mrs. K.S. "This means that ordinarily I do my marketing over the weekend. Now I am wondering about the Christmas turkey. I do not have a home freezer, so if I buy a frozen turkey and let it defrost must I cook it right away or can I keep it in the refrigerator after it has thawed before cooking it?"

A good question, Mrs. S., and one which needs clarifying. Here is the advice of the Poultry and Egg National Board, an accepted authority.

"Quick-Frozen and Fresh Turkey: Follow package directions or defrost frozen turkeys by one or a combination of these methods.

1. Leave bird in its original body wrap. Place on shelf in refrigerator. Allow two to four days for defrosting.

2. Place bird, still in its original body wrap, under running cold water. Allow two to six hours.

"Prompt cooking after defrosting is preferable. A defrosted, ready-to-cook or a fresh drawn turkey can be kept for two or three days in a refrigerator at 38 degrees F. or less. If bird is purchased undrawn, it should be drawn promptly and refrigerated. Wrap bird loosely in aluminum foil or moisture-proof paper. Once defrosted, cook exactly like fresh turkey. It is advisable not to refreeze poultry."

THE TREND toward dual-service items is apparent in every field of homefurnishings, and a practical one it is. A recently introduced pattern of silverplate, designed along contemporary lines, includes a sauce bowl and tray that fits into this category since it can serve as a gravy boat or a handy server for ice cream sauces, cold meat condiments or relishes.

"DO YOU have a formula for a white spray to spray Christmas tree boughs?" asks Mrs. C.D. "Last year I bought a commercial spray in a can and went according to directions. It covered well but it was a gray color and I want real white. These Christmas tree boughs will be used for large vases and baskets and wall brackets."

The decorative sprays in cans which can be obtained in all local department stores are certainly the simplest way of putting "snow" on those branches, Mrs. D., and I don't understand why you had this difficulty since you should have no trouble in getting a good "white" white.

However, if you want to try it yourself, here in the method recommended by a staff member of the home economics department of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture for frosting Christmas trees and decorations.

You will need a can of white enamel, a one-inch paint brush, mica Christmas flakes — and plenty of old newspapers to spread over a big area to guard against spattering and dripping paint.

Beginning at the bottom of the branch and working toward the tips, paint the entire surface. While the paint is still wet, sprinkle generously with Christmas snow.

Apply as much paint and snow as possible to give sparkle. After the paint has dried you can paste on silver, gold or colored sequins for a really dazzling effect, or tie tiny Christmas balls to the branches.

A little tree, three or four feet high, may be mounted on a wooden block and treated in this manner. Branches, pine cones, leaves, seed pods gathered along the highway, at no cost at all, can be turned into bits of Christmas fairyland.

Couldn't Afford To Laugh

By E. E. Edgar

ECONOMY: One afternoon at a rehearsal of one of his musicals, showman Flo Ziegfeld was seated out front with a friend. In the cast was a young comedian who was making his Broadway debut.

The showman's companion found the comic uproariously funny. Ziegfeld, however, did not crack a single smile.

"Why so glum?" demanded the friend. "Didn't you think he was good?"

"He was great!" said the showman.

"Then why didn't you laugh?"

"I can't afford to," explained Ziegfeld. "If he sees me laughing, he'll ask for a raise!"

* * *

ADVANTAGES: One night at a party, a stranger asked playwright John Patrick if he had any children.

"No," replied the author of 'The Teahouse of the August Moon.' "I raise sheep instead."

"Oh, I'm sorry," murmured the other.

"Sorry? For What?" said Patrick. "Raising sheep also has its reward. I lavish affection on a lamb. I give it shelter, I feed it, I provide it with medical attention. When it matures, however, I don't have to send it to college. I eat it."

FAULTY FOUNDATION: Once, while making a movie, Will Rogers had to play a scene in which he was seated on a bench next to a plump woman.

Suddenly, for no apparent reason, she started to slide toward him. Slowly but surely she forced him to the edge of the bench. Just as Rogers was about to slip off, the director cried, "Cut!"

"You'd better keep an eye on her," the director warned the humorist. "She's trying to steal this scene."

"I don't think so," said Rogers. "The string of her corset snapped and she was just settlin'."

OPPONENT: One of the most colorful figures he met in Washington, recalls Sen. Alben Barkley in his book "That Reminds Me," was the late Sen. J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama, whom Barkley first knew in the House.

"One of the funniest things I have ever seen was a performance which Congressman Heflin staged before his last race for the House. He was ambitious to run for the Senate; hence it was important to retain his House seat as a springboard.

"There were rumors that a strong man was considering running against him, and Heflin was frankly worried. About a week before the deadline for qualifying petitions to be filed, he sent his assistant to Montgomery, the Alabama state capital, to 'watch developments.'

"Came the fateful evening when, at midnight, the deadline would elapse, and Heflin was carrying on like an old horse with the heaves. The House had a night session in progress, but every half hour Heflin was in the cloakroom telephone booth, ringing up his assistant in Montgomery. Those of us in the cloakroom could hear his end of the conversation through the door.

"'That you, Jim?' he would shout. 'Well, has he filed against me? What? You say he has? Oh, he hasn't! All right, stay right there!'

"This went on until one minute after midnight, Alabama time, when the deadline had elapsed. Heflin went in to place the crucial call.

"'Well, what did he do, Jim? Did he file? What? He filed? Oh, you say he didn't file! Too late now, eh? Thank you Jim!'

"Heflin came out of the booth, filled his lungs with air and drew himself up like a pouter pigeon.

"'Damn his hide!' he boomed. 'I wish he had filed! I'd have beat hell out of him!'"

PRIVACY: Author Ludwig Bemelman's writes his manuscripts in a painstaking longhand. Once, when he was busy with a script, a friend said to him:

"Why don't you hire a secretary and dictate your work?"

Bemelmans shuddered at the suggestion.

"Writing," he replied, "is like making love — you shouldn't have an audience."

Love Is Where You Find It

Lisa Gets Help of Filling Station Attendant in Taking Passenger Home

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

LISA drove rapidly over the highway leading to Walnut City meeting a few trucks but no cars. As she passed Elizabeth's house, which was dark, Lisa sighed with relief.

"We're here, Bob. Where do you live?"

She realized then that he was asleep and nothing she said could awaken him. The watch her father had given her showed that it was three minutes until midnight. Slowing down, she considered the situation. Even if she knew where he lived she couldn't get him out of his car. Neither would she leave him asleep in the street. If she called her father it would disturb Diane who would keep them awake the rest of the night with her reproaches.

At that moment Lisa was passing an oil station which the attendant was preparing to close for the night. This might be the answer. At least he could tell her what to do with her unconscious passenger.

AS she stopped by the gasoline tank she saw that he was not much older than Bob. He was also tall and good looking, not that it mattered in her present predicament. His face wore the same half-admiring, half-curious expression Lisa was beginning to be accustomed to. It did not occur to her that he knew who she was even if she did not know him.

"Are you closing for the night?" she asked, trying to speak casually.

"I was but I can let you have some gas if you need it."

"I need help," she said, indicating the figure slumped in the seat beside her.

The attendant smiled. "Your boy friend seems to have passed out."

"HE ISN'T MY BOY FRIEND," SHE SAID WITH DIGNITY. "I JUST MET HIM TONIGHT AND I DON'T KNOW HIS LAST NAME OR WHERE HE LIVES."

"He isn't my boy friend," she stated with dignity. "I just met him tonight and I don't know his last name or where he lives."

"His name is Milton. Bob Milton. Lives in a big white house on the other side of town."

Lisa was so relieved she cried eagerly, "Would you mind taking him home? After you've dropped me off first, I mean. It wouldn't be too much out of your way to stop at the duplex on Main street?"

"It's no trouble at all," he agreed. "If you'll wait until I've turned off the lights."

He took the wheel after helping Lisa slide over, supporting Bob's unconscious head on her shoulder.

"I can't tell you how grateful I am," she said, admiring the easy grace with which he drove. "I'm Lisa Morton. I haven't been here but a few days."

"I know," he said. "You're the editor's daughter from Hollywood."

"Actually I live in Westwood but it all seems to be Hollywood back here."

HE nodded. "Hollywood's quite a place. I spent a week there once. Guess it seems pretty dull to you here."

"I wouldn't say that exactly, but it is different. Won't you tell me your name?"

"Just call me Jim. You won't be seeing me unless you want to buy gas," he grinned. "We won't be meeting socially."

"Don't be too sure about that," Lisa retorted, liking him better than any other member of his sex she had met in Walnut City.

"I'm not going to like awake worrying about it," he assured her. "I expect to be married soon."

LISA sensed disapproval back of this statement. He considered her "wild" because she came from Hollywood. She was hurt by Jim's caution—as if she were a siren trying to lure him from his true love.

As he stopped the car in front of her father's home Lisa said stiffly, "Thank you! What do I owe you?"

"No charge," he said, shifting Bob's head to his own shoulder. "Always happy to help a lady in distress," he added.

Lisa wanted to slap his good looking face. She wanted to burst into tears. She wanted to leave this smug little town and return to California.

The front door was unlocked. Lisa opened it cautiously but her stepmother had heard the car. Diane appeared at the top of the stairs looking heavy and awkward in her long night gown and slippers.

"Where have you been?" she demanded. "And what do you mean coming here after midnight with a couple of men?"

"I'll tell you about it tomorrow," Lisa said wearily. "Let's not wake Daddy. He's been so tired."

"He's been tired! What about me? I haven't closed my eyes. When I called Mrs. Curtis she said you were with Peggy Melrose but when I called Peggy's mother, she said Peggy had gone to see Mrs. Curtis. Then you come home after midnight with two men and no sign of Peggy or any other girl."

Head Scarfs

Head scarfs and hoods have appeared with cold weather and are being worn extensively instead of hats. Wool jersey is a popular fabric for scarfs and hoods. Very lightweight flannel blended with cashmere also is liked for scarfs as are the numerous plaid designs available. Among the hoods, the wool jersey that covers not only the head but is shaped to cover the neck is a featured style. This hood is preferred in double-fabric, reversible type.

Bobby Clark to Tour

NEW YORK—Bobby Clark, who hasn't done a musical comedy since 1948, will be back in grease paint this season but without the absurd spectacles that have been his trademark for so many years. Clark was signed last week to tour in "Damn Yankees," in which he will have the role of the devil, created by Ray Walston.

This role, a comparatively straight one for the rambunctious comedian, will be played straight in order not to throw the musical comedy out of focus. A newcomer is being sought to appear opposite him in the Gwen Verdon part.

Quick Payoff

NEW YORK—One of the quickest payoffs in the history of show business has been effected by "Janus," the Carolyn Green comedy at the Plymouth Theater. It opened Thanksgiving night and has already recouped its production cost so that the entire profit from here on is gravy.

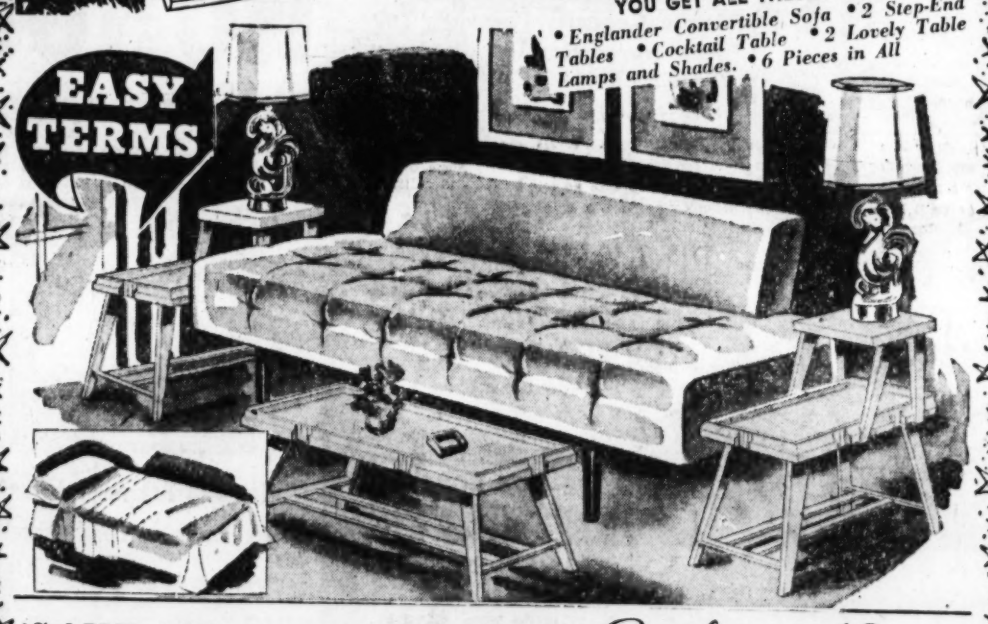

Alfred de Liagre Jr. brought the play in for $44,000. It showed a profit of $35,000 in its pre-Broadway tour and about $8000 in its first week in New York. Last week put it solidly in the black. Starring in "Janus" are Margaret Sullavan, Robert Preston and Claude Dauphin.

Role for Eartha Kitt

NEW YORK—Singer Eartha Kitt will star in "Jazz Getaway," a musical which goes into rehearsal next month for a March Broadway opening. The musical will be a panoramic history of jazz written by Columnist-Novelist Robert Sylvester, with top jazz hits of all time compiled by Sy Oliver.

Widow, 39, Jilted; Should She Call Him?

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I AM a widow 39 years old. Three months ago I met a man about 15 years older than I am. He has been married and divorced twice. I am crazy about him and he always seemed to like me. He asked me to marry him.

Then one evening when we were supposed to go out to dinner he called and said he had to work and would call later. I didn't hear from him for two days and then I called his office and they said he was out of town. Three days later I saw him with another woman. He didn't see me and he acted real interested in her. Martha, I'm in love with him and I'd take him back in a minute if he would only explain. Do you think I should call him again?

DESPERATE.

No. If he were in love with you, he'd be right at your doorstep. It's no fun to be jilted, but just be grateful you found out what kind he is before you got him all the way to the altar (although he probably would have found some way to slip out before that). Sounds like mighty good riddance to me.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 28 YEARS OLD and have been engaged to a man for five years. I intend to break up with him but don't quite know how to tell him. I have a boy 5 years old by a previous marriage and he thinks this man is wonderful. But I don't care for him like I did. I'm working for a man who is separated from his wife. He has three children whose ages range from 12 to 15. His work takes him out of town most of the time. I'm in love with him, and he says he thinks about me when he is gone and that I mean an awful lot to him. What should I do? UNDECIDED.

Hey there, slow down. If the man's already got a wife, he can't marry you. Anyway, why do you want the responsibility of rearing some other woman's half-grown children while Pop's away? And what about your boy? Would he be happy with this man's children? If you don't love your fiance, you'll have to tell him, and you'll be doing him no favor anyway to marry him. But think a long time before you take on a family of three teen-agers whose father is seldom around to help with their care.

Dear Martha:

● I DON'T WANT YOU to think I feel sorry for myself. I had quite a few friends but now they are all gone. My husband was sick for five years before he died and all my savings went to take care of him. I have one son whose wife is good to me. My other son's wife doesn't like me. He was my ideal and I am broken-hearted. I protested about his marriage. Now I am all alone. I do not care to go out because it takes money. Children don't care for you when you get old. I know there are many mothers like me.

CAST ASIDE.

You say one daughter-in-law is good to you, so you can enjoy her friendship even if the other one hurts you. But don't allow yourself to sit at home and brood. There are lots of places to go that don't cost money. All over town you can find clubs for single or widowed men and women, and if you'll write me personally, giving me your name and address and inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, I'll be glad to send you a list. Go out and meet new friends. Develop new interests. The organizations, sponsored by churches and such agencies as the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., will give you an opportunity to meet congenial people—and will cost you little more than street car fare.

Dear Martha:

● I AM A GIRL 22 YEARS OLD and have been steadily dating a young man for almost a year. I would like to invite him to my home for Christmas dinner with the family but my parents feel that having boy friends over for meals at any time is not proper. I was at his house once for lunch but my parents feel I should not have gone.

E.A.

There's nothing improper about inviting someone to have dinner with the family. In fact, to include your boy friend in your family Christmas celebration would be a compliment. However, some people prefer not to bring an outsider into the family circle until he actually belongs there by virtue of marriage or, at least, a formal engagement. This may be your parents' reason for objecting.

Dear Martha:

● I HAVE BEEN GOING to a beauty shop for a number of years. Since there is only person, the proprietor, who usually takes care of the patrons, I do not tip her, but at Christmas remember her with a nice gift. Now, for about four or five times, another girl has been helping her and has done a few things for me. I did not tip her as I was planning to give her a Christmas present. But if I give both gifts of the same value, the proprietor might feel hurt. Would the other be hurt if she received something less valuable? MRS. S.

If the assistant continues to serve you I would say that you should tip her and not give her a present. If she is no longer helping, I do not think she would expect any kind of Christmas gift. However, if you feel that a present is in order, it should be less elaborate and expensive than that you buy for the proprietor.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 14 YEARS OLD and have been going with the same boy for at least two years. During this time he has given me a few presents for special occasions. One of these gifts was a ring which I wear on my left hand for no reason at all. About two months ago, he said he liked another ring I wear occasionally, so I gave it to him and he wears it. One of my friends told my mother this and she now says I am going steady with this boy. Does this really mean I'm going steady just because we exchanged rings?

MARY LOUISE.

A mere exchange of rings wouldn't mean you were going steady unless you and the boy agree to that. Customs differ in different schools, too. In one, a ring may mean a promise to go steady. In another, it may be only a token of friendship and have no further significance.

Fashion Gifts That Add Glamour to Christmas

'From the Most Inexpensive Trifles to the Most Costly Purchases, the Lavish Look Is Paramount'

TRIFARI'S GOLDEN ACORN NECKLACE AND BRACELET ENSEMBLE SPARKLING WITH RHINESTONES HAS A PRECIOUS-JEWEL APPEARANCE.

A CLUTCH JACKET IN RICH-TONED MINK DESIGNED BY LEO RITTER HAS A FACE-FRAMING STANDAWAY COLLAR AND A V-SHAPED BACK.

SCHIAPARELLI'S JEWELED GLOVES ARE TYPICAL OF THE LAVISH EMPHASIS OF CHRISTMAS GIFTS. COSTUME JEWELRY REPEATS THE TREND.

AT-HOME SEPARATES BY ORI ORIGINALS COMBINE SLIM TAPERED PANTS AND TIE-ON OVERSKIRT MADE OF BROCADE.

MARIKA'S CASHMERE CARDIGAN ILLUSTRATES THE DECORATIVE VOGUE OF SWEATERS WITH WIDE SATIN RIBBON AND LEOPARD APPLIQUES.

By Sylvia Stiles

PICTURED are some of the fashion gifts that are making this Christmas shopping season not only one of the most glamorous but also one of the most expensive on record. Minks rate high in popularity even though the cost usually extends into four figures. Cashmere sweaters that are heavy with fake jewels or elaborately trimmed with ribbons and furs so that their price tags are equally impressive are high on many lists. Boudoir and at-home ensembles, always among the most wanted feminine presents, are unusually elegant because of their gilt of gold or the shimmer of satin fabrics. From the most inexpensive trifles to the most costly purchases, the lavish look is paramount.

For those who are considering furs as gifts, the designers have created some distinctive small pieces to compete with the favorite stoles, capes and jaunty jackets that represent the bulk of the demand in St. Louis. Highlighted are waistlength mink jackets to be clutched about the figure and worn primarily for late-day or evening. Some of the jackets have cuffs and collars that are convertible so that the wrap has a more tailored aspect for use with daytime costumes. New, too, are little jackets made of white sheared beaver, American broadtail and ermine. For young girls who have asked Santa Claus for a fur evening wrap to wear over their pretty holiday dance dresses, the "fake" furs look sufficiently real to please the most discriminating. White is at the top of the popularity poll for these little evening jackets as it is for muffs and hats.

Everyone from great grandmother to the smallest member of the family will have a new sweater for Christmas, judging by the vogue of knitted themes this season. Cashmere continues to be queen of the knitted world although orlon and various blends of yarns are most satisfactory substitutes for those with limited budgets or those who prefer several sweaters of moderate price to one in the higher brackets. If a jeweled or other ornamented sweater is desired and prices seem prohibitive, it isn't too late to be one's own decorator. Several little bags of "jewels" from the trimmings counter, a few yards of ribbon, and a little patience transform a conventional cardigan or slip-on into a glittering model. Fashion interest has increased in sweaters that are adorned with ribbons and furs, so again there is opportunity for individuality. A jeweled collar attached to a plan sweater also enhances its attractiveness at small, additional cost.

Fabrics rather than silhouettes may be credited with the new look to at-home fashions this holiday season. Hostess gowns made of brocades are typical of the trend. Laces that have been re-embroidered with simulated pearls and rhinestones have the elaborate appearance that is liked. Gold mesh and other metallic fabrics are used extensively in the creation of robes and separates. Tapered pants of oriental-patterned brocade woven with Lurex are among the most glittering on display. Tie-on skirts to be worn with the pants or as a tunic over a slim dress are novel and effective. The all-satin pajama ensemble is another style to consider. One model designed by Harry Berger has a long tunic top and a scarf collar. The fabric is embossed brocaded satin.

Regardless of whether the jewelry selected for gift-giving is genuine or of the "fake" jewel type, it will be massive in effect and definitely be fashioned to co-ordinate with the costume. Two trends predominate. One is the Victorian fashion which emphasizes the attractiveness of engraved gold set with colorful stones. The other is the Oriental emphasis. Large brooches that sparkle with rhinestones and simulated pearls are noteworthy. Necklaces and earrings repeat this glitter and pearl alliance. Rings feature ornate designs, lots of depth in the settings, and are unusually large. Pendant earrings and necklaces that have the golden aspect that is so popular are featured by many designers. Usually the pieces are studded with rhinestones or other glittering or colorful adornments.

Handbags, belts, collars and gloves follow the fashion for ornamentation. Shoulder shrugs made of metallic and wool yarn woven in lacy patterns are bright and festive. Caps of the metallic yarns are equally gay. Boudoir slippers combine velvet and glitter. The most striking ones add colorful beads in elaborate designs. Umbrellas, always an old "standby" as a practical gift, have a fashionable flair. One short-handled umbrella is made whimsical by the addition of a hand-made orchid. Red cobra handle and bow on case add interesting dash of color to a sleek black umbrella. It's a dress-up era and Santa is in a dress-up mood this Christmas.

'Take Your Medicine Like a Man'

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D.

I suppose it seems silly even to mention such an obvious truth: But many a bottle of medicine stands on the shelf unopened. Throughout the United States hundreds of thousands of dollars are actually thrown away by patients who pay the doctor, pay the druggist, and refrain (or forget) to take their medicine. Reasons vary.

Sometimes patients blame it on forgetfulness. One woman says: "I know I haven't got any excuse. I'm here in the house all day. There's no reason why I shouldn't take the medicine. I guess you can call it carelessness."

Here is a typical, hard-hitting business man who was literally dragged to the doctor by his wife. He has high blood pressure and has just bought some expensive anti-high blood pressure medicine. A few days go by. He hasn't even taken one pill. His wife calls up and complains. "What shall I do?" she asks. "He's stubborn. He absolutely refuses to take his medicine."

IF THE MEDICINE is a bad-tasting liquid, I suppose we have our answer. Most people will "forget" to take that kind of mixture. That goes for children and adults alike. It is for this reason that, given the choice, many physicians prescribe tasteless pills or capsules rather than liquids that patients call, "that awful stuff you prescribe."

Some persons refuse medicine because they are fatalists. "Medicine or not," they say. "If I'm destined to get well, I will." I recall many patients who don't take prescribed medicine because they think it may be injurious. It is not unusual for such patients to say, on receiving their prescriptions: "Are you sure this medicine is safe? It won't hurt me, will it?"

When you say, "Wouldn't it be unlikely for a doctor to prescribe something harmful?" they say sheepishly, "I never thought of that." Nevertheless, often their original doubt remains and they go along without taking their medicine.

SOME PATIENTS hesitate to take medicine simply because "it looks just like the pills Henry took. Henry having died, they are concerned that perhaps the medicine helped shuffle Henry off.

The other day, a patient admitted not taking Dexedrine prescribed for her weight reduction. She had heard, she said, that it caused high blood pressure.

A middle-aged woman, exceptionally edgy and nervous because of "family trouble," bought the bottle of mild sedatives which had been prescribed. She returned two weeks later, even more tense than when she first came. "Did you take your medicine?" She answered: "No, I didn't, doctor. I figured the pills might be habit forming."

There is an old joke that is apropos of this discussion. The patient, quite sick weeks earlier, returns to her doctor. "I feel fine now, doctor." The doctor, elated as most of us are when we help our patients, says "Wonderful, wonderful! I knew that medicine would help." But the patient says: "I didn't take your medicine, doctor. I lost your prescription."

Incidentally, that is another way of going without medicine—conveniently losing your prescription. If you have decided that you are not going to take the medicine, "losing the prescription" is certainly more sensible than paying for medicine you will never use. I am sure that even my pharmacist friends will agree with that.

Ideally, of course, when you consider how much it costs you for an examination—it's better to co-operate with your doctor by "taking your medicine like a man."

Draped Dresses

Draped dresses that are made of chiffon and of crepe de chine illustrate a trend toward very feminine themes. Many of these dresses have bodices extending to the hipline with drapery from shoulders to hips. Draped panels also are noteworthy as a feature of skirts. Some of the panels are caught into the hemline to suggest modified harem effect.

Rod Steiger Hopes to Look Like New Man

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10 (AP) —Rod Steiger plans to abandon his flourishing movie career for Europe, drop 20 pounds and return a new man.

What's wrong with the old one?

Nothing that Hollywood can see. An unknown a year ago, he garnered much notice and an Academy nomination as Marlon Brando's brother in "On the Waterfront." Since then he has played in "Oklahoma!" plus top roles in "The Big Knife," "The Court Martial of Billy Mitchell" and "Jubal Troop." Now he's vying with Humphrey Bogart in "The Harder They Fall."

He could keep busy indefinitely with the other offers he's had, earning well over $100,000 a year. So isn't he happy?

"No," said the brooding Steiger (rhymes with tiger). "I don't think I have fully realized my potentialities. As it is now, I can earn a comfortable living as a character actor.

"But I think I can do more than that. I'd like to do the kind of leads that Spencer Tracy did when he was a younger man.

"I believe I could do it if I dropped a few pounds. The weight is wonderful for character roles, especially some of the older men I've played (he's 30). I'm down to 200 and I've got another 20 to go.

"Of course, I'll never be a Tony Curtis, but I think I can look something like the Tracy or Jean Gabin type of leading man. That type seems more attractive to me anyway."

With six pictures behind him he plans to rest on his laurels for a spell and enjoy Europe.

SANTA, THIS IS WHAT I WANT FOR CHRISTMAS!

Whirlpool AUTOMATIC WASHER AND DRYER

Whirlpool's AUTOMATIC WASHERS HAVE 2 SEPARATE WASHING CYCLES!

Whirlpool's "SUPERSPEED" GAS DRYERS DRY CLOTHES TWICE AS FAST!

THE BIGGEST KISS ON CHRISTMAS WILL GO TO THE "SANTA" WHO GIVES HIS WIFE A WHIRLPOOL...because she knows that Whirlpool does the work of 2 separate washers and 2 separate dryers!

It's a fact! Whirlpool's 2-Action Washer does the job of 2 regular washers. The regular cycle really goes to work on everyday fabrics. And Whirlpool's 33⅓% slower, separate washing action does away with tiresome hand-laundering.

Whirlpool's Super Speed Dryer actually dries a big load of clothes as fast as you can wash them . . . what a time-saver that is. Together, Whirlpool's washer and dryer make a Christmas gift every wife would love to receive.

Lady . . . Clip this price and attach it to "Santa's List"!

Anna Magnani Gets Support on 'Oscar' Stand

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10 (INS). ANNA MAGNANI, the fiery Italian actress who flatly refused to "campaign" for an Oscar this year, got some stanch support from another Academy-Award winner — Eva Marie Saint.

"I think Miss Magnani is absolutely right," Eva Marie declared. "As much as I respect my Oscar, I certainly wouldn't do the things the studios expect you to do to win another."

Miss Magnani's studio (Paramount) requested her to attend the East and West Coast premieres of her film, "The Rose Tattoo," and a round of publicity interviews but the actress said she wanted no part of it. In a telephone conversation from Rome she said:

"Interviews with the press and public appearances would be in bad taste. An actor's work should speak for itself."

Miss Saint is an outstanding example of the merits of a dark horse. She was largely unknown by the general public when she walked out on the stage, to claim one of the acting profession's greatest honors — best supporting actress of 1954.

As Marlon Brando's girl friend in "On the Waterfront," her delicate beauty created much interest, but movie-goers had only a six months view of her.

Magnani, similarly is not as well known in this country as she is throughout the rest of the world. She is the Garbo of Italy and many other countries.

Generally conceded to be "way ahead" in the critics' poll, Magnani couldn't be less concerned. However, she very politely told a Hollywood producer. "The Academy Award is a high honor. It should not be treated as a popularity contest."

Magnani's attitude was approved by other Hollywood actresses including Bette Davis who shouted that the idea of a "campaign" for an Oscar is "shocking."

"It's against the entire concept of the awards," she said.

Hollywood's Divorce and Cupid Race

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10 (UP).

THE year's vital statistics for 1955 life in Hollywood are drawing to a close, and this time cupid and the divorce court fought to a fairly even draw.

Not one big lavish wedding kept the caterers and autograph hounds busy in the cinema city during the past 11 months. But a few quiet weddings and unscheduled elopements kept romance from being a total off-screen flop.

One of the year's biggest marriage stories came when Clark Gable and Kay Spreckels eloped in July. The bobby-soxers had to find another young bachelor idol after Rock Hudson wed the pretty secretary of his agent, Phyllis Gates.

AFTER AN ON-OFF engagement that had movie-goers either yawning or anxious, Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher finally became man and wife at a subdued ceremony in New York. And Yvonne de Carlo, one of Hollywood's last bachelor girl holdouts, finally said I do's with stunt man Robert Morgan. Jane Withers, Lucy Marlow, Colleen Miller, Sheree North, Jarma Lewis and Nancy Kelly were other 1955 brides.

Betty Hutton married record executive Alan Livingston shortly after she marched from a divorce court with a decree from dance director Charlie O'Curran.

Jack "Dragnet" Webb put down his badge to marry Dorothy Towne in January. But last month she saw her lawyers about a separation. Rita Hayworth hit headlines again when she walked out on husband No. 4, crooner Dick Haymes.

Linda Christian ended her marriage to Tyrone Power and took home a $1,000,000 settlement from the judge. Mrs. Victor Mature cornered half that amount when she was untied from the brawny actor. Mrs. Sterling Hayden and Mary Astor won divorces.

Both Edward G. Robinsons—Jr. and Sr.—saw their marriages falter, with the son's being dissolved in divorce. Separations were also admitted by Gloria Grahame and Cy Howard, the Dean Martins, Vivian Blaine, Jean Peters and Aldo Ray and Jeff Donnell.

EDDIE PEABODY, "KING OF THE BANJO," IS APPEARING AT TOWN AND COUNTRY.

Susan Strasberg, Broadway Star at 17 in First Role

By Jack Gaver

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (UP).

MISS SUSAN STRASBERG, all of 17, is the toast of the town in her first Broadway role, but no thanks to her father.

Father is Lee Strasberg, a notable stage director and teacher of acting for years. With an instructor like that, how could the girl miss?

But the point is that father has not yet given her any instruction whatever in the matter of acting. Nor has her mother, who acts now and then under the name of Paula Miller.

"They don't believe that children should be given acting lessons," explained the barely over five-foot girl with the long brown hair and heart-shaped face who has the title role in the dramatic hit, "The Diary of Anne Frank."

"Father's theory is that instruction should not start until a person is at least 18—when a fair amount of knowledge has been gained, when personality starts to take shape. When one has matured sufficiently to absorb instruction in acting.

"Father and mother were not in favor of my being a child actress at all, and I was never allowed to appear when I was real young. I'm a sort of border-line case, though, because I did have my first part when I was 15 in an off-Broadway production of 'Maya' in the summer of 1953. But it was not a childish part—I played a sort of apprentice prostitute.

"Jo Van Fleet, an actress friend of ours, was going to be in that play, and she wanted me to have this role in it. So she took my parents to lunch, and I guess she just talked faster and longer than they could. After all, it was just for a seven-day engagement. The funny thing was that Jo herself eventually didn't appear in it."

Susan did some television dramas after that from time to time as proper parts came along, and about a year after her first theater experience she was the Juliet in a TV production of "Romeo and Juliet." There followed parts in two movies, the first not very important in a film best forgotten, but the second a really big part in "Picnic," which hasn't yet been released.

6500 NEW SCOUTS ENROLLED IN DRIVE

Goal of Membership Campaign Exceeded—Began Sept. 1.

More than 6500 boys have been enrolled in Cub, Scout and Explorers units since the St. Louis Boy Scout Council began its membership campaign Sept. 1, it was announced yesterday.

The enrollment figure exceeds the campaign goal of 4500 new members. The drive will end next Thursday.

As of Nov. 30 a total of 35,665 boys and 10,345 adult leaders were registered in units under the jurisdiction of the council. Council membership at the same time last year was 32,424 boys and 9560 leaders.

Roscoe C. Hobbs, past president of the council's executive board, has been named chairman of a committee to nominate officers of the council for next year.

Others on the committee include Russell E. Gardner Jr., J. Wesley McAfee, John L. Wilson, David P. Wohl, Aloys P. Kaufmann, Joseph E. Vollmar and Louis B. Eckelkamp.

Election of officers will be conducted by mail ballot late this month or early next month, a council spokesman said.

Melvyn J. Loewenstein, a Scout and council leader for 14 years, has been appointed to the council's professional staff. He will be district executive of Ozark Trails District.

The organization and extension committee of the council, which is responsible for starting new units, will hold a victory report meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday at Central Institute for the Deaf, 818 South Kingshighway.

A total of 108 new units have been registered so far this year, including six last week. They are Pack 614, Berkeley; Neighborhood Den 376, Winfield, Mo.; Troop 374, St. Louis county; Troop 595, University City; Explorer Post 73, Lemay, and Sea Explorer Ship 571, Arnold, Mo.

Mrs. Paul Whitney, educator and youth counselor, will speak at the annual recognitions meeting for volunteer Scout leaders of West District at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Central Institute for the Deaf. She will speak on constructive leadership of youth.

Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis, will speak at a similar meeting of South District at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Wright Memorial Lodge on Beaumont Scout Reservation, U. S. Highway 66 and Antire road, St. Louis county.

The advancement committee of the council will hold its fourth quarterly dinner meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Medart's Restaurant, 7036 Clayton road, Richmond Heights.

Eagle Rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, will be awarded to eight Scouts and Explorers in ceremonies this week.

They are Donald Cotter, Post 124; Pierre Belleville and Norman Powitzky, Post 114; James Teske, and Douglas Barnes, Troop 236; John Bufe, Troop 220; and Richard Rogers and Glen Calvin, Troop 435.

Girl Scout News

Twenty-four Senior Scouts have been selected to represent the Girl Scout Council of Greater St. Louis at the first National Senior Roundup next year, it was announced yesterday.

They are Kay Ankrom, Hattie Jean Blackman, Virginia Boynton, Marjorie Brewster, Alice Calderwood, Margaret Cook, Jean Craig, Pat Curtis, Mary Duffett, Carol Ann Gebhardt, Roberta Gillon, Bonnie Heimbacker, Tamara Iribeck, Linda Lamack, Charlotte Linhart, Pat McCall, Jo Ann Moulton, Linda Shamel, Barbara Spencer, Laurel Stack, Regina Stimson, Beverly Tyler, Susie Wallace and Joyce Whalen.

The twenty-seventh annual performance of the Girl Scout Carolers will be held at 4 p.m. next Sunday at the City Art Museum. The group of 50 girls will wear fifteenth century costumes and sing familiar Christmas carols.

Miss Jean Seeger has joined the Council professional staff as a district director. She was graduated from Washington University in 1950 and taught at Palmyra (Mo.) High School from 1952 to 1954.

Miss Nancy Craig has been appointed public relations director for the council. She has been on the professional staff a year as a district director.

Intermediate Troop 924, of Three Rivers District, will camp next weekend at Camp Cedarledge, near Pevely, Mo. The group will stay in winter cabins.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF FOR LOUISIANA DOG LOVER

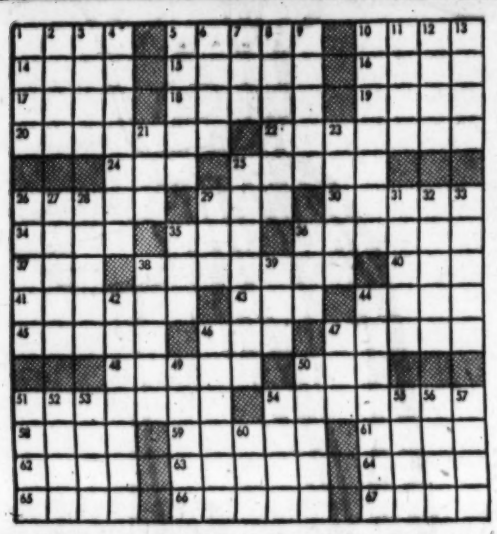

IDA, La., Dec. 10 (UP)—Mrs. Charles A. Tiesen is fed up with military maneuvers.

Mrs. Tiesen said a convoy taking soldiers away from the recently-completed Exercise Sagebrush passed her house recently, raising a great cloud of dust. When the dust settled, her cocker spaniel, "Tim," was gone.

"It wouldn't be so bad, but I lost two pedigreed dogs the same way in World War II," she said.

VANISHING RACE NOW INCREASING

Fiji Islanders, Thinned by White Man's Diseases, Making Comeback.

Copyright, 1955, The London Observer.

LONDON, Dec. 10. — With their future at stake since 1874 when they totaled only 200,000, the Fijians, who inhabit 300 islands in the southwestern Pacific, showed all the symptoms of a dying race. By 1917 their numbers had dropped to 83,000. Now, it appears, it can safely be said that the Fijians will survive.

The latest figures published by the British Colonial Office show the Fijians at the last census, taken in 1954, number 143,000. The curve of population growth is steeply on the increase.

The drama of the Fiji Islands began in the middle of the nineteenth century when the search for sandalwood brought many ships to Bua bay in Vanua Levu. For 10 years a brisk trade flourished. Deserters and shipwrecked mariners stayed on as beachcombers. New diseases, against which the islanders were not immunized, swept the islands.

In 1875 a measles epidemic killed off nearly one-third of the islands' inhabitants. Successive epidemics continued to take a toll.

Since 1917, steady efforts have been made through medical, social welfare and economic measures to arrest the Fijian death rate. These efforts are now bearing fruit, and medical opinion is that, at long last, the vital statistics of the Fijians compare favorably with those of similar races.

If conditions remain stable, it is estimated that the Fijians should pass the 250,000 mark by 1980.

'Bureaucratic Authoritarianism' Peril to Rights, Hennings Says

Cites Specific Cases Brought Out in Hearing in Which Individuals Have Suffered.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10—Recent hearings conducted by the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights have revealed that in a great many situations individuals are asked to sacrifice their constitutional rights—not on the altar of national security—but on the altar of "bureaucratic authoritarianism," Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), St. Louis, said today.

In a review of the testimony taken in 12 days of hearings by the subcommittee of which he is chairman, Hennings noted that William Rogers, deputy attorney general, had "publicly complimented" the subcommittee for its help in preventing the "misuse" by government agencies of a list of organizations which are branded subversive by the Attorney General. Alleged affiliations with the proscribed organizations has been the basis for countless actions against individuals in industry, the Government, the armed forces—and persons seeking passports—as security risks.

Highlights of Disclosures.

Some of the highlights of the subcommittee's disclosures, as developed by Hennings and Lon Hocker of St. Louis, subcommittee counsel, were cited by the Senator as follows:

The armed services have been discharging personnel with less than honorable discharges because of alleged associations as civilians by them or their relatives with organizations listed by the Attorney General as subversive, though their service records clearly entitled them to honorable discharges. (The Defense Department has taken steps to correct this situation by screening inductees prior to induction as to civilian affiliations.)

The Attorney General's list, though originally intended as a guide for the investigation of federal employes, is being used by various states and municipalities as the basis for laws disqualifying applicants for trade and professional licenses, including, in Indiana, professional boxers and wrestlers.

The State Department is abridging the constitutional right to travel for other than reasons of national security. Moreover, its passport office grants to Communists hearings on denial of passports but does not accord other citizens the same right. Linus Pauling, a world famous scientist, was denied passports for unrestricted travel abroad over a period of two years on the ground that he was a follower of the Communist party line. But when he was awarded the Nobel prize for chemistry in 1954, the State Department abruptly dropped its charges against him and granted him an unrestricted passport.

Ladejinsky Case.

Wolf Ladejinsky, dropped as a security risk by the Department of Agriculture was immediately hired by the State Department, which declared him not a security risk.

Joseph Gaberman, a scientist, was adjudged a security risk and fired as a civilian employe of the Navy. At the same time, however, he was cleared by the Navy as a security risk and retained his reserve officer's commission.

The Navy cleared Eugene Landy as a security risk and granted him a commission despite his "association" with his mother, an admitted former Comunist. But in the case of Joseph Summers Jr., the Navy ruled that his association with his parents, whose offense was membership in the Progressive (Wallace) party in 1948, made him a security risk and ineligible to hold his job as a civilian machinist.

Clifford J. Hynning, a lawyer with 15 years' Government service, was dismissed as a security risk even though he was cleared of charges of sympathetic association with Communism and subversion. He was branded a security risk because he could not recall an interview with a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent which reportedly had taken place 20 years earlier, a last-minute charge against which he had no opportunity to defend himself and which had no connection with national security.

Two Significant Facts.

"Other alarming testimony as to the far-reaching impact of the security program was provided by Philip Young, chairman of the United States Civil Service Commission," Hennings said. "That testimony developed two highly significant facts.

"The first is that the commission maintains some 2,000,000 dossiers or files of derogatory information assembled by clipping newspapers, getting names from political nominating petitions and the mailing lists of various organizations. None of the information is evaluated but such information goes into charges which may be evaluated — but without the rules of due process—at security hearings.

"However, numerous classes of persons, such as applicants for Government employment and probationary employes are not entitled to such hearings. In their cases, the question may well be raised whether the derogatory information found in the dossiers ever gets properly evaluated and whether persons in that position find themselves condemned by the mere fact that their names get into the newspapers or onto a petition.

"The other important factor developed by Young's testimony was that in compiling the figures on security risk terminations, the commission adds to the number of those dismissed as outright security risks the far greater number of those dismissed under regular civil service procedure without any charges of being a security risk or a subversive being leveled against them. This latter class, which may be called the synthetic security risks, are people who have 'derogatory information' in their files and in whose cases the head of the agency made purely mental determinations that they were, in reality, security risks."

Other Committee Findings.

It has been disclosed by the Hennings subcommittee and another headed by Senator Olin D. Johnston (Dem.), South Carolina, that of the more than 3500 government employes which the Eisenhower Administration claims it has fired as security risks under its anti-subversive program, actually only about 340 were fired under security procedures. The rest were fired for offenses against civil service regulations.

Hennings said he had asked Young to provide the legal basis he relies on in making a security risk determination without using any of the procedures for charges, hearings, suspension and termination in accordance with directives contained in a presidential order requiring this step-by-step procedure.

ANNUAL 'GRAB BAG' BRIDGE CONTESTS TO BE HELD TODAY

The bridge player who has few master points to his name will have an opportunity to play with an expert as his partner in the annual "grab bag" tournament to be held at Hotel Lenox today by the American Contract Bridge League of St. Louis.

Names of experts will be placed in one box, names of would-be life masters in another. Partners will be drawn for an open pair game to begin at 1 p.m. and a team-of-four contest at 7 p.m. Between the events the bridge league will hold its annual meeting.

All proceeds will go to the league's 1955 charity, the National Society for Crippled Children. Leo B. Weiner is contributing his services as director, and the hotel is donating the playing space.

GARNER BECOMES VOLUNTEER CIVILIAN PLANE SPOTTER

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 10 (UP)—Former Vice President John Nance Garner, who observed his eighty-seventh birthday anniversary last month, has become a volunteer civilian plane spotter in the Air Force ground observer corps. The announcement was made today by headquarters, Detachment No. 1, 4768th Ground Observer squadron, at San Antonio.

The Uvalde (Tex.) home of Garner was designated as a site for a ground observer post.

Garner, who was vice president two terms, 1932-36 and 1936-40, said "I am always glad to help my country any way I can."

ARAB ATTITUDE TOWARD ISRAEL MAY BE CHANGED

Middle East States Begin to See They Must Grant Diplomatic Recognition.

By WILLIAM J. HUMPHREYS

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

LONDON, Dec. 10—The Arab states, in spite of their continued insistence that there will be no change in their policy, are beginning to concede among themselves that eventually they will have to recognize the state of Israel diplomatically.

This development, of great importance to British-American efforts to create a conciliatory atmosphere for talks about a settlement between Israel and Egypt, was detected at the recent Baghdad Pact conference which established a Middle East treaty alliance.

Those present at the council meeting of the Baghdad Pact states—Britain, Turkey, Iraq, Iran and Pakistan—have let it be known that exchanges in the council showed one thing to be true.

Leaders of Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Iraq—the five nations which fought the Israelis in 1948—have retreated from the extremist view that Israel must be destroyed.

One reason for this is said to be the intervention in the Middle East by the Soviet Union, with a growing realization consequently that a continued influx into the area of Communist arms can only end in the recipients being reduced to the status of Russian pawns.

Those responsible for policy-making in the Arab states have not yet settled on a satisfactory way of making this view known to their peoples. But they are said to have become convinced that the existence of Israel means less of a risk than becoming pawns of Moscow would mean.

Last August Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told Israel and Egypt the United States was prepared to offer frontier guaranties if those countries could agree on where their frontiers should be.

On Nov. 8, British Prime Minister Eden urged the two sides to find a compromise between the borders fixed by the 1947 United Nations resolution for partition of Palestine and the 1949 armistice lines. The proposal brought Israel and the Arabs to a new awareness of the risks they were running by refusing a compromise settlement.

JEWISH EDUCATION BOARD DINNER WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The twenty-second annual dinner of the Board of Jewish Education, marking the close of the annual education fund appeal, will be at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the Chesed Shel Emeth Congregation banquet hall, 700 North and South boulevard, University City, president of the board Ralph Goodman said yesterday.

The fund appeal, held in 19 synagogues throughout the city during Rosh Hoshana and Yom Kippur, has netted 80 per cent of its goal, it was announced. Members who have not yet contributed were urged to do so before the end of the drive.

Principal speaker at the dinner will be Rabbi Charles Hartman, spiritual leader of the Tpheris Israel Congregation. A children's choir will sing Hebrew and Jewish melodies.

Christmas for Canine Skid Row.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (UP)—Homeless dogs forced to spend Christmas in animal shelters around Chicago are in for a surprise, if they care. A dog food manufacturer has launched a "Christmas for Canines" project and will distribute tasty snacks to the dogs who have no home to call their own.

CHRISTMAS PARTIES, PROGRAMS LISTED

1600 Residents of Infirmary to Be Guests of Junior C. of C.

Special Christmas parties for underprivileged youngsters and aged persons and a number of programs of Christmas music and stories will be presented this week.

A total of 1600 residents of the St. Louis City Infirmary, 5800 Arsenal street, will be given a party Saturday afternoon by members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. It will be the first time the group has sponsored a party there.

Actors from the showboat Golfenrod will perform "The Lure of the City" Chamber members will distribute gifts and refreshments to bedridden patients.

Santa Claus will arrive in a locomotive of Voiture 40 and 8, instead of by reindeer, at a Christmas party for 350 underprivileged children in the refectory room of Kiel Auditorium Opera House Saturday at 1 p.m.

Employes of the Army Transportation Supply and Maintenance Command will distribute gifts to the children of grade school age and under. A one hour program with singing, dancing, magic and clowning will be presented.

The tenth annual performance of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol" will be given Thursday at 8:15 p.m. at Scottish Rite Cathedral, 3637 Lindell boulevard. Dr. John J. Kessler will direct.

"The Story of Christmas" will be presented by 75 singers at Webster College auditorium, 470 East Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, at 4 p.m. today.

The Lindenwood College Choir and Orchestra and the St. Charles Male Chorus will sing at 6:30 p.m. today in the school's auditorium in St. Charles. The "Magnificat" by J. S. Bach and "Fantasia on Christmas Carols" by Ralph Vaughan Williams will highlight the program.

The Washington University choir will present two Christmas concerts this week. The first will be at the school's annual Christmas assembly at 11 a.m. Wednesday in Graham memorial Chapel. The program will be repeated in the chapel at 8:30 p.m. Thursday. The "Magnificat" of Monteverdi and Williams' "Fantasia" will be performed.

The annual Christmas Candlelight Concert by the Metropolitan Singers and 150 boy choristers from city elementary schools will be at 8 p.m. Friday in the auditorium of Third Baptist Church, 620 North Grand boulevard.

COTTON 'KNOW-HOW' KEPT FROM ETHIOPIA

U.S. Lobby Stops Point IV Display of Ways to Improve Crop.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

ADDIS ABABA, Dec. 10—The long arm of the American cotton lobby has reached half across the world to strike the Point IV program in Ethiopia.

A display of American methods of growing cotton was to have been presented at the big anniversary fair here celebrating the twenty-fifth year of the reign of Emperor Haile Selassie.

The show was arranged to instruct the Ethiopians in how to improve their small and blighted cotton crop.

Agents of American cotton interests intervened, through the Department of Commerce, and caused the exhibit to be canceled.

Their argument, as reported here, was that any attempt to improve cotton-growing methods in the rest of the world would hurt their market.

The Point IV mission here under Edward Eichholzer, has been keeping a small one-man cotton experimental station operating on the plateau at Alamata. Of this year's crop, 80 per cent was wiped out by blight.

This station has been hampered through inability to get cotton disease experts from the United States, also, it is said, because of pressure by the cotton lobby.

The Ethiopian crown prince has shown great interest in the American efforts, having moved to acquire more cotton lands to add to his already huge estates.

Cotton is the basis of the dress of the 18,000,000 Ethiopians.

GREEK GOD'S ALTAR FOUND

LOCRI, Italy, Dec. 10 (AP)—Archeologists are trying to identify a Greek god before whom eight gigantic bulls were sacrificed centuries ago.

The god's altar was unearthed in an ancient temple near this Calabrian town, once inhabited by Greek colonists. Archeologists found the bulls' skeletons around the altar—dating to the sixth century B.C.—but there was no sign of the god to whom they were sacrificed.

FIRST TIME IN 2000 YEARS
Since Demetrius, a wealthy Greek put a wooden block under his sandal to make him look taller, people have been walking on their toes. This unnatural position has made us a nation of foot-weary people. Watch old people walk. The older, the worse you walk.
Now with the cooperation of the International Shoe Co., largest in the world, Dr. Leydecker's Shoes are being made and offered to the public at a new low price, within reach of all. Clinically tested thru 20 years of research on thousands of feet.
RESULT: Dr. Leydecker's Shoes for men and women could be sold for $20 to $30 a pair . . . but Dr. Leydecker offers these shoes for the amazing low price of $7.95 to $14.95, including Men's Safety Toe Shoes.
Never before have these Basic Patented Build-up Shoes been offered to the public. You are entitled to natural comfort—you can get with these shoes—Try a pair—today.

TOTAL UNION UNDER STUDY BY LUTHERANS

Leaders of 2 Denominations to Invite 14 Others to Consider Merger.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10—Leaders of two Lutheran denominations will meet here next Friday, to issue an invitation to 14 other Lutheran bodies to explore the possibility of total union.

The invitation will be drafted by 21 representatives of the United Lutheran Church in America and the Augustana Lutheran Church.

Temporary officers will be be elected and previous approaches to union reviewed by the U.L.C.A. Special Commission on Relations and the Augustana Commission an Ecumenical Relations.

The conference will be an outgrowth of an invitation which the Rev. Dr. Franklin Clark Fry of New York, president of the 2,250,000-member United Lutheran Church, issued to the Augustana Church last March.

The invitation urged conversations on complete union providing that they be open to all of the other 14 church bodies.

Dr. Fry and the Rev. Dr. Oscar A. Benson of Minneapolis, president of the 500,000-member Augustana Church, prepared the agenda for the Chicago conference.

U.L.C.A. is the largest Lutheran group in the nation. Augustana the fifth largest.

Other churches to be invited to an all-Lutheran merger conference will probably include the 2,000,000-member Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod, the second largest—and four groups already embarked on the course of union. These four are the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Free Church and the United Evangelical Lutheran Church. They are planning to merge in 1960 as "The American Lutheran Church."

Earlier the Augustana Church declined to participate in this merger because it was not inclusive enough.

In a series of meetings here in past months, the joint union committee planning the four-way merger made these recommendations:

That the new church apply for membership in the World Council of Churches, the Lutheran World Federation, the National Lutheran Council and the Canadian Lutheran Council. (The United Evangelical and American Churches are W.C.C. members; the Evangelical and Free Churches rejected membership at their 1948 general conventions.)

That a popular opinion poll of pastors and congregations be taken to determine whether headquarters should be in Chicago or Minneapolis.

That the four churches' publishing enterprises be consolidated and a single official periodical to be called "The Lutheran Standard" be published.

That the new church adopt a budget of $12,000,000 for its first year of operation beginning Jan. 1, 1960, an increase of 16.6 per cent over the four churches' combined 1955 budgets.

Results of the headquarters poll are to be disclosed at the union committee's next meeting here March 12-13.

U.S. Display a Hit in Ethiopia.

ADDIS ABABA, Dec. 10 (AP)—Nearly 900,000 persons saw the United States exhibition at an international trade fair here. The American pavilion, where Ethiopians saw their first TV shows, won first prize for attracting the most visitors.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION OF NARCOTIC ADDICTION

A roundtable discussion of the evils of narcotic addiction will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Pine Street Y.M.C.A., 2846 Pine street, under sponsorship of the Pine Street Y.M.C.A. and Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity.

Purpose of the discussion is to acquaint the public with the dangers that accompany experimentation with narcotics, it was announced by Dr. W. A. Younge, chairman of the committee arranging the symposium. Dr. Younge, Negro physician, is also a member of the Board of Education.

INSTITUTE OF MUSIC BALL

The eighteenth annual Coronation Ball of the St. Louis Institute of Music will be held at 8:30 p.m. Thursday at Club Casino, 5355 Wilson avenue, it was announced yesterday. A student will be crowned as "Coda Queen."

MIRACLE HEARING AID INVENTED BY ENGINEER

NO CORD!

Worn Entirely in the Ear

Audiphone Company Exclusive! A completely new type of hearing device has been announced by Mr. K. A. Dahlberg, president of hearing aid manufacturing firm bearing his name.

This new "Miracle Ear" can be worn in the ear, he said. There are no cords, wires or tubes in any manner connected with the device, and the complete unit weighs less than ½ ounce.

Mr. Dahlberg added that no longer do the hard of hearing have to put up with bulky batteries or headbands. It absolutely eliminates clothing noise because there is nothing at all worn in the clothes.

It is truly a miracle ear, and for the first time true, panoramic hearing is possible, eliminating the blind spots in hearing.

Mr. Dahlberg continued that this is something for which hard-of-hearing people have waited a long time, and states that his company is proud to be the first and only company to offer this electronic miracle to the hard of hearing.

MISSOURI HOSPITAL GROUP TO MEET HERE

About 1000 Are Expected to Attend 3-Day Convention.

The annual convention of the Missouri Hospital Association will begin tomorrow at Hotel Jefferson. H. L. Burgin, associate director of Barnes Hospital and president of the association, said about 1000 persons are expected to attend.

Taking part in the convention will be hospital administrators, nursing supervisors and directors, medical record librarians, hospital accountants, auxiliary members and trustees of hospitals.

Speakers at the three-day session will include Dr. Victor B. Buhler of Kansas City, president of the Missouri State Medical Association; Dr. Albert N. Snoke, of Grace-New Haven Conn., president-elect of the American Hospital Association; and Dr. Frank Bradley, executive director of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis.

Other speakers will be Donald E. Bird, professor of communication, skills and speech, Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and executive secretary of the National Society for the Study of Communications; Miss Mary C. Schabinger, R.N., administrator, DeEtte Harrison Detweiler Memorial Hospital, Wauseon, O.; and Miss Marian Sheehan, R.N., director, division of nursing services, National League for Nursing, New York.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. tomorrow. The first meeting will be a noon luncheon, at which Dr. Buhler will speak on "Missouri's Health Needs."

Meeting simultaneously with the Missouri State Hospital Association will be the Missouri State Association of Medical Record Librarians, the Missouri State Nursing and Allied Homes Association, Missouri League for Nursing and the Women's Hospital Auxiliaries.

JEFFERSON BARRACKS CEMETERY UNIT MEETING

KING MIXES DUTY AND ARCHEOLOGY

Gustav of Sweden Travels Incognito to Various Excavations.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10—If he hadn't been born to be King of Sweden, Gustav VI Adolf might have become a famous archeologist.

Ever since he was 15 he has been searching at home and abroad for the secrets and treasures of the past. But the duties of state being what they are, he has had to be content to be a scholarly amateur in the realm of archeology and a collector of ancient and modern works of art.

As an archeologist, King Gustav visits an execavation site almost every summer, traveling incognito as "the Count of Gripsholm." Last month he visited Sicily, inspecting an old city being unearthed by an expedition from Princeton University. One of the Princeton professors directing the work is Erki Sjoqvist, former private secretary to the king.

Because of his interest in archeology, he has earned the title "Scholar King" and an honorary doctor of letters degree from Oxford University in England.

Treasure Hunter.

In accepting the degree, the king told how his initial efforts at excavation were spurred more by a teen-age spirit of treasure-hunting than by a burning thirst for knowledge.

"I blush," he recalled, "when I remember the primitive methods of my first excavation, the instruments comprising—horrible thought — a pickax and a spade. But as luck would have it, I actually found a late Iron Age burial and managed with immense pride to extricate a crude earthenware pot and a bright red bead of some vitreous material."

So began his lifelong interest in archeology. Six years later, when he enrolled at the University of Uppsala, he persuaded his advisers to allow him to deviate from the curriculum habitually laid down for a royal education and follow the first courses in archeology offered by that renowned university.

As a student prince, he talked his professor into digging into one of the numerous nearby mounds that were thought to be of little or no archeological importance.

Finds Sword, Buckle.

"But a great surprise was in store for us," the king said, "for the mound turned out to be a most important burial from the Middle Bronze Age, containing a splendid sword and imposing buckle, both overlaid with gold. Never before had a Bronze Age find, comparable in richness and importance to this one, been made so far north in Sweden."

A series of visits to Greece fed his interest.

"After visiting Greece," the king said, "and taking part in the excavation work carried out by a Swedish expedition at Asine of Homeric fame, I became keen about the idea of closely linking Swedish archeological science with international research."

Soon, he continued, Swedish institutions were set up in Rome and Athens "to bring as many individuals as possible in touch with the different aspects of classical antiquity."

500 Barracks for Bonn Army.

BONN, Dec. 10 (AP)—West Germany must build 380 barracks and refit 120 old ones for its new 500,000-man armed forces. The air force will require 80 to 100 bases, most of them newly built on requisitioned land.

HIGH SCHOOL ESSAY CONTEST ON ADVERTISING IN AMERICA

Entries for an essay contest on the subject of "An America Without Advertising," sponsored by the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis, will be received through Jan. 16 to students of public, private and parochial high schools in St. Louis and the county, it was announced yesterday by Miss Leonara M. Allen, chairman of the club's Educational Committee.

A cash prize of $100 will be awarded for the winning essay, which will be entered in the national high school essay contest sponsored by the Advertising Federation of America. Winner of that contest will receive $500 and a free trip to the Federation convention June 10-13 in Philadelphia.

JUVENILE BOOK CENSORSHIP TO BE DISCUSSED TONIGHT

Censorship of juvenile literature will be the subject of a panel discussion at Brown Hall on the Washington University campus tonight at 8 o'clock.

Speakers will be Max Dimont, writer who has made a study of this subject; Jules Henry, Washington University sociologist; William Hirsch, attorney; W. MacLean Johnson, head of the Webster Publishing Co., and Ernest Kirschten, Post-Dispatch editorial writer. A representative of the city counselor's office will explain the new municipal ordinance providing for censorship of comic books. Dr. Samuel B. Guze will act as moderator.

The discussion, which will be open to the public, is sponsored by the St. Louis Civil Liberties Committee.

CANADIAN INDIANS TO GET MORE GAINS

Ottawa Speeding Up Plans for Citizenship and Integration.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10—A still better new deal is being blueprinted for Canada's Indians, who already enjoy opportunities for citizenship and integration.

A few years ago the Indian act was revised to provide enfranchisement of Indians and the Indian affairs branch here was reorganized and put under the minister of citizenship and immigration.

At the same time governmental services to Indians were increased.

Progress has been made, Citizenship Minister John W. Pickersgill reports, but more is necessary because of Indian population growth and resultant problems.

Indian Parleys.

Pickersgill and his aids have conferred with Indians in recent months to discuss a stepped-up program for integrating Indians into the Dominion's economic and social life. A joint conference is being held here later this month to frame proposals for submission to Parliament.

Most Canadian Indians live on reserves or follow the nomadic life of trapping and hunting in the north country. Incomes available from these ways of life are declining, Pickersgill says. More Indians have to take up the white man's occupations and they need more education to fit themselves for such jobs.

One reform in the last Indian act revision was election of band councils. Pickersgill says this has worked well and Indians have shown a growing sense of responsibility.

Essentially Indians regard themselves as allies of the Queen under ancient treaties by which they surrendered the country to the white man. They are not citizens and not subject to taxation or the game laws.

Veterans' Right.

By special legislation Indians who are veterans of either of the two World Wars have the right to vote in federal elections and in some provinces all Indians may vote in provincial elections. Other Indians may be enfranchised if they voluntarily agree to give up their exemptions from the obligations of citizenship.

An increasing number of those who leave the reserves and take up life in white communities are becoming enfranchised, but Pickersgill says he would like to see this process speeded up.

$230,016 FUND GIFT FROM MONSANTO CO.

Contribution by Firm and Employes Is 19 Pct. More Than Last Year.

A contribution of $230,016 has been received by the United Fund from Monsanto Chemical Co., its officials and employes, it was announced yesterday. This gift is about 19 per cent more than that given last year.

The approximate amount of the Monsanto donation was counted earlier in the total achieved by the fund, announced at the close of the successful drive. Official amount of the gift was withheld until an extensive campaign at the company was completed. Donors included office, laboratory workers and members of the AFL International Chemical Workers' Union.

Amounts of other gifts, similarly withheld but estimated for the fund's final report, follow:

Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co., its officials and employes, $49,363, a 30 per cent increase; Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad, its officials and employes, $20,781, a 14 per cent increase; Aeronautical Chart & Information Center, $14,494, a 233 per cent increase; General Cable Corp., $8280.

Steak 'N Shake of Missouri, Inc., $783; Sheraton Hotel, $726; R. C. Can Co., $2575; The Medart Co., $945; Lever Brothers Co., $1116; Heydays Shoes Inc., $780; General Metal Products Co., $3035; Fouke Fur Co., $2927; Excelsior Leader Laundry Co., $1180, and the Automobile Club of Missouri, $3440.

Perfect Teaming!

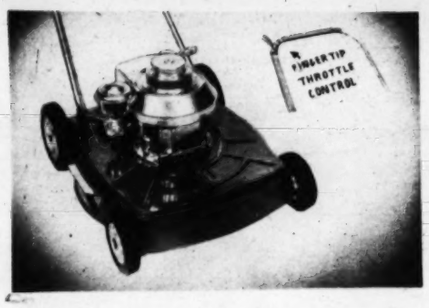

A. Beautifully fitting pettiskirt, lace banded, ending in a whoosh of net fluting that looks for all the world like costly permanent pleating. TALL or Average lengths. In Average, Star White, Red, sizes 4-7. In TALL, Star White, sizes 5-7. 3.50

B. Matching slip. Lavish fluting and wide lace bands mold the bosom and make a deep ruffle at hem. Star White, Average, length, 32-42; TALL length, 34-40. 4.95

C. A slick little brief with inserts of fluting and lace to go with all her lace trimmed slips. Star White, Red, sizes 4-7. 2.00

D. Vanity Fair Classic. The slip for stem-slim clothes. Pretty grace note in trellised bodice with its figure-making gathers. Star White, sizes 32-42. 3.95

E. Lacy Enchantment. Appliqued on, and exactly matching, a deep border of shadow lace whose beautiful alencon pattern is underscored with heavier thread. Fits to perfection. Star White, sizes 4-7. 5.95

REAL "MAMA": DELLA ANDERSON.

I'll always remember...

THE LAST FAN-LETTER

by KATHRYN FORBES

TV "MAMA," Peggy Wood (r.), poses with author Forbes — who modeled the role on her grandmother.

THE AUTHOR: Millions of Americans who see I Remember Mama on CBS-TV wonder what the real mother of writer Kathryn Forbes was like. Here is at least a partial answer.

Almost every author has at least one admirer; someone who believes whole-heartedly in one's particular talent; someone who takes time to write letters to say so.

I used to get some wonderful fan-letters.

They were from my mother.

Mother never let on about her letter-writing activity. She did not realize that, after perusal by editors and publicity departments, these letters would be delivered to me. And I never told her.

Mother, being Scandinavian, did not believe in spoiling her children with direct or frequent praise. We might become vain, she feared, or take to showing off.

But whenever a short story or a book of mine appeared, there would arrive, in time, a restrained and polite fan-letter from my mother, pointing out to the editor or publisher what a really fine story they had.

She was far too honest to write her letters anonymously. She might disguise her handwriting, but she always signed her own name.

In her quiet way, she was also quite a salesman of my wares. When Mama's Bank Account was published in 1943, my mother carried a copy of the book (title outward, so that people might see) everywhere she went. On trains, streetcars or buses, she would enter into conversation with strangers and talk about my book.

When fabulous and wonderful things happened to my book — when John van Druten made it into a play, I Remember Mama, and it became a resounding success on Broadway — my mother took it very quietly. Only I knew that the steady stream of fan-letters was still going on.

Her diligent efforts on my behalf did not cease. She even took to writing to the magazines where my stories did not appear.

When RKO made a movie of the book and play, she awaited eagerly the day I Remember Mama would premiere in San Francisco. And that was the day my mother's doctor called the family to say that she would have to go to the hospital soon. He gave us scant hope that her illness would be temporary.

I took Mother to the very first showing of the picture. I sat by her side, bereft with the secret knowledge, and tried to keep from crying.

Mother was first embarrassed by my public display of emotion, then impatient. "After all," she reminded me, "this is only a movie."

"There's talk of a television series some day," I whispered, trying to divert her attention.

But before Mama began its Friday-night stand on television, our mother had left us, as quietly and as gallantly as she had lived.

Lonely months later, in the usual batch of business mail and forwarded memos, I was to find this letter:

"Dear Sirs: I Remember Mama was a fine movie. I laughed a lot, but it made my daughter cry. I liked the book too. I like everything this author writes."

It was signed, firmly, with my mother's name. ■

A hat designer's analysis: she's a good-time Charlotte

Devil-may-care girl picks a red velvet brocaded winter sports hat with dangling tail, ermine trim. She hoots at convention, William J. says, is apt to wear this hat anywhere — even to the beach.

"HEAD HUNTER" type chooses hat that will shift attention from the gleam in her eye, according to analyzing designer. Above, the choice is an actual fox's head set on a plain brown velvet crown.

YOUR HAT IS YOU

So says this designer—who may know

NEW YORK.

On these pages is pictured the philosophy of hat designer William J. (that's his trade name): hats follow personality types. William, who runs a hat salon here, has long held that he can predict a woman's taste in millinery after a few minutes of conversation. Recently he brought in a group of models, allowed them to rummage through the shop and choose the hats they liked best. After each girl had chosen, she was told to reach inside the crown, read the slip of paper she found there. When each one read off her own name, William J. looked smug. "They can fool a psychoanalyst," he said, "but they can't fool me."

WOMAN OF THE WORLD prefers the bizarre, the strikingly dramatic or the offbeat. This sophisticated lady has picked a spray of beige vulture feathers. Other analyses by William J.: the shy female tends to select pillboxes; the hostile type, unsuitable hats.

SPENCER TRACY:

In 25 years he's made 59 pictures,

TRACY TODAY: Snapped by PARADE at Chamonix, in the French Alps, he looks every one of his 55 years. But time has not changed an essential ingredient of Tracy's great screen appeal: character.

by LLOYD SHEARER
PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

AT 55, AFTER a quarter of a century in motion pictures and top roles in some of the best films this town has ever made, Spencer Tracy remains Hollywood's least-known major star.

Currently he is beginning to slack off a bit. Having finished his 59th film, The Mountain — in which he plays the vigorous part of a French mountain climber — Tracy plans to star in one more vehicle next year, the movie version of Ernest Hemingway's The Old Man and the Sea. "And then," he says, "I'm gonna take it easy.

"Now, don't get me wrong," he quickly cautions. "I'm not retiring. The only time an actor really retires is when they don't want him any more. I don't think that's true in my case, although maybe it is. [It isn't, since Tracy recently was offered his standard fee of $250,000 per picture to star in two more, The Reminiscences of a Cowboy and Inherit the Wind]. But I don't see any point in making run-of-the-mill pictures. People can get as much of that stuff as they want on television.

"I'm not money-hungry, and what I'd like to do is make maybe one picture a year or even less. But I want the picture to be memorable, something substantial and worthwhile.

"When I get out of my Thunderbird these days, my back hurts. And it's not because of the driver's seat, either. It's because I'm not a kid any more. And if I'm going to do a picture, I want the story to be solid and meaningful and entertaining. When the public walks out of the theater where a picture of mine's been playing, I want to feel that the people have gotten their money's worth. I think they will in The Mountain."

For rugged-featured, deeply lined, white-haired Spencer Tracy to talk this extensively to a member of the press is unusual. For years screen reporters have considered him the most moody, unapproachable and uncommunicative actor in the business.

He is one player who has made a fetish of refusing to live his private life in public. How many times have you seen a photograph of Spencer Tracy and his family? How many times have you seen a photo of Spencer Tracy at home? How many times have you read a Spencer Tracy story in a movie magazine or a national magazine? What, in fact, do you know about Spencer Tracy, the man?

The chances are, very little. Proud, stubborn, changeable Irishman that he is, Tracy insists that acting is a dignified profession and steadfastly declines to lend himself to the schemes of studio publicists.

Hollywood's least-known star but even Hollywood calls him a mystery man. Here is a look at the man behind the mystery

TRACY YESTERDAY: With Loretta Young in a scene from the 1933 film, Man's Castle (Columbia), his youthful looks match the romantic mood. Then — as now — Tracy stood 5'10½", weighed about 175.

As a result, for a star of his stature, he is regarded in Hollywood as pretty much of a mystery man.

Pat O'Brien, who grew up with Tracy in Milwaukee and roomed with him in New York when both were struggling young actors, says, "The only thing I can tell you about Spence is that he's a moody, talented, unpredictable Mick who's so sentimental that he hides his sentiment under a mask of gruffness."

"The reason nobody knows too much about Tracy," adds Jim Denton, of 20th Century-Fox, "is that for an actor he's incredibly modest. He doesn't like to talk about himself. When he came over here to do Broken Lance last year, all we got out of him was a single page of copy. When you look back over the record, however, you find that the guy has won two Oscars for Captains Courageous and Boys' Town. He's also been in the first-box-office 10 for years, and he gets more fan mail than most other actors."

Generally speaking, moviegoers find a definite classification for their favorite stars. Clark Gable, for example, long has been regarded as a lover, John Wayne as an adventurer, Greer Garson as a lady of the landed gentry.

Tracy's case defies classification. When Fox signed him 25 years ago, he was considered "too unhandsome" for Romeo roles. He also was regarded as a playboy offscreen. "I used to drink in those days," Tracy admits. "But never on a picture — always between. Anyway, the big shots were worried. They fired me, but at 8 o'clock that same night my agent took me over to MGM to have a talk with Louis B. Mayer, and he signed me to a contract. I stayed with Metro until this year."

At MGM during the 1930s it was decided that Tracy lacked feminine draw. He therefore was given a series of "good-natured goof" roles in which he consistently lost the girl to Clark Gable. He also ran a race with Paul Muni in depicting real-life characters on the screen. He played Father Flanagan in Boys' Town, Edison the Man, Stanley and Livingstone and others.

The result was that movie fans could not fix Tracy in their minds' eye with a simple, clear classification. Even more confusing, during World War II the studio suddenly altered its view concerning Tracy's sex appeal. He was given romantic leads, mostly opposite Katharine Hepburn (Adam's Rib, Keeper of the Flame, Without Love). Not too surprisingly, he soared to new popularity heights.

In the 1950s, however, Tracy returned to character roles in such films as Father's Little Dividend, The Actress and Bad Day at Black Rock. So that as a movie star he still remains all things to all men.

Years ago, after discarding alcohol, Tracy took up polo. When a close friend of his, Adrian Roark, was killed playing the sport, he, too, abandoned it on the insistent advice of his studio. He next tried yachting, then gave that up also. The fact is that his prime interest in life has always been acting — he began on the New York stage in 1922 and came to Hollywood in 1930 — and he will let nothing interfere in his driving determination to give every role his best.

A few weeks ago when I walked into the bar of the Hotel del Alpes in Chamonix, a picturesque French village at the base of the Alps where the Mountain company was on location, Harry Mines, a Paramount press agent, was lecturing Tracy on the need for publicity cooperation.

"We have a still photographer," Mines stormed, "and his job is to take pictures. You won't let him, and I think that's pretty uncooperative."

"Now wait a minute," Tracy roared. "Wait one minute." He ran a hand across his weather-beaten face and downed a straight shot of — milk.

"Did you mention the word, 'job'?" he asked ominously. There was a dramatic pause, befitting a veteran actor. "Well, I've got a job, too. I've got a job to act in this picture, and I mean to do it as well as I can. I'm not going to let anyone interfere with that. I get up at 5:30 every morning, and we've got to hike up the mountain. It's 10, 12, 13 thousand feet up. How many times you been up, Harry, once?

There's a Time for Everything

"Well, the air's pretty thin up there and after you trudge for two hours, it's a little tough to breathe. I stand in the snow with a pack on my back and I try to give the scene everything I've got. I'm concentrating on the lines and the mood and the take, and then in the middle I suddenly hear camera-shutters clicking. I'm sorry but it breaks my concentration. I know that stills have to be taken but let 'em shoot a little distance away." And with that he got to his feet, smiled good-naturedly and said, "Don't make me a heavy. Let's go in and eat."

Next day Tracy spent two hours posing in the snow on the treacherous, jagged edges of Mt. Blanc. (See cover.)

"Spence will rib and ride people," Mountain director Eddie Dmytryk pointed out later. "And he'll fight like hell to maintain the quality of a picture. But I've never known him to hold a grudge against anyone. His capacity for compassion is infinite."

Compassion usually is born of personal sorrow, and

OTHER TRACYS almost never are pictured with Spencer, but here are two — brother Carroll, daughter Susan — watching as he talks with a friend on the set.

Their son's deafness taught the Tracys a lifelong understanding in Tracy's case his first sorrow occurred 30 years ago when his son John was born deaf. In turning this tragedy into a triumph, the young actor revealed a certain nobility, a grandeur of spirit that today is one of Tracy's outstanding traits. He may be moody, enigmatic, publicity-shy and seemingly far removed from reality — but let anyone around him get into trouble, and he's the first to help.

Bob Wagner, for example, the young actor who plays Tracy's kid brother in The Mountain, says: "Spence is one of the kindest guys in this business. The hints and tips he's given me, not only in this picture but in Broken Lance — it would've taken me 10 years to pick them up on my own. Why did he do it? Because I'm inexperienced and he happens to be a sweet human being."

Says Bob O'Donnell, Texas theater-circuit owner, "Tracy made a trailer for our crippled-children's fund a few years ago. Thanks to him we helped raise a million dollars. I know no other man more sensitive to the suffering of others."

At the time his son was born, Spencer Tracy was a 25-year-old actor working for the Wright Stock Company in Grand Rapids, Mich. He would commute each week between Grand Rapids and Milwaukee, where his wife was living with his parents. And he was blissfully happy.

He was married to Louise Treadwell, a strikingly beautiful actress who'd been a leading lady with the Leonard Wood Stock Company when Tracy was little more than a spear-carrier for the same outfit. The future of the young couple looked bright. When Tracy's weekly salary was raised to $125, he moved his family into an apartment hotel in Grand Rapids.

It was there one day that Louise Tracy discovered her baby was deaf. As she herself narrates the experience: "Our son Johnny was about 10 months old. He was taking his afternoon nap out on the sleeping porch, sleeping very late, when I decided to wake him. I remember that I let the screen door slam. (You remember things like that sometimes). Still Johnny didn't wake.

"I bent down beside his crib and called, 'Johnny, time to wake up.' There was no response. I moved closer and this time I fairly shouted in his ear. 'Johnny! Johnny! Wake up!' Then finally I touched him. His blue eyes opened, and he looked up at me, and I knew the truth. He was deaf.

"I had never known a deaf person, and I was scared stiff. I didn't know what

Tracy prefers not to discuss his family and worries about just one thing: his work to do, and there is nothing in the world more frightening than ignorance. I didn't tell Spence, but I took Johnny to an ear specialist in Milwaukee. He asked me a few questions, then examined the baby. He rang bells, blew whistles and used a little tuning fork. Then he turned to me and said, 'Mrs. Tracy, your child is really too young to test. Take him home, keep him well and in a few years bring him back.'

"I told the doctor that I knew John was deaf. I was sure of it. What could we do about it? That's what I wanted to know. The doctor said it was nerve deafness and there wasn't anything we could do.

"Then I asked him the one question that I had been carrying around in my heart and mind for weeks. 'Will my baby ever talk?' "

The otologist looked at Louise Tracy sadly. He explained that children learned to talk through hearing, by imitation. If John couldn't hear any sounds, it could be assumed he couldn't imitate any. So he never would learn to talk.

"For weeks," Louise Tracy recalls, "I carried that secret around with me, tight and locked up. Somehow, I couldn't bring myself to tell Spence. I struggled on from day to day feeling helpless and lost.

"Finally, Spence came home one day. 'For goodness' sake,' he demanded. 'What's the matter with you, Louise? You've been acting so strange lately.' I told him Johnny was deaf.

"I'll never forget his reaction. He slumped into a chair. He buried his face in his hands. His body was racked with sighs. Watching him sit there in anguish, I felt my heart would break. I tried to get through to him, tried to tell him how much more we could mean to Johnny because of his deafness.

"After a while Spence got up. It was a Sunday. 'Louise,' he said. 'Get a baby-sitter. We're going out to the carnival tonight. We're not going to let this get us down ever.' "

And it never has — partly because that first doctor was wrong on one point.

When Johnny was 21 months old, Mrs. Tracy took him to a well-known New York otologist. The doctor tested the child and said, "Your boy is totally deaf and there's nothing I can do about it. But there's plenty you can do. Your child can learn to lip-read. He can learn to talk. He can do almost anything that a hearing person can do, but you and your husband have a job to do."

The Tracys accepted the challenge. It took time, money, patience, years of effort and experiment. But today their son John is a happily married man of 30. Having learned to lip-read, he was graduated from Pasadena Junior College and now talks, understands, works as a cartoonist and lives a normal life in suburban Westwood with his charming wife and 3-year-old boy, Joseph Spencer Tracy.

So that other parents of deaf children might learn from her experience in raising and training her son, Mrs. Tracy founded the John Tracy Clinic in Los Angeles 13 years ago. The first free clinic of its kind in the world, it has helped set thousands of deaf children on the path to speech. The funds to get started were donated by Spencer Tracy, who insists that he's had virtually nothing to do with the now world-famous institution.

'Keep Me Out of It'

"The whole thing," he claims, "was Louise's idea. She's the woman who's devoted her life to the project. If there's any credit coming, it's hers. Keep me out of it."

Three years ago, after Mrs. Tracy had been awarded honorary degrees by the University of Southern California and Northwestern University, her actor husband was called upon to say a few words at the opening of the clinic's new headquarters on Los Angeles' Adams Boulevard.

"Despite its great fame and following," Tracy began, "there is nothing Hollywood has done or ever will do which exceeds the contribution Louise has made to the welfare of so many children."

Then he stepped down, walked over to his wife and proudly kissed her.

The Tracys have another child, Susan, 22, who is taking vocal lessons and hopes to become a singer. But of Susie, like the other members of his immediate family, Tracy dislikes to talk.

"It's one of my peculiarities," he affirmed some time ago, "that I won't talk about my family. An actor gets little enough privacy as is. The life I live at home I try to keep entirely separate from my work. I think I'm entitled to do so. It's the only opportunity I have to forget shop completely. I don't think that's being snooty. It's a practical way of preserving something that I don't want spoiled."

According to newsmen, it's a practical way of becoming a male Greta Garbo. But Tracy never has concerned himself with the diatribes of reporters. "The only thing that worries him," declares his brother and business manager, Carroll, "is his work. About that he is Hollywood's No. 1 worry-wart. In fact, if he isn't worrying, he isn't happy. Twenty-five years ago his wife wrote her sister that Spence didn't photograph too well and there wasn't much of a chance that he'd ever become a success on the screen. Spence is still worried that Louise may have been right." ■

NEXT WEEK: The second part of Lloyd Shearer's article tells how a young New York piano salesman named Tracy became one of Hollywood's all-time top stars.

UP IN THE ALPS during filming of The Mountain, bereted Tracy chats between "takes" with Robert Wagner (his screen brother), Barbara Darrow and Anna Kashfi.

'COMING OF AGE' IN THREE FAITHS — NO. 2

▲"I ACCEPT YOU"

Standing before the Ark and under the Eternal Light, Rabbi Zion of Denver's Temple Emanuel places hands on Mark Horwich's head in blessing. Gesture recalls Confirmation ceremony in other faiths.

"TO BE WORTHY"▶

Addressing Congregation packed into Temple, Mark says: "I will try with all my heart and soul to be worthy." This climaxes his speech of thanks (which Mark wrote) to Rabbi, teacher, family and friends.

TORAH, the sacred parchment scroll, is handed to Mark by his father (not shown). This act symbolizes passing down of ancient Jewish laws — as set forth in the five books of Moses — from father to son.

A JEWISH BOY BECOMES A MAN

by KARL KOHRS and CAL BERNSTEIN

DENVER, COLO.

Judaism, oldest of the major faiths followed today in the U.S., is a religion of ceremonial rituals steeped in tradition and — to many Americans — somewhat enigmatic. It traces its beginnings back to Abraham, mentioned in Genesis, who is considered its founder. Through the ensuing centuries, Judaism has flourished as the fountainhead of faith that still inspires an estimated 5,500,000 Jews in the United States.

In modern times, two different forms of worship have evolved from the Orthodox: the Conservative and the Reform. Yet, whatever their differences, Jews today still hand down their ancient faith in the ancient way — from father to son. They accept each new generation into the Congregation when, in the time-honored tradition, it is ready to "come of age."

This "coming of age" is Bar Mitzvah, one of the most im-

A book and a drop of honey were Mark's introduction to the faith of his ancestors when he was only 5 years old portant ceremonials held in the synagogue. It is a rite participated in only by males, and is usually on the first Saturday after a boy has reached the age of 13. Marking his entry into the Congregation as a full-fledged member, in essence it is another form of a dramatic experience common to children of all faiths: Confirmation. (Today the analogy is even closer: In some Reform synagogues boys may continue their religious training in post-Bar Mitzvah classes, which also include girls. On completion of Sunday School there at age 15 or 16, both boys and girls may be confirmed in the Temple.)

As we know it today, the Bar Mitzvah — literally, "Son of the Commandment" — can be traced back only about 700 years. But the age of 13 seems to have significance reaching into earliest Jewish history. Tradition declares, for example, that Abraham rejected the idolatry of his father, Terah, and became a worshiper of God at 13. Esau and Jacob went to school together until they were 13, then went their separate ways — Jacob to the "house of the law," Esau to the "house of idols." Levi, son of Jacob, was called a man at the age of 13.

Such, briefly, is the background of the ceremony in which a Jewish boy becomes a man. Today PARADE records the Bar Mitzvah of Mark Horwich of Denver, held here recently in Temple Emanuel (a Reform synagogue).

Mark actually began preparing for the event when he was only 5 years old. The son of Herman Horwich, a business executive and civic leader, he received his first instruction when Manuel Breslaw, venerable Jewish scholar, came to Mark's home to start teaching him Hebrew.

Breslaw brought with him a Hebrew primer, placed a drop of honey on the first page and told Mark to kiss it. Then he said: "This pleasant association of the taste of honey with the learning of Hebrew should last you through life."

AT PARTY following his Bar Mitzvah, Mark is the center of attention. Some 225 guests attended traditional celebration.

FRIENDS congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Horwich (r.) at reception. This windup to Bar Mitzvah began in days when father called in his friends to hear his son read from the Torah.

Mark studied Hebrew for eight years. In weekly lessons Breslaw taught him not only the language but the customs and traditions of his people. Together they talked about the history of the Jews, the significance of Jewish holidays and — most important of all — the measure of responsibility Mark would some day assume as a Jew.

His years of preparation were climaxed with the study of the Torah, the ancient book of Hebrew law. The Torah, which contains the five books of Moses — the Pentateuch — includes the fundamental history and philosophy of Jewish life and the 613 laws governing religious Jews.

Revelation vs. Inspiration

Orthodox Judaism believes that the Torah is a revelation from God. Consequently, all its laws and precepts must be followed exactly. Reform Judaism believes that its faith is the sum of the religious experience of the Jewish people, and that the Torah was written by men inspired by God. Accordingly, even the traditional observance may be changed to reflect the modern world.

The service performed at Temple Emanuel was patterned after that of the Orthodox tradition, except that in the latter the men would wear the traditional skull cap, the tallith (white prayer shawl), and the tefillin or phylacteries (little black boxes strapped on the left arm and forehead) while reciting weekday morning prayers. The last may be considered symbolic of the way Jews are bound by the laws of their faith.

Temple Emanuel, oldest and largest Jewish Congregation in Colorado, was founded one year before Colorado became a state. It has a membership of 950 families and an enrollment of 750 children in its Sunday School. Its leader is Rabbi Joel Zion, one of more than 700 Reform rabbis in the U.S. There are also more than 1,000 Orthodox rabbis and about 600 Conservative.

But tradition held sway for the most part at Mark's Bar Mitzvah. This was the day when his father would stand up in the Synagogue before the Congregation and announce the Baruch Shepetarani, the Benediction: "Blessed be He Who has freed me from being responsible for this young man's conduct."

Henceforth, according to the ancient tradition, Mark's sins no longer were on his father's shoulders, and he no longer would benefit from his father's virtues. After the day of his Bar Mitzvah, Mark himself would be accountable for his own vows and, in the eyes of God, would participate fully in the Jewish community. He would be accepted as a member of the Congregation and counted in the Minyan (quorum) required for Congregational worship. He would be expected to obey the laws of the Jews, contribute to charity and accept the communal and personal responsibility of Judaism.

On the morning of the ceremony, Mark dressed in his new Bar Mitzvah suit, took his place at the altar at the beginning of the regular Sabbath service. With him were Rabbi Zion, an assistant rabbi and Mark's father.

The service opened traditionally with the Benediction and a hymn led by the boys' choir. Regular responsive readings followed; as Temple Emanuel is Reform, most of the service was in English. When the choir had finished another hymn, Mark moved into his rehearsed position between Rabbi Zion and his father, facing the sacred Ark in which the Torah rests.

Then the Bar Mitzvah (the term means the boy as well as the ceremony) listened as Rabbi Zion intoned the opening words:

"You are now ready to take your place in your responsibilities as a Jew. May you do so with dignity and honor . . . May the Lord bless thee and keep thee. May the Lord let His countenance shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee. May the Lord lift up His countenance to thee and grant thee peace."

Half-frightened, his knees shaking a bit, Mark tried hard to act as responsible and adult as the Congregation expected him to. All morning he had bucked up his courage by promising himself he wouldn't be nervous. After all, he had rehearsed his speech a thousand times, studied for two months the passage he was to read from the Torah.

Everything was very quiet. To his own surprise, Mark now felt confident and unafraid. As the Rabbi removed one of the three Toraha, Mark waited for his father to reach for the scroll and hand it on to him. This is the symbol of the passing of the law through generations from father to son.

PRESENTS, combined for Mark's birthday and Bar Mitzvah, included globe, radio, sporting equipment, cameras and books. There were several duplicates.

Reading of ancient law in the Torah is high point of ceremony

In the next moment, the Bar Mitzvah, holding the sacred object in both hands, was facing his Congregation. To the accompaniment of sonorous chords from the organ, Mark moved exactly as he had practiced so many times. Now he was standing next to the gowned Rabbi, waiting for him to open the scroll and indicate where Mark was to read.

As Rabbi Zion moved a pointer to guide his reading, Mark recited the portion of the Torah dealing with the kindling of the Eternal Light, which symbolizes the eternal Spirit of God. Then he read and translated a passage from the Haftarah (the Prophets), read during each service as a supplement to the Torah.

Then for Mark came another crowning moment — the Derashah, or address to the Congregation in which he formally accepted his responsibilities. In it he also thanked all who had helped him accomplish his Bar Mitzvah. Part of his oration ran: "My dear parents, relatives, friends and teachers. I shall try with all my heart and soul to be worthy of all and to live in the spirit of Scriptural admonition . . . and to apply the teachings of the Torah to my entire life. Amen."

And to Mother, Dad and Sister listening proudly before him, that was the finest speech ever made anywhere by anyone.

The hour-long service was concluded with a sermon by Rabbi Zion based on a portion of the Torah Mark had read. He told his audience that this particular scroll was more than 100 years old. It had been used in a synagogue in Germany and had been partially destroyed by the Nazis. Restored, it had been bought by Temple Emanuel and placed in the Ark with the other two Torahs. Said Rabbi Zion: "This restored Torah represents the immortality of learning. Let it be the symbol of the everlasting life of Judaism."

After the service, Mark's family, relatives and friends rushed up to congratulate him on his speech and wish him Shabbat Shalom (peaceful Sabbath) and Mazel Tov (good luck). Then 200 or more relatives and friends, some from more than 1,000 miles away, joined the family for the traditional feast and celebration — Se'udah.

Everyone, of course, brought Mark combination Bar Mitzvah and birthday presents, as is the custom. They included every kind of gift a boy could wish for. From Rabbi Zion came a beautiful gilt-edged Bible. And tucked away among the larger gifts was a small one with a significance all its own to a young man on the threshold of maturity: a shiny electric razor. ■

TEACHER Breslaw, in shawl and cap, shows Mark how to put on phylacteries, boxes containing prayers used at morning worship.

Teen-age Topics

Jealousy is a normal emotion, but when it is excessive the result is unhappiness for all concerned. Here are some letters on the subject.

Q. I am 13, and a boy I like who is 15 visits me often. When I am with him he always talks of other girls to make me jealous. He asks me to go to dances and football games, but in a joking way. I refuse because I think he might "stand me up." — S.T., Bethlehem, Pa.

A. I would say that he had made you jealous. His teasing, which you probably enjoy, may be of the variety that brothers reserve for their kid sisters. His invitations probably are not sincere, but he may be telling you in his own way that when you are older he'd like to take you out.

Q. Each time my boy friend brings me home, he says, "I am sorry I ruined your evening." I really enjoy myself until he says this. He also thinks that, because he doesn't have the money to take me to expensive places, he doesn't do enough for me. — A.R., Washington, D.C.

A. It's sad for a teenager to have the habit of self-pity. All I can suggest is that you build up his feeling of importance. Tell him politely and firmly that you did have a good time and let it go at that. If he persists in being a spoilsport, go out more with other boys. Some people are afraid to enjoy life — and therefore never do. ■

Whooping cranes: About 30 remain of once-large flocks. One reason: hunters

Vanishing Americans

Like the passenger pigeon and heath hen, these animals may disappear—unless man helps them

DESERT FOX: Civilization's advance in the Southwest may well have doomed this shy, big-eared, largely nocturnal creature. But recent checkups hint that it is holding its ground.

LONGHORN COW: Victim of man's insatiable appetite — and of breeding for better beef cattle — this animal has won a respite. From one herd of 30, longhorns have increased to 500.

TRUMPETER SWANS: Hunted without mercy, the species was thought extinct in the early 1900s. Then a few survivors were found in Montana. The chicks sold well to zoos, so local folk ruled out hunters. By now, with trapping and killing outlawed, U.S. has 650 trumpeters.

on their Arctic-to-Texas flyway mistake the 5′ birds for geese.

One day soon you may pick up your newspaper and read that the last whooping crane (above) or key deer (right) is dead. If so, blame man. It was man who killed off the passenger pigeon, heath hen and ivory-billed woodpecker; who slaughtered the sea otter, gray whale, longhorn cow and trumpeter swan to the edge of extinction; who, unchecked, might well wipe the whole U. S. clean of wildlife.

Luckily, man also knows how to conserve if he must. Led by the Government's Fish and Wildlife Service, thoughtful sportsmen at last are protecting whole species and marking their breeding and feeding areas off-limits. Result: at least a partial comeback for the grizzly bear, moose, bison and bighorn sheep. But for most of the animals pictured here — along with the prairie chicken, condor and even the symbolic bald eagle — such efforts may prove too little and too late. ■

KEY DEER: Collie-sized, they live only on Florida keys; hunters have reduced them to about 90 individuals. Unless they increase to at least 200, species is doomed.

Brazil nut plum pudding

This new version of an old favorite is rich with fruits and nuts — but easy to make

Fourteen days to Christmas! Two short weeks to wind up shopping, wrapping, mailing and planning the holiday feast. To help you with this last, but so important detail, here is the recipe for a superb dessert. It's traditional — yet so new! You can stretch the preparation over two days, if you like. On the first day cut up the fruits, combine with the orange juice, cover, store in the refrigerator; grind the Brazil nuts and suet; mix and sift the dry ingredients. On the second day, mix and steam. Rewarm to serve.

BRAZIL NUT PLUM PUDDING

- ¾ cup orange juice
- ¾ cup seedless raisins
- ½ lb. pitted dates, cut up
- ½ cup finely cut citron
- 2 apples, pealed and chopped
- 1½ tablespoons grated orange peel
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- ¾ cup molasses
- 1½ cups ground Brazil nuts
- ¾ cup (3 oz.) ground suet
- 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons dry bread crumbs
- ¾ cup sifted, enriched flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon baking soda
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- ¾ teaspoon each, salt and cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon each, allspice and ground cloves

Pour orange juice over raisins, dates, citron, apple and orange peel; let stand 1 hour. Combine eggs and molasses; stir in Brazil nuts, suet and bread crumbs. Mix and sift remaining ingredients; sift into egg mixture; blend well. Add fruit mixture; mix well. Turn into a greased 2¼-qt. pudding mold with tight-fitting cover (or cover with aluminum foil and tie securely). Place on rack in deep kettle; pour in boiling water to half the depth of the mold. Cover; steam 5 hours, adding more boiling water during steaming if necessary. Serve warm with whipped cream-in-a-can or hard sauce.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

KITCHEN HINT

For successful steaming, cover mold tightly; use a rack; be sure water reaches half-way up mold; cover kettle; keep water boiling for entire time.

ROCKY MARCIANO'S MOTHER PRAYS...

"I think God was very good to us," she says, "and I always pray that Rocky will do the right thing."

The heavyweight champ's mother urges:

'QUIT NOW,

BROCKTON, MASS.

After my son Rocky beat Archie Moore in their fight this fall, lots of people asked me: "When is Rocky going to retire?" I don't know the answer, because I never ask Rocky what his plans are. But I wish Rocky would quit. I wish he would quit right now.

Sure I'm proud and happy that he is champion, and I thank God all the time. But I worry about him; now that he is champion, Rocky looks older than his 31 years. There is a great strain on him. Today he is here, then tomorrow he is in some place like California. Rocky never says anything, but I know he feels a big responsibility about being the champion, and he worries that he will do right.

Also there is always a lot of people who bother him. He always has to do favors. He never can stay with his family. He can't lead his own life. He can't stay at home and see his baby growing up.

I want Rocky to quit because I worry about the people he meets in the fight business. I fear that all they do is just take money from my Rocky. They need him to make money and they might do bad things to get more money. I worry that they won't let him quit. I just hope they won't take advantage of my son.

Since Rocky has been the champion, there has been a great strain on our whole family. The door to my house is always open to anybody who comes to see him or ask about him. Some days I'm busy all day with people calling on the phone, ringing the bell, and always asking questions. I know that if I don't answer them, people will say bad things about Rocky and his family. We never turn anybody away from the door, but it's a big strain trying to be nice all day and all night. Even when the phone rings in the middle of the night, or early in the morning, you've got to be smiling and pleasant.

It's wonderful to meet nice people, but you must have your own life too. Some days I feel like my husband and I are in a window. It's the same thing for Rocky and his wife, Barbara.

Don't misunderstand. I don't want Rocky to quit because I'm worried about him getting hurt in the ring. Really, even deep down in my heart, I don't worry. I am confident that he can fight without getting seriously hurt. He has won so many fights that I am sure nothing will happen to him while he is fighting. But it is the terrible life he has to lead outside the ring — as long as he is champion — that makes me wish Rocky would quit.

A lot of people think Rocky keeps on fighting because we need the money. It's not true; from the day my husband came back from World War I, he always had a good job in the shoe factory here. We owned our own house on Brook Street, where all my children — Rocco, Louis, Alice, Connie, Betty and Peter — were born.

'I just hope I'll be able to help him learn how wonderful it is to raise a family'

TOGETHER for rare visit at training camp — Barbara is usually barred — Marcianos watch daughter Mary Ann, 2½, munch dad's birthday cake.

My first child died at birth; a year later I had Rocco. Then every two years like clockwork I had a baby, until Peter came 14 years ago.

I knew all the time in my heart that Rocky would be something. I love all my children the same, but Rocky is my first, and a mother has a certain feeling about the first boy.

Rocky could have been a success in almost anything because he always thought big. He was never satisfied with small things. He started fighting while he was in the Army during World War II, and of course I didn't know anything about it. If he had been home, he would never have started. I would have been after him to stay away from it, and he would have listened to me.

When he came home and started to fight in the amateurs, I saw that was what he wanted to do, so I didn't say anything. But I prayed: "God, if that is what he wants, please take care of him."

In the beginning, lots of people discouraged me. They told me that Rocky was no good — that he would get a bad beating. I wouldn't say anything to him — he had to live his own life — but I would pray. Of course I didn't know much about fighting, and never did I think my boy would become so big a fighter.

But now that he has done what he wanted — now that he is champion — I must say to him what is in my heart: Rocky, God has listened to my prayers, for He has been very good to us. But now I think you should retire. You have won enough.

Rocky knows how I feel and he is always telling me: "Ma, you just take it easy and be quiet." He always wants me not to be nervous.

On the day that he fights, though, I think he is the only member of our family who is not nervous. He never asks me to see him fight, and I never want to go. Other people in the family go, and though they don't tell Rocky, they are all nervous.

I always go to church with a friend of mine on the day Rocky fights. She's a lady I've known for a long time. After church we go back to her house — just the two of us. This lady is a good friend, but I never tell anybody who she is so that there won't be telephone calls and telegrams and everything.

When we get to her house, she turns the clock back so I don't know what time it is. I know that she turns the clock back, but I never say anything. I like this because when the clock shows that Rocky is stepping into the ring, the fight actually may be all over.

We usually sit and watch television — anything but the fight. My friend keeps sneaking in to her radio to find out what's happening. Then, when it's all over, I go home. Most of the time I don't even know what I saw on the television.

It's Hard on Brothers

A lot of people think I am foolish for wanting Rocky to retire. They say it will be easier for his brothers to become somebody. They are wrong; it will be harder. Everybody will expect them to become champions in whatever they do. But maybe they won't have the same luck that Rocky had. Also, they won't let Rocky do anything for them because he is the champion. But if he weren't, I think maybe then they would let him help.

Some of my friends tell me I should be happy that Rocky is champion, because I go to a lot of nice places and meet a lot of famous people. It is true that my husband and I do get to travel a lot, but what I enjoy best is going to Rocky's training camp at Grossinger, N. Y. — especially a few months before the fight, when Rocky has time to be with us. Up there I can enjoy the good food, the healthy air of the mountains. I read and write, and just take it easy.

That, and meeting wonderful people, is about the only real happiness I have gotten out of Rocky being champion. I will always be proud that I met Cardinal Spellman and the Pope. Charlie Goldman, who is Rocky's trainer, will always be one of my best friends; he has been a wonderful friend to my Rocky. And then there is Jennie Grossinger and Perry Como — he is a fine boy.

I love meeting new people, for this is the way I try to help Rocky. I like to meet all the people who are interested in him. Sometimes it's a little too much. I'm not too well any more, and people are always asking me to go here and go there.

Don't misunderstand: I love company and parties. But now there are so many. Sometimes the house is filled with people I don't even know.

Some of these people are phony. (and I think some of the men who hang around Rocky's training camp are bad men), but most of them are very nice. Yet sometimes I wish I had met only a few of them, so I could keep them for friends. And now I almost wish I wouldn't meet any more people so I could get to know better the ones I've already met.

Old Friends Lost

But though Rocky's fighting has made many new friends for us, it has also lost us some of our very old and dear friends in Brockton. Unfortunately, I do not have as much time as before to see them, and they try not to bother me. This has made me very sad. I think that if Rocky were no longer the champion, we would have more time to be with these old friends.

But there are bigger reasons why I wish Rocky would not fight any more. There is my boy Connie, who's in the Army now. If Rocky were not fighting, I do not think Connie would take it up. I don't want him — or any of my other sons — to fight. I say to them: "If you do that to me, then you have no heart for your mother."

My youngest boy, Peter, is now on the football team at Brockton High School. Football is all right, but I like baseball best for my sons. Both Connie and Peter like baseball, and I am glad. But I want them to learn a lot of things, not just sports. It's nice to have a talent for sports, but when you reach 30 or 35 you must be able to do other things.

If Rocky doesn't stop fighting soon, I'm afraid it will be harder for him to lead a natural life later on. He will sit home and say to himself: "I could be here or I could be there." I just hope he has not forgotten how to take it easy. I just hope I'll be able to help him learn how wonderful it is to stay home and raise a family.

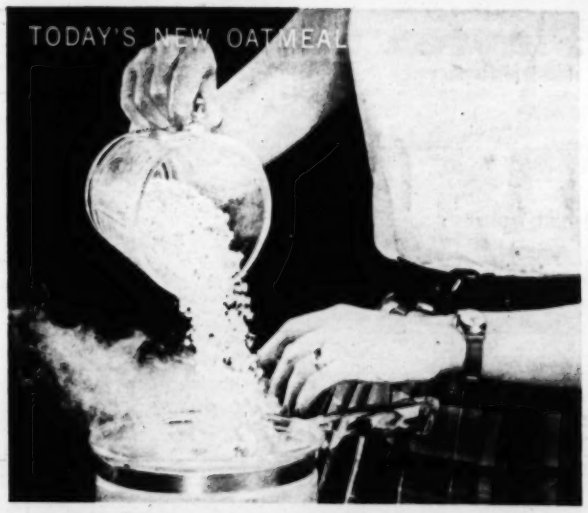

I would like him to go into business when he leaves the ring. But I don't care what he does, just as long as he stops fighting. That would make me the happiest woman in the world. ■

MARCHEGIANOS and famous son: He dropped "heg" from name after entering ring.

Quaker develops new oatmeal that cooks completely in just one minute

NEW PRODUCT TASTES SMOOTHER, CREAMIER...AND ITS HIGH-PROTEIN CONTENT CAN HELP YOU CONTROL YOUR WEIGHT

QUICK AS COFFEE—that's today's new oatmeal. Cooking time has been cut to just 50-60 seconds with the new Quick Quaker Oats. The pan cleans instantly, too . . . without scouring.

ESPECIALLY APPEALING TO CHILDREN is the extra creaminess and smoothness of the new oatmeal. The oat flakes have simply been rolled thinner for quicker cooking. All the nourishment of oatmeal, all the traditional oatmeal flavor, is there.

PROTEIN IS A KEY to weight control. Today's high-protein oatmeal has a very special significance for those who want to gain weight . . . or lose it. It is the fundamental "must" for building up strong bodies, good red blood. At the same time, a diet high in protein is essential for those who need to lose weight. Protein raises the blood-sugar level, helps keep appetite inactive. It cuts down hunger—while supplying needed strength and energy.

YOUR WEIGHT-CONTROL PROBLEM—either kind—can be helped by the high-protein content of new Quick Quaker Oats.

For those who prefer the taste and the texture of old-style oatmeal, Old Fashioned Quaker Oats cooks in a mere 5 minutes.

ALL-MORNING ENERGY, for work or play is provided by a single bowl of hot, creamy oatmeal. Oatmeal supplies more stamina, more energy than any other whole-grain cereal . . . and a serving of Quaker Oats costs about 1¢.

PAN RINSES INSTANTLY when oatmeal is prepared properly. Just keep pan tightly covered, before and after serving, until ready to wash. It will rinse clean, without scouring.

WEIGHT-CONTROL SECRET is food high in protein to curb appetite, maintain stamina. And oatmeal supplies far more protein than any other leading cereal. Bowl of oatmeal with sugar and milk included, contains only 210 calories . . . yet supplies 9 grams of protein.

How to make your turkey tastier

Shake plenty of Ac'cent in the cavity and on the bird before roasting to bring out all the fine, natural flavor of turkey! Add some Ac'cent to dressing and gravy, too, to boost and blend all the flavors. If you don't notice a definite flavor improvement, you aren't using enough Ac'cent.

Ac'cent makes all foods . . . vegetables . . . meats . . . poultry . . . seafood . . . soups . . . salads . . . gravies . . . taste better. Ac'cent is the only widely available brand of pure monosodium glutamate . . . the only seasoning that brings out and restores natural food flavors.

Be sure to use enough Ac'cent to taste the flavor improvement.

It is so easy to use . . . simply shake it on like salt and pepper . . . when you cook, or at the table.

It's a favorite seasoning of chefs, dietitians, gourmets.

PHENIX CITY, ALA. —one year later

The rackets are gone, and in their place is new-found pride

by ROBERT W. BROWN

Editor, The Columbus (Ga.) Ledger; 1954 Pulitzer Prize winner for his articles exposing vice and corruption in Phenix City.

1954: Reformers Hugh Bentley (l.) and son were beaten by gangland thugs at polling place.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A year ago, PARADE reported on Phenix City, Ala., just after the town's decent element had defied bombings and murders to shatter longtime gangster domination. Then the city's red-light district was shuttered, its gambling dens closed. But would the cleanup take? To find out, PARADE asked Robert W. Brown, author of last year's article, to check on the "new look."

PHENIX CITY, ALA.

Once it was one of the most notorious buildings in this notorious "Sin City of the South." The second floor housed a $1,000-a-day numbers racket; downstairs, a gambling den flourished and prostitutes congregated.

When you visit it today, you find a silent, deserted second floor. The first floor still rocks with merriment — of a different sort. Children sing and play youngsters' games. This is St. Patrick's Catholic Youth Center, symbol of the New Phenix City, 1955 model — a cleaned-up city with recharged civic pride.

"There's a new spirit here now," explains Ed Seymour, a merchant and pre-cleanup member of the reform group. "In the past, a person from Phenix City registering in an out-of-town hotel would give Columbus, Ga., as his address. Now he puts it down like it is — Phenix City, Ala."

True, it took an unprecedented crime offensive by the State of Alabama to clean up the town and revive civic pride last year. Gangsterism was broken up by martial rule and wholesale fines and imprisonments by outside enforcement and a special judiciary. But the townspeople have not only kept the community clean, they have made it sparkle. Their story teaches a lesson for all towns.

This fall Phenix City registered the largest vote ever cast in a single-seat election for the City Commission. In reelecting a reform commissioner, the voters endorsed higher taxes and a stricter policy on liquor licenses. To replace the revenue that formerly came from the dives, directly or indirectly, the new commission levied a $1-a-month garbage collection tax and a $5-a-year motor vehicle license fee.

BROMO QUININE

1955: New billboards proudly proclaim Phenix City's advantages, urge new industries to locate in reborn town. Merchants report sales are up since customers no longer spend money on vice.

There have been few complaints, and at least part of the citizenry has welcomed the new taxes. In the recent election campaign, a candidate reminded Negro voters that the two new levies added $17 a year to their tax bills. One man told him in reply, "We can remember when 'the law' would come around once or twice a year and we'd have to pay $50 or so whether we'd done anything or not. It's cheaper this way."

The new taxes and the air of reform that went with them have brought many changes to Phenix City. Here are some of the projects begun in the past year: a new $15,000 fire station; a $750,000 expansion of the water system; a new minimum housing code; a downtown slum-clearance and redevelopment program; a sanitary land-fill system of garbage disposal; an enlarged police force; a pay increase for sheriff's deputies; a $750,000 hospital addition; a refurbished municipal amusement park, and a new 79-acre recreation park.

Then there have been other changes. A Kiwanis club has been organized; a new weekly newspaper has been launched. A "Committee of 200," including some members from Columbus, has been organized to boost the area's potential. Retail sales are up; so is home building; so are church and Sunday School membership and attendance.

People Are Moving IN

But the biggest changes have been those of attitude. For the first time in years, people from surrounding towns in Georgia and Alabama are moving into Phenix City. An Alabaman who formerly commuted 56 miles a day rather than live in "Sin City" now owns a home overlooking the Chattahoochee River. So does Columbus newspaper cartoonist Marvin Zukerman, whose acid cartoons had helped to expose racket domination of the town. "It's cleaner than Columbus now, and the view I have of the valley is breathtaking," Zukerman says.

Phenix City is clean. "There is an occasional fight, and we go out and raid a still once in a while," says Sheriff Lamar Murphy. "But there is no bughouse [numbers headquarters] here and if there are any writers they are working the bug from Columbus." Besides the youth center, the old line of honky-tonks now houses, among other things, a medical-supply house and a feed store.

Recently, an investigative unit reporting on its surveillance on behalf of soldiers from nearby Fort Benning, Ga. (once the chief target of the vice operations) quoted a contact man:

"It's as dead as a graveyard. No women, no gambling, no nothing."

And just last month, a former belle of the red-light district, passing through town, stopped in to revisit some of her old haunts. Things had changed so that she had a few drinks for consolation and finally wound up in jail on a drunkenness charge. A few years ago, a drunken prostitute was commonplace, but this time it rated a story in a Columbus paper. Within a half hour after publication, a half-dozen Galahads were at the jail to bail her out. Her type had become so rare that she was a celebrity.

How long will Phenix City remain quiet and clean? The question still is asked by some cynics in Phenix City as well as observers from other points where the "new look" seems suspicious. An out-of-state writer concluded a few weeks ago that many gamblers and others of the gang element still were hanging around, waiting for the lid to blow off again.

"Yes, they're still around," says Hugh Bentley, an early reform leader whose home was blown up for his efforts in 1952. "But they are few, and they are identifiable. They would like to see a return to the old days.

"But now everyone is either on the right side or the wrong side, and the wrong side has been deprived of its strength. There are no middle-of-the-roaders to confuse the right and encourage the wrong. There is no compromise."

The doubting evidently have not counted on three things. First, local law enforcement now is determined to crush any resurgence of crime. Second, John Patterson — son of Albert L. Patterson, whose murder touched off the cleanup last year — will be attorney general of Alabama, directing state law enforcement, for three more years.

And then there is a citizenry aroused by a new spirit. Citizen strength, when there is the will to use it, is well-nigh irresistible. It is being used now in Phenix City. ■

In at least one dentist's office, the old doorknob-and-string approach is outmoded

Lower lip pulled down, Thelma shows the dentist her loose tooth.

A 6-YEAR-OLD YANKS HER OWN TOOTH

NEW YORK.

For children like little Thelma Milliken, a local dentist who prefers to remain anonymous has turned his office into a "fun place." As pictured here, youngsters who want to may pull their own loose front teeth.

Says the dentist: "Most youngsters have more confidence in themselves than they have in me. When it's all over, they're elated, proud and perhaps less reluctant to come to the office in the future."

His technique: local anesthetic is applied; the child is given the forceps after the "guilty" tooth is singled out; a twist of the wrist does the trick.

Only problem so far: a 5-year-old boy who insisted that the dentist's office was a space ship. He grabbed the mouth sprays to shoot down flying saucers before pulling an upper.

Forceps set,

Oops . . . a few tears begin to flow after she misses tooth with the forceps, pinches her gum instead.

she tugs gently. The tooth came out a moment later.

Proudly Thelma surveys the results of her handiwork.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH PICTURES

Thousands of ducks take to the air from a reservoir in the Mingo National Wildlife Refuge near Puxico, Missouri. These were part of a flock estimated to number 45,000, mostly mallards. Rice and corn are grown in the refuge and left standing to help feed the birds stopping there. Water is diverted from Castor River to flood about half of the sanctuary's 22,000 acres; the water level is regulated through gates and distributed through ditches.

STATE'S NEW 'DUCK CLUB'

Public Shooting Area in Old Mingo Swamp Provides Good Hunting at a Nominal Cost

SOUTHEAST MISSOURI'S FAMOUS MINGO SWAMP is regaining its long-lost renown as one of the country's finest duck shooting areas. Before it was drained some 35 years ago, the Mingo wilderness was a principal congregating place for waterfowl traveling the Mississippi Flyway, but when the habitat was destroyed, the birds disappeared. Now, with much of the old basin restored to swampland, ducks are returning in large numbers.

This fall, for the first time since establishment of the Mingo National Wildlife Refuge, hunting is being permitted in the adjacent Duck Creek Wildlife Management Area. The 22,000-acre refuge is a federally owned sanctuary where migratory waterfowl can rest and feed without molestation on their southward flight each fall. The 6000-acre game management area, which adjoins the refuge on the north, is owned and operated by the state as a public shooting grounds. This arrangement, considered a model by conservationists, provides hunters of modest means with good shooting at nominal cost and still safeguards the duck population.

More than 130,000 ducks in the first big flight of the season stopped at the Mingo refuge, and every day about 100 hunters in the Duck Creek area have been blasting away at birds entering and leaving the nearby haven. During the first month of the 70-day season, the kill totaled 5258 ducks, an average of almost one and one-half per gun per day. In most public shooting areas, because they attract many novice hunters, the average is less than one duck per gun per day.

The Mingo refuge was established three years ago by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. At the same time the Missouri Conservation Commission set up the Duck Creek area. The associated projects are working well in accomplishing the purposes for which they were founded: The refuge maintains the duck supply, the management area controls the kill.

Hunter stands in blind to fire at ducks (not visible) attracted by his call and his decoys in the Duck Creek Wildlife Management Area. The shooting grounds have same swampland characteristics as the adjacent refuge, about half of the 6000 acres being flooded. Most of the area is covered with second growth oaks and underbrush. It has 63 blinds scattered over three reservoirs; each blind is a 4-by-8-foot box-like structure on stilts, is six feet high, partially roofed and well camouflaged.

State Rents Boats, Decoys and Blinds

Hunters gather to draw for blinds

In the Duck Creek Wildlife Area headquarters, hunters await the 5 a.m. drawing for blinds. The public shooting ground mostly attracts hunters from Southeast Missouri, some from St. Louis. In writing for a reservation, a hunter should specify number in party, desired day, alternate days. Not more than two advance reservations are issued to one individual at one time. Bookings are heavy for remainder of season.

DUCK HUNTING in the Duck Creek Wildlife Management Area in the Mingo wilderness is strictly regulated by the Missouri Conservation Commission. Eager hunters with reservations for the day's shooting gather before dawn in the area's headquarters building, located in a clearing on Highway 51 nine miles east of Puxico. At 5 a.m. they queue up to draw for blinds, pay the required fees and set out by car and boat for their assigned places. Shooting starts at sunrise, ends at sunset. Hunters must return to headquarters to be checked out.

When the season opened, 30 blinds were operated in the wildlife area but more have been added as the season progressed. Now 63 are in use. Each can accommodate up to four hunters, is rented for $1 per party. The blinds are arranged in a grid pattern in the three reservoirs of the public hunting ground so that none is closer than a quarter-mile to another. Thus each blind has a large exclusive shooting area. Gravel roads on the levees that form the reservoirs enable hunters to drive at least partway to their blinds.

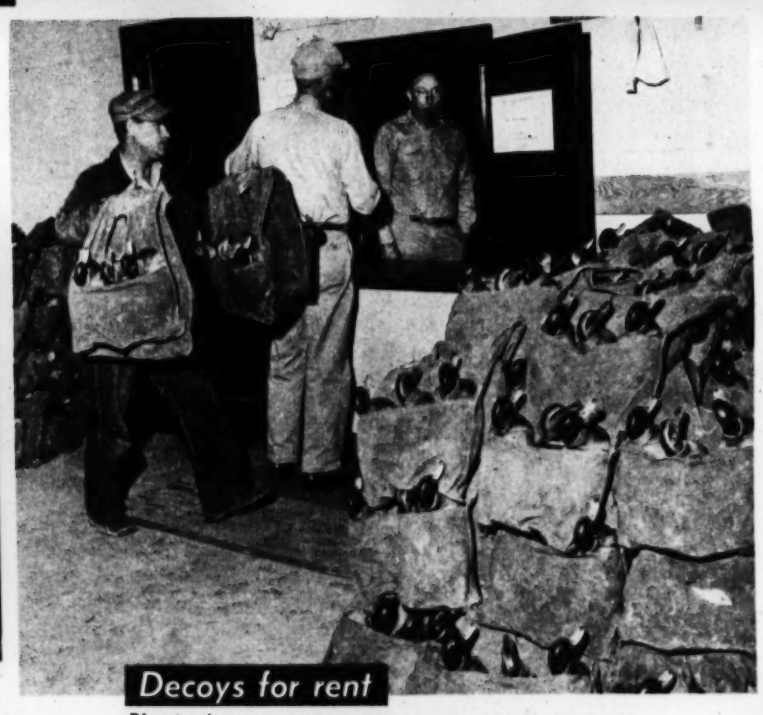

Guides are not available and neither are eating and sleeping facilities. The commission recommends that hunters wear hip boots, carry flashlights and use dogs to retrieve crippled ducks. Reservations are limited to the capacity of the blinds and must be made in advance by writing the commission's headquarters at Puxico.

The commission's close control of shooting in the wildlife area is for the benefit of both the ducks and duck hunters. Whenever the kill reaches proportions deemed harmful to the duck population, the commission can protect the supply of waterfowl by closing off the area to shooting, regardless of the time remaining in the hunting season.

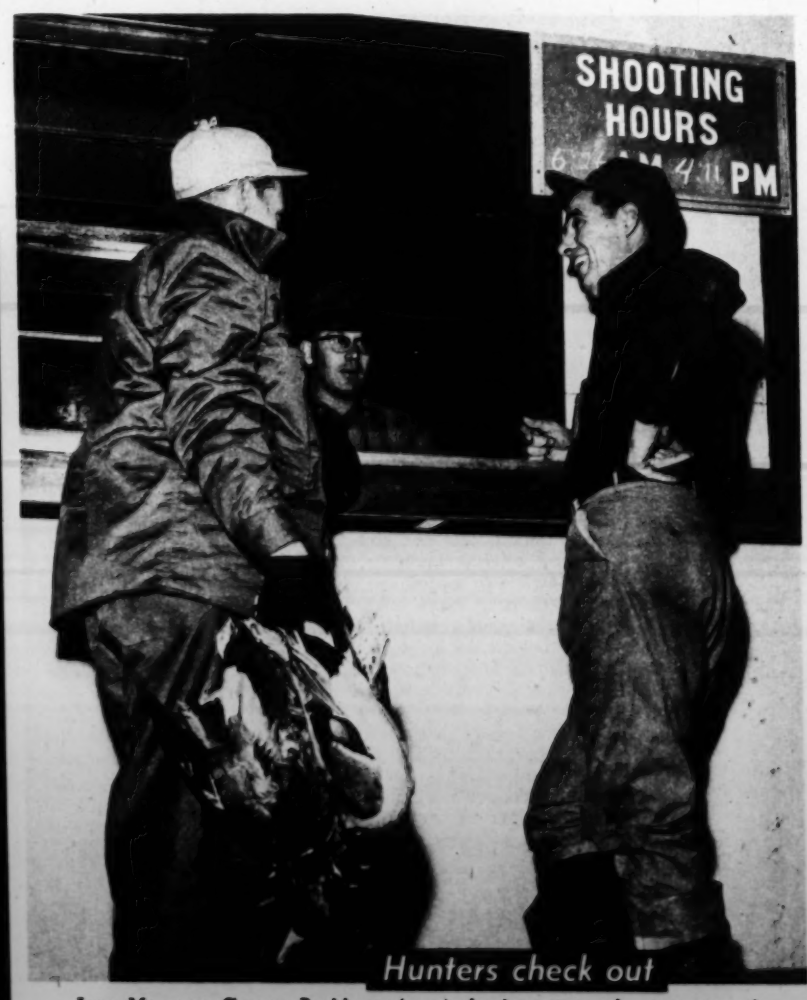

$1 hunting fee

Clerk Junior McSpadden (right) fills out special $1 permit for hunter, who must surrender his state hunting license and federal duck stamp. From box on counter the hunter draws a tag bearing number of the blind his party will occupy for the day's shoot. Rental for blind is $1 for entire party. Fees are used to maintain area and equipment.

Decoys for rent

Plastic decoys, six in a canvas carrying bag, are issued to hunters at the headquarters for charge of $1 a dozen. The decoys must be returned in good condition after the day's use. Boats also are available for $1 rental; each has same number as a blind, is tied up at levee bank where hunters must park their cars.

Hunters check out

Area Manager George Brakhage (rear) checks out two hunters at end of day's shooting, returns their licenses and duck stamps. One carries bag limit of four mallards. Commission keeps record on sex, species, age (young or old) of every duck killed in area, and also on the number of unretrieved cripples which usually equals the total killed. Under favorable weather conditions, the Mingo refuge and Duck Creek area may be host to upwards of 250,000 ducks later this season.

On the way to blind

In cold predawn darkness, two hunters set out for their blind in rented aluminum boat, in which is stowed their guns, ammunition, extra clothing, food and charcoal heater. Vapor rises from the agitated water, which is warmer than the air. Boat lanes marked with reflector targets have been cleared through the timber to provide access channels to blinds. Water is about thigh-deep.

79-YEAR-OLD SCHOOL

Building erected 79 years ago remains in use in Ferguson-Florissant District (R-2) because of rapid enrollment growth. Note outside fire escape. Structure houses 139 pupils from new but overcrowded Florissant elementary school, at left. Plans to abandon old building have been postponed twice as a result of population gains. It now is scheduled to be replaced in 1957 by constructing an addition to new school.

SCHOOLROOM SHORTAGE IN THE COUNTY

Makeshift Quarters Are in Use in Some Areas Due to Great Gains in Population

By GARY W. FERGUSON of the PICTURES Staff

DISCUSSIONS at the recent White House Conference on Education again emphasized the nation's basic school problems as: Where are the classrooms and the teachers coming from? This is not to deny the underlying importance of the continuing debate over just what the schools should accomplish. But the nation, already woefully short of both teachers and school buildings, is confronted with the prospect of huge annual increases in enrollments for the next several years. There obviously must be rooms and teachers before accomplishment of any kind.

St. Louis County is a case in point. The number of children in public schools was 48,128 in 1945. Enrollment is expected to climb to at least 115,000 by 1960, George W. Vossbrink, county school superintendent, says. That is a 35 per cent jump from this year's total of 84,477. To house the additional pupils, about $20,000,000 worth of new buildings will be needed. At least 1000 more classroom teachers will be required.

And if not a single additional student were to register, several districts in the county would face formidable building and staff problems to catch up with enrollment gains that already have occurred.

For many children, classrooms either are overcrowded or makeshift. Only by raiding communities outside the county, where salaries are lower, and by persuading married former instructors to return to the schoolroom have many of the county districts been able to keep enough faculty members.

By next fall, the county—with one-seventh of the state's population—could absorb about one-half of the elementary teachers who will be graduated from Missouri colleges in June.

In some fast-growing districts like Ferguson-Florissant (R-2) and Riverview Gardens, there is a serious question about where money for enough new buildings may come from. R-2 enrollment, for example, has risen from 3162 in 1951, when the district was formed, to 5841 this year. It is expected to soar to 11,783 by 1960.

Attempting to keep pace with the increase, R-2 voters have kept the district's debt for new buildings at the maximum permitted by the State Constitution. As a result of the county-wide reassessment, the district's limit—10 per cent of assessed valuation—will rise about $1,800,000 on January 1. The school board has scheduled a $1,800,000 bond issue vote for January 12.

But R-2 Superintendent V. C. McCluer says that even if the district continues to borrow the maximum amount allowed, it will be unable to build as many schools in the next five years as it will need. "More money," McCluer says, "will have to be made available in some way."

Three possibilities were recommended at the White House conference: Federal aid, more help by the individual states, and increases in the amounts districts can borrow. To ease the teacher shortage, the conference proposed: Better pay, improved working conditions, greater support for teacher-training schools and more scholarships for prospective teachers.

WALLBOARD ROOMS IN GYM

Six cubicle-like classrooms, made with wallboard, occupy gymnasium floor in Ferguson's Central elementary school. Rooms house second graders. Workmen are preparing to close off the stage for use as a playroom. Pupils in one of the makeshift rooms can be seen through scaffolding below carpenter's feet. Officials hope that new construction will permit discontinuance of arrangement no later than January, 1957.

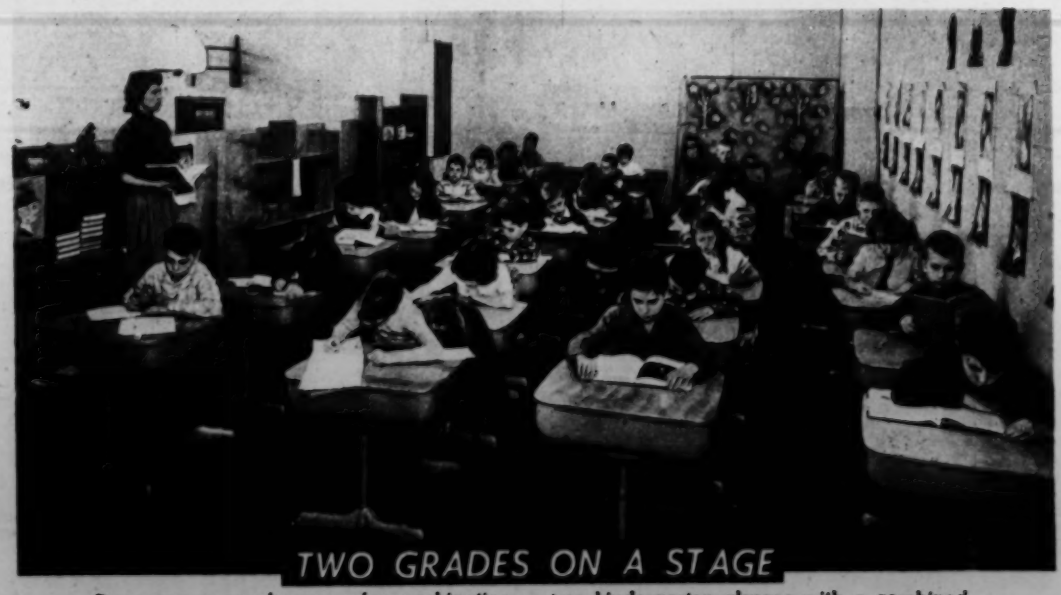

SCHOOLROOM IN OLD CHURCH

Former Immanuel Evangelical and Reformed Church building houses sixth grade class in Ferguson, to relieve crowding at Vogt school across the street. Building is rented from church.

BASEMENT KINDERGARTEN

Kindergarten pupils meet in the basement of one of four cottages built for temporary classrooms at Glasgow Village elementary school in Riverview Gardens District. One cottage is not used, because of teacher shortage. School board leases the units which later can be made into homes. Basement rooms have only two small windows. District's bonded debt for new buildings has been kept at legal maximum for last five years. Vote on $1,830,000 bond issue will be held January 10.

TWO GRADES ON A STAGE

Stage serves as classroom for combination third and fourth grade at Riverview Gardens' crowded Hathaway Meadows elementary school. Building, planned for 400 children, was opened last January. Present enrollment is 733. Because of space lack, two kindergarten classes with a combined membership of 63 must use the same room. Eight temporary classrooms are being built to alleviate situation. District, which had a total enrollment of 1247 in 1949, has 4257 pupils this year and expects 8500 in 1960.

RESCUE OF A DIVER

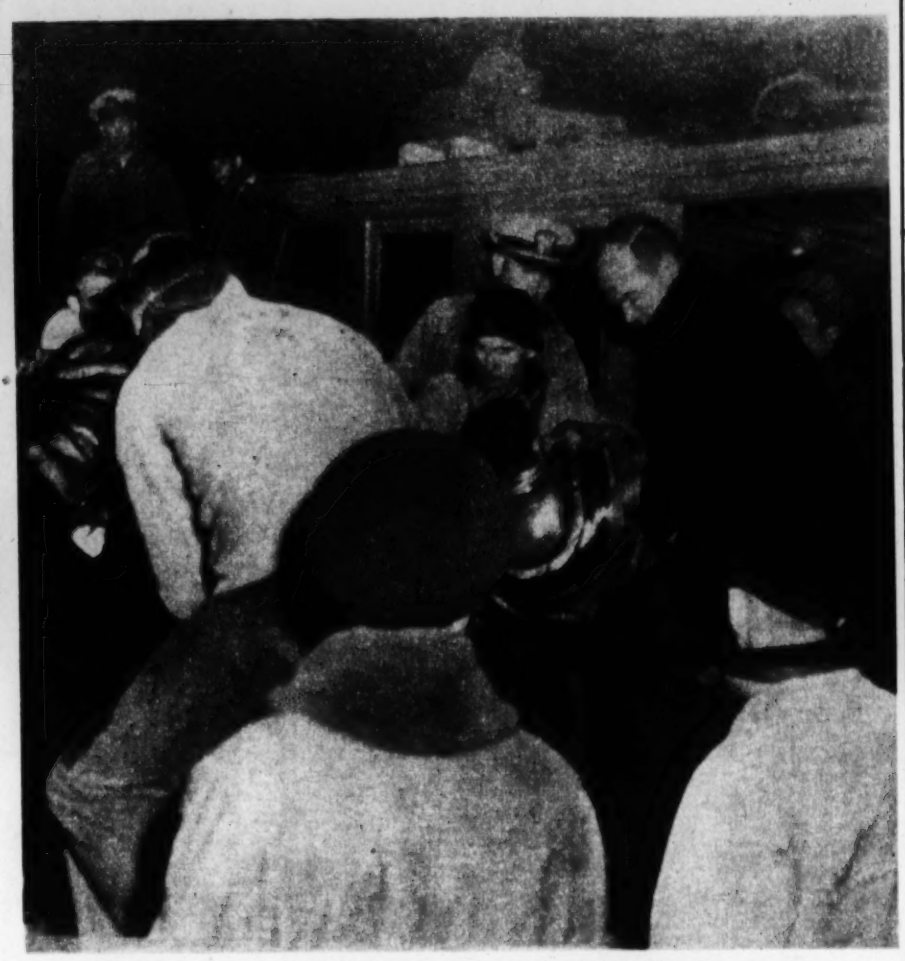

Navy Man, Trapped Nine Hours, Is Brought Up Unhurt

Minnie Tallarico, wife of the diver, sobs as she talks to her husband from outside decompression chamber. He was kept inside the chamber for four hours so he could gradually become adjusted to lighter pressure. He spent the night in infirmary at the ordnance laboratory.

After nearly nine hours in 43-degree water, Diver Joseph R. Tallarico is helped aboard a Navy salvage vessel caught in the searchlights of another ship. The diver was trapped in an upright position about a quarter of a mile off Point Patience near where the Patuxent River empties into Chesapeake Bay. Rescue divers were from Naval Ordnance Laboratory at Solomons, Maryland, and the Naval Gun Factory at Washington, D.C., 70 miles away.
International News Photo

Tallarico, his helmet removed, is carried into the ship's cabin for examination by doctors. He remained conscious during the entire rescue operation. Several times during his slow and painful ascent he was heard to say "I can't stand any more of this." While he was trapped below, a leak developed in his diving suit and it filled with water up to his waist.
Associated Press Photo

AT 10:36 IN THE MORNING, Navy Diver Joseph R. Tallarico descended into the cold, black water of Chesapeake Bay. His job was to fasten a cable to a dummy mine containing scientific instruments and photographic equipment so it could be pulled up. He expected to surface himself in about 20 minutes. But it was nearly nine hours later before he was back on a deck of a boat, fatigued and chilled through after a dramatic rescue.

Tallarico was in the water, at a depth of about 130 feet, for 15 minutes when the anchor of the boat above him pulled loose and the boat began to drift, pulling him toward deeper water. Another anchor, attached by a chain to the first, dragged and pinned him, his life line and air hose to one of the anchors. Twenty divers summoned for the rescue were hampered by tide and rough water. After five hours, during which time Tallarico talked over his intercommunication wire to those on the boat, the divers reached him.

Three hours were spent in bringing Tallarico to the surface. Doctors advised the slow ascent so the diver would not suffer an attack of the dread divers' disease known as "the bends," which results from a too-sudden change of pressure.

The Tallaricos talk to reporters after his stay in decompression chamber. Said Tallarico, who has been a diver for 10 years: "I want to go back down. I like diving." There have been instances in which divers survived as much as 72 hours at depths of more than 100 feet.

New Shuttle Bus For Holidays

PICTURES Staff Photo

In keeping with the holiday season, five Public Service Company busses have exchanged their familiar coats of red for garb of Christmas green. Twin Christmas trees are mounted on the fronts, and in the top front window, where route signs are usually displayed, placards proclaim the season's greeting. Besides adding a festive note, the busses provide shuttle service in the downtown area for foot-weary shoppers. Free to regular transit patrons with transfers or passes, the busses are scheduled to run every three minutes from Tenth and Olive streets between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays. Service will continue through Christmas eve. Route of the Christmas specials is Olive to Seventh, to Delmar, to Sixth, to Locust, to Tenth, to Olive.

Culprits Caught in the Act

Hidden Photographer Solves Mystery of School's Missing Milk

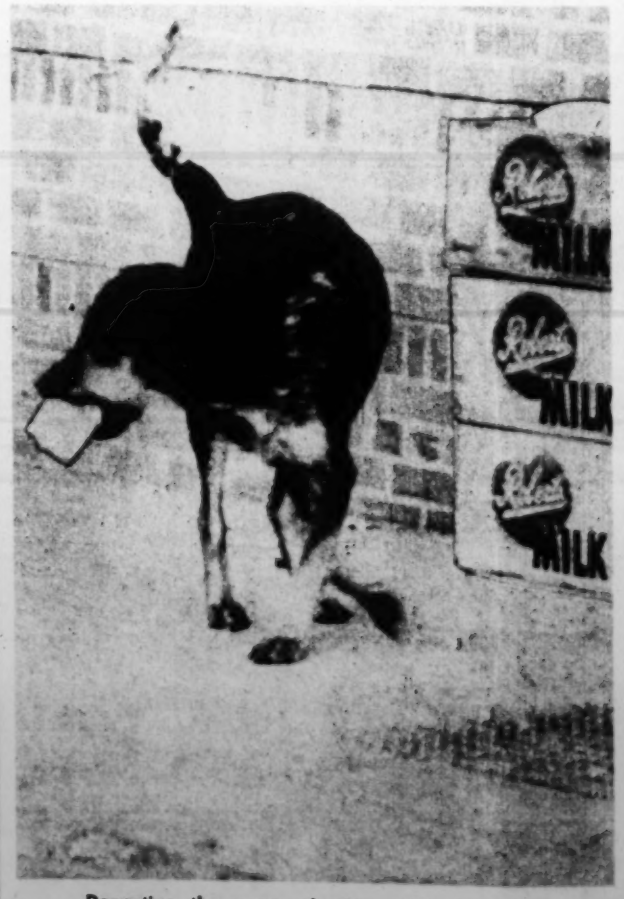

The mystery at Pershing School in Omaha was: Who was stealing lunch program milk after its delivery outside the building early in the morning? Attempting to solve it, a newspaper photographer hid himself near the building entrance where the milk is customarily left. Cases of milk were delivered and soon afterward a group of dogs showed up. Their conspiratorial attitudes stamped them at once as likely suspects.

Rising on hind legs, one of the dogs noses about in the top case. Smaller dog at right awaits its turn.

Unable to reach in as other dog had done, the smaller one jumps up on the case. With teeth gripping a carton of milk, it stands poised for the getaway.

Departing the scene of crime with the loot. On the basis of evidence provided by the photographer, the case was considered solved.

Breaking with traditional architectural concepts, the $4,000,000 Pius XII Library, named for the present Pope, will be the hub of St. Louis University's new campus. With walls of glass designed to harmonize with over-all campus planning, it will be the depository of the Knights of Columbus microfilms of the priceless Vatican Library manuscript collection. It also will be the university's general library. Addition of the Vatican collection to the school's already extensive Catholic collection will make St. Louis University one of the leading American centers of research in literature, political history, theology, philosophy and other subjects. The Jesuit institution is the oldest university west of the Mississippi River, having been founded in 1818.

ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY'S PLANS FOR EXPANSION

$100,000,000 Program for Immediate and Future Growth

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

THE $100,000,000 LONG-RANGE development program just announced by St. Louis University provides for dramatic rehabilitation and expansion of the school's historic midtown campus. The building plans are the most striking feature of the comprehensive program, which was formulated after a three-year study of the Catholic university's role in meeting present and future educational requirements of the community.

They envisage a beautiful, spacious campus — something the institution has lacked in its crowded location in the highly urbanized Grand-Lindell area. Many new buildings of contemporary architectural style are planned, additional land is to be acquired both east and west of Grand boulevard, and several old structures are marked for eventual demolition, including venerable DuBourg Hall, at present the university's main building, on Grand boulevard.

This campus development, estimated to cost $33,500,000, is designed to make the university's physical plant a model of educational efficiency. However, it is only one element of the four-part program which blueprints the growth of the school for probably the next half-century. The other three parts provide for: (1) Expanding the faculty and increasing teachers' salaries to maintain quality of education; (2) establishing sizable student aid funds so capable students can have a college education, regardless of their economic circumstances; (3) modernizing teaching and research "tools" through endowed departments and expanded laboratory and clinical facilities.

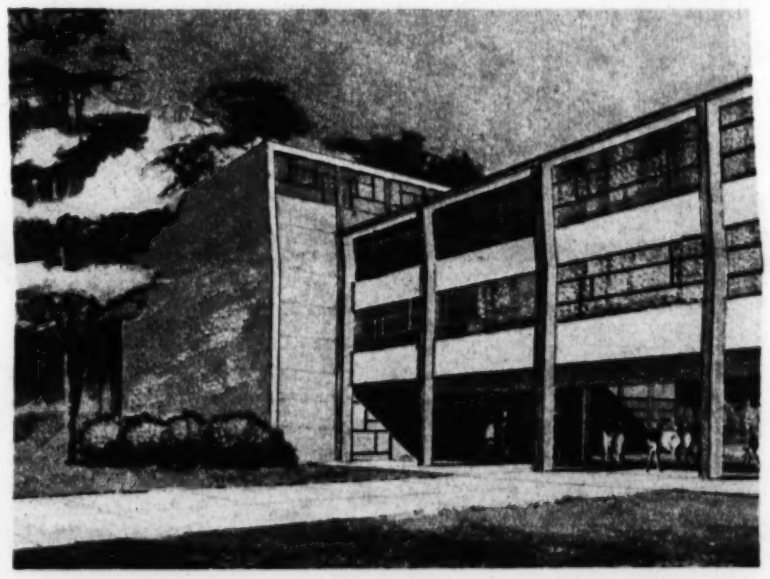

While no time limit is set for consummation of the program, the university feels at least half of it must be made a reality within 15 years if the school is to fulfill its responsibilities. Underscoring the immediate need is steadily increasing enrollment, which is expected to reach 18,000 to 20,000 by 1970—about double the present number of students. Because of this pressure, each part of the over-all program is divided into two phases, a first stage for immediate development and the remainder for ultimate development. First stage expenditures total $41,600,000.

Campus development in the first stage, already under way, will cost $13,500,000. It embraces construction of five new buildings, purchase of other property in the school's present campus area bounded roughly by Grand and Lindell boulevards, Spring and Laclede avenues; and acquisition of an adjoining six-block tract east of Grand for later expansion. The latter would be contingent on the city's slum clearance program through which this blighted area would be made available for redevelopment.

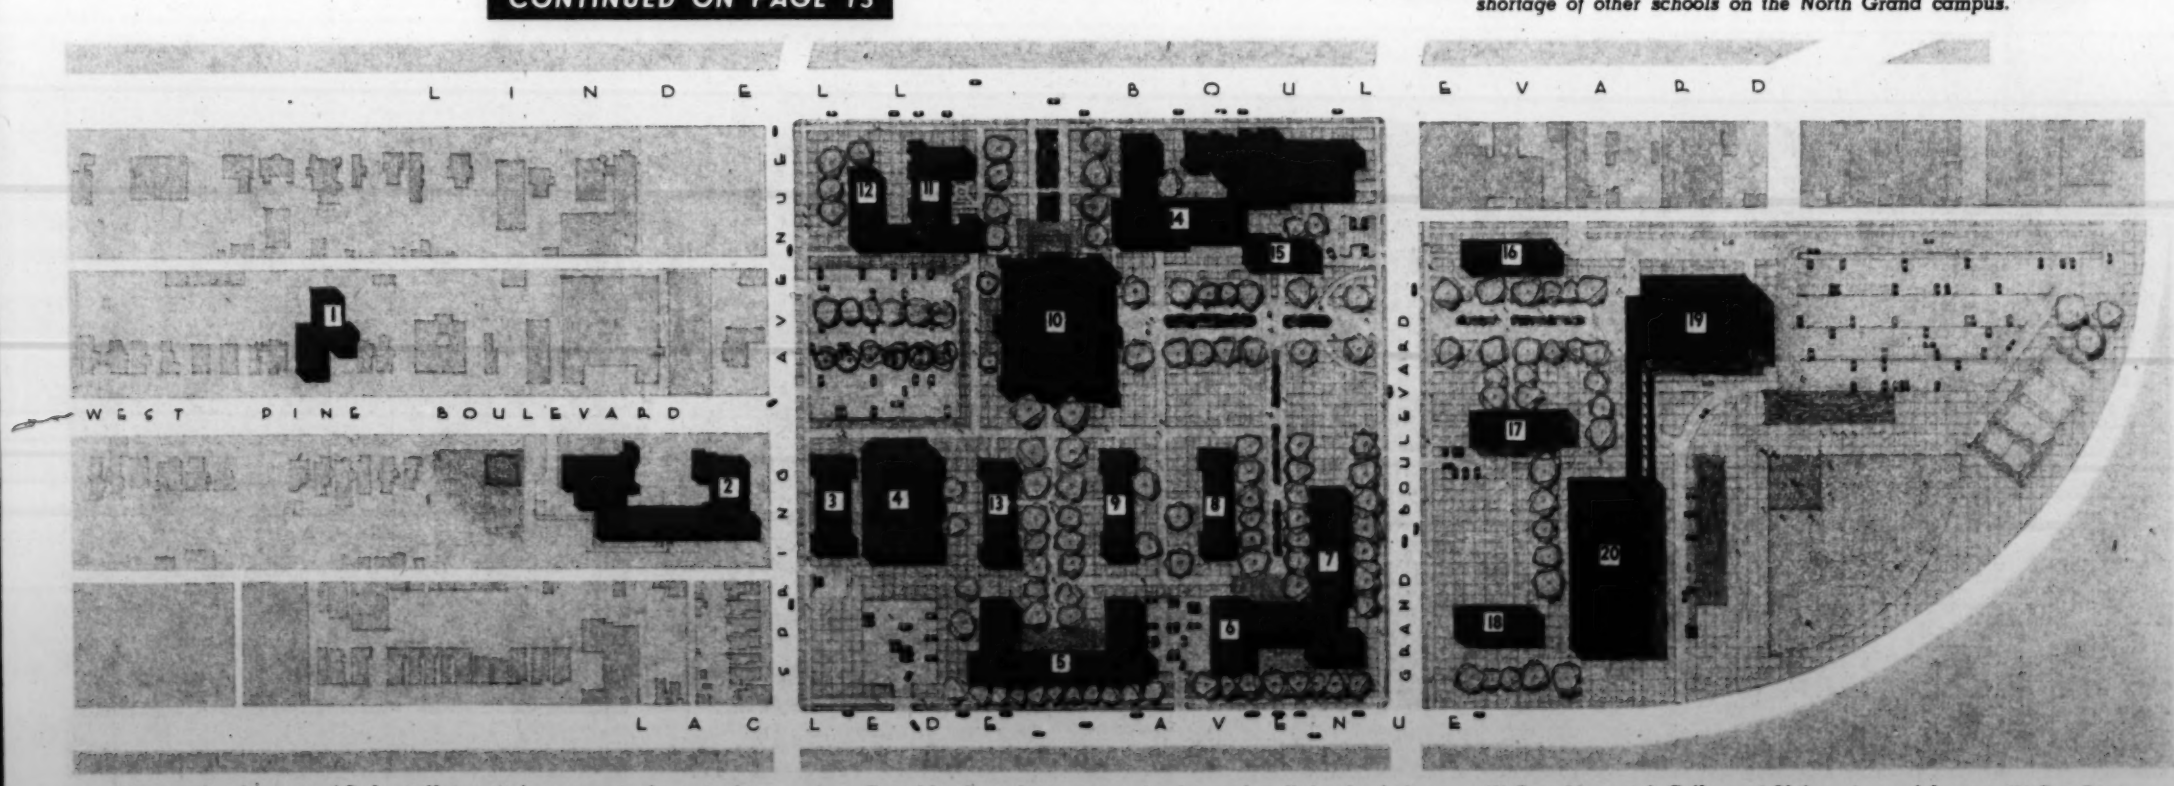

Of the five buildings scheduled for construction in the near future, Marguerite Hall, a women's dormitory at 3811-15 West Pine boulevard, has already been started, and ground probably will be broken next spring for the Pius XII Library, which will be located on West Pine midway between Grand and Spring. (Eventually, it is proposed to close West Pine between those streets, leaving the library in the middle of the enlarged campus, as shown in the diagram below). A new building on Laclede will house the Institute of Technology, now located off-campus on Olive street. A College of Arts and Sciences building and a Science building—separate but connected structures—will be built at the Grand-Laclede corner.

Exterior perspectives of the new buildings and site plans of the campus were prepared by Leo A. Daly Company, architects-engineers of St. Louis.

Entrance to Institute of Technology building, a $2,500,000 structure of functional design for engineering classes. Composed of three units of one, three and four stories, it will have broad facades of glass and stone and an unenclosed ground-floor area in its center section to provide an open vista effect. This building is a high priority need because the institute is now inadequately housed in an old mortuary on Olive street. While the institute's enrollment is climbing to an expected peak of 1500 by 1970, the new building will provide relief for an acute classroom shortage of other schools on the North Grand campus.

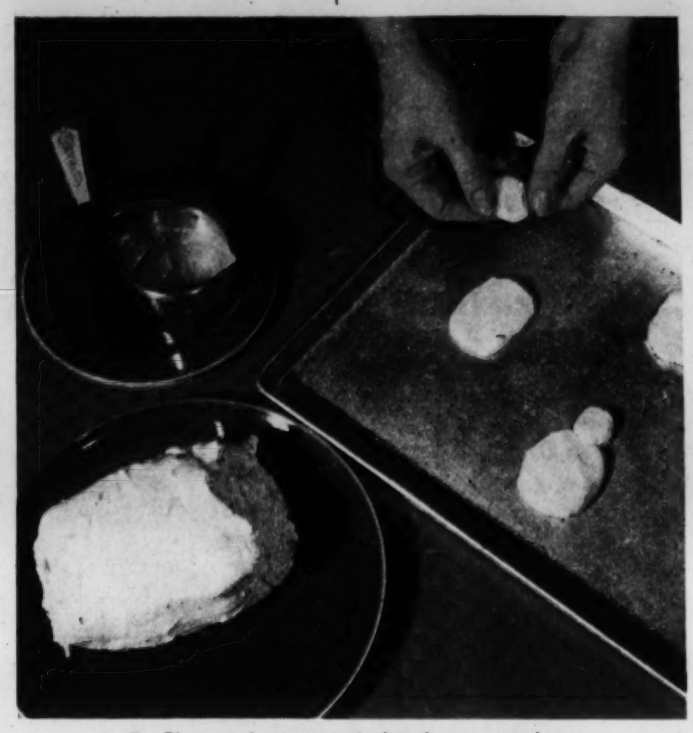

Ultimate development of St. Louis University's campus is shown in this site plan (north is at top). The expanded campus embraces the large area west of Grand boulevard bounded by Spring, Lindell, Laclede and Grand and approximately six blocks east of Grand bounded by Grand, Laclede, Lindell and Channing (at far right). Only two buildings are outside these areas, which are integrated through closure of West Pine boulevard between Channing and Spring avenues. The west or main campus is mostly given over to classroom buildings and dormitories; the east or new campus to facilities for extra-curricular activities. The two are linked by an underpass where Grand boulevard intersects a landscaped mall that leads from the Library (10) on the west to the auditorium (19) on the east. East of Grand, Laclede avenue curves northward to tie in with Lindell at Channing; commercial property fronting on Lindell east of Grand (shown in yellow) will remain. Buildings shown in green either exist now or will exist when first stage plans are completed; those in red are planned in the indefinite future. The unnumbered green building at Grand and Lindell is the university's St. Francis Xavier Church, a landmark better known as College Church. Numbered buildings are: (1) Marguerite Hall, women's dormitory now under construction; (2) Fusz Memorial, College of Philosophy and Letters; (3) Des Peres Hall, classroom building; (4) Gymnasium; (5) proposed Institute of Technology; (6) proposed Science building; (7) proposed Arts and Sciences building; (8) Walsh Hall, men's dormitory; (9) Clemens Hall, men's dormitory; (10) proposed Library; (11) Davis-Shaughnessy Hall, School of Commerce and Finance; (12) future addition to Commerce building; (13) proposed men's dormitory; (14) future Jesuit Community residence; (15) future administration building; (16) future Law building; (17) future student union; (18) future women's dormitory; (19) future auditorium; (20) future field house.

Toy Cookies That Children Can Fashion

1. Miss Ellerbrock crushes cardamon seed to flavor cooky dough which she fashions into Christmas tree ornaments. Butter is used to grease baking pans.

2. Flat oval pieces of dough are used to form the body of the figures, a smaller round piece being placed on top for the head.

3. Pieces of dough are rolled into long round strips to form the arms and legs. Bodies are shaped and padded with extra dough to resemble living forms.

By MERNA LAZIER

ORNAMENTAL COOKIES for the Christmas tree may be fashioned by even the very young struggling artists in the family. They are made by Miss Dorothy Ellerbrock of St. Louis, who comes from a long family line of bakers. Making them is too time-consuming for commercial production, but she makes them in her home for young friends. The dough, of putty-like consistency, does not stick to the hands, which makes it desirable for the small fry to work with.

Miss Ellerbrock makes this old-fashioned dough with honey and sour cream, and flavors it with cardamon seed crushed with a mortar and pestle. Sugar and butter are creamed together, then the honey, beaten egg, flavoring and salt are blended in. Sour cream mixed with baking soda is added alternately with the flour to make a very stiff but pliable dough. If dough is sticky, a little more flour should be added. Dough is chilled until it can be molded with ease. By padding the figures with bits of dough, a third-dimensional effect may be achieved. Outlines and indentations are made with a toothpick, and a checkered effect may be given by making light crisscross cuts with a knife and brushing with color. Then, molded cookies are baked about 12 minutes in a 325- to 350-degree oven. When baked, the dough will have risen, leaving spaces in between the score lines uncolored. Food colors may be mixed or diluted with water for variety. Eyes, nose and mouth are tinted with sharp point of a toothpick. This decorating will not crack off like a sugar icing, and it may be adapted to an endless variety of designs and shapes for other seasons.

INGREDIENTS: One-half cup butter or margarine, one-half cup each of sugar, honey and thick sour cream, one egg, one and one-half teaspoons baking soda, two and one-fourth teaspoons salt, one teaspoon crushed cardamon and four and one-half cups flour (more if needed). Food colorings, candies and colored sugars as needed.

RIOT IN GREECE

Greek police clash with rioting students in Salonika. The demonstrators wanted all British services in Greece closed as a protest against Britain's stand on Cyprus. Four-fifths of Cyprus' 500,000 population are of Greek descent, and they are seeking a plebiscite to determine their future, with union with Greece as one possibility. Turkey opposes a plebiscite, fearing the future of the 100,000 Cypriots of Turkish extraction. So far, Britain has demanded that terrorism on Cyprus be ended and self-government introduced before other alternatives are discussed. The strategic island in the eastern Mediterranean is a British Crown colony.

RHUBARB IN AUTOS

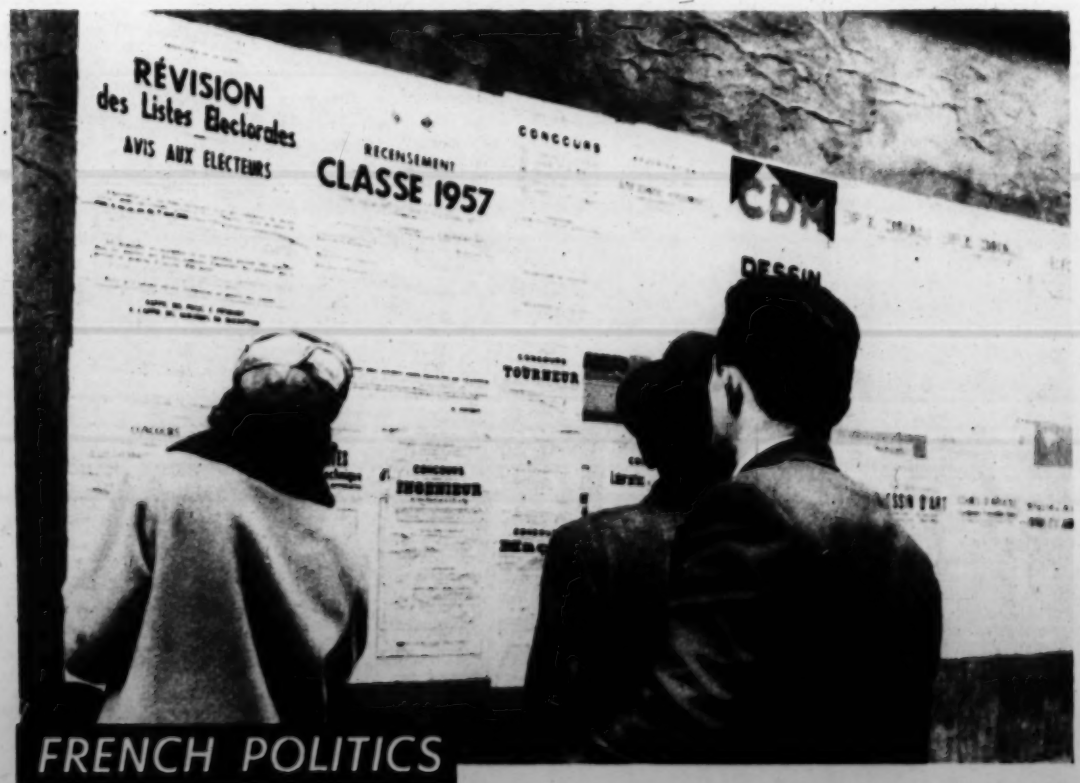

General Motors president Harlow H. Curtice, left, and Pontiac dealer M. H. Yager of Albany, New York, pass each other grimly after a Senate hearing in which Yager accused G.M. of using a "gun-in-rib" approach to get dealers to increase sales. Yager was one of several dealers who complained about the corporation's methods at an inquiry being conducted by the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee. The committee wants to determine what effect General Motor's size has on competition. Curtice told the Senators his organization's business ethics were of the highest order and relationships with the vast majority of its 17,000 dealers were excellent. Later, Curtice announced G.M.'s franchise agreements with its dealers would be extended from one year to five years unless a dealer objects.

LABOR MERGER

George Meany, president of the new American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, relaxes during intermission at convention in which AFL voted to merge with CIO. Meany headed the AFL. Meeting separately, the CIO also agreed to the consolidation, which was carried out Monday in New York City. The new organization has 15,000,000 members, 10,000,000 of whom had been in the AFL. The CIO was formed when a group of unions broke with the AFL 20 years ago in a dispute over industry-wide versus craft unions. After the split the CIO organized workers in such key industries as steel, automobile and rubber. Both industrial and craft unions are recognized in the new organization.

FRENCH POLITICS

Notices concerning national elections compete for attention among bulletins posted on wall in Paris. The French will choose a new National Assembly on January 2. Premier Edgar Faure's Cabinet dissolved the old Assembly after the body had ousted Faure on a no-confidence vote. Dissolution resulted when Faure seized on a constitutional provision permitting the step whenever two Premiers lose confidence votes by absolute majorities within 18 months. Faure's troubles with the Assembly came to a head over his unsuccessful efforts to get it to hold elections early in 1956. By using dissolution measure, Faure got the early balloting Assembly would not approve. Assembly's term would have expired next June.

INDIVIDUAL PICTURES THAT TELL A STORY

ON SIDEWALK, AT 2:30 A.M.—IT'S A GIRL

Police, ambulance attendants and a doctor huddle around Mrs. Sarah Healy (right, in stocking cap) just after delivery of her first baby was completed at 2:30 o'clock in the morning on a New York sidewalk. The baby, a five-and-three-quarter-pound girl, is visible, partly covered, at lower left. When Mrs. Healy awoke and told her husband she thought the baby was on the way, the couple dressed, hurried to summon a cab. With no cabs in sight, Healy spread a blanket on the sidewalk in front of their apartment, and that is where the baby was born. The hastily summoned doctor worked by flashlight. Mother and baby were then taken to a hospital.

RIPE OLD AGE

A day or two before he observed his ninety-eighth birthday, Dr. Maurice J. Lewi sits at desk in his New York office where he puts in five days a week at work. He is a podiatrist and a man who has made few changes in his living habits in his advanced years. He smokes eight cigars a day, eats "everything," has scotch and soda before dinner, dry chablis with the meal, writes historical-medical treatises, makes speeches, plays poker and whist several times a week at the New York Bridge-Whist Club which he founded in 1906, attends meetings of the Albany Society of New York which he founded in 1893. When he was 8 years old he saw President Lincoln's body lying in state in the Capitol at Albany. Dr. Lewi lives alone in a hotel.

THROUGH THE SHERRY CASK

In the laboratory of the Sherry Control Board at Jerez, Spain, a visitor looks through a glass-ended cask of aging wine. The "flor" (flower) floating on the wine is a yeast that plays a part in aging the sherry. Jerez, a Moorish settlement in southern Spain, has for centuries been a center of wine-making. Its sherry is made from white Palomino grapes. The sherry is stored in three tiers of casks according to age. The best sherry is aged about five years.

University Plans Expanded Faculty, New Teaching Tools

Marguerite Hall, first building to be constructed in St. Louis University's expansion program, is a $1,000,000 dormitory for women. Cornerstone of the eight-story structure at 3811-15 West Pine boulevard was laid last month during school's 137th anniversary celebration; it will accommodate 280 women students. University also plans to improve South Grand medical school campus.

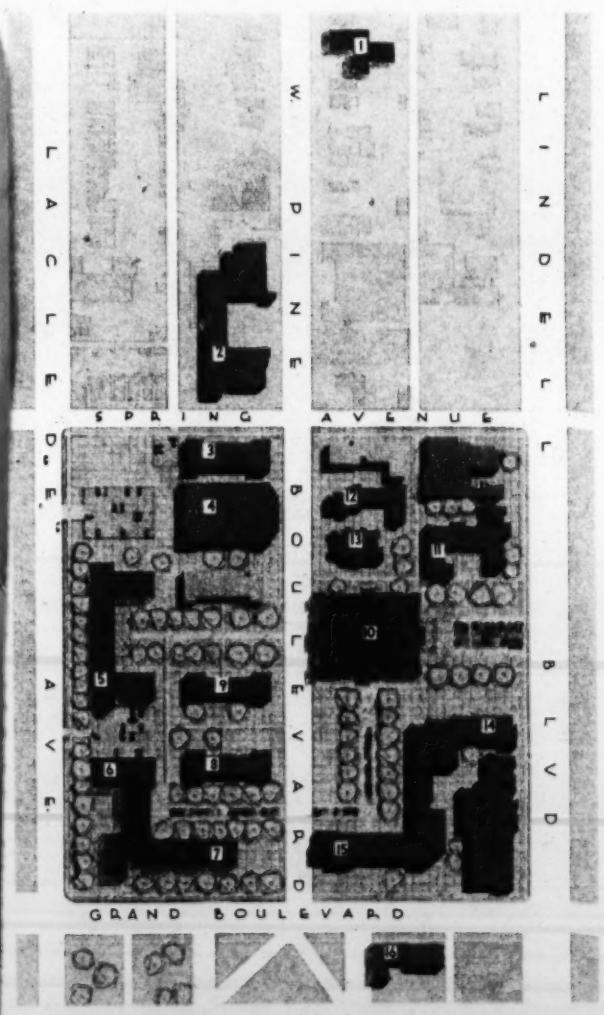

College of Arts and Sciences building (right) and the connected Science building, which will house the biology and chemistry departments, compose a $4,000,000 group in the first stage of campus development. With architectural treatment similar to neighboring technology building, they will be two to four stories in height, have open ground-floor area in middle unit. Enrollment pressures make these buildings mandatory.

WHILE PHYSICAL EXPANSION is the most dramatic feature of St. Louis University's redevelopment program, other phases of the master plan are important elements in the school's future growth. The ultimate plan provides $33,200,000 for teachers, with half included in first stage development during the next 15 years; $6,200,000 for student aid, with $3,008,000 for first stage use; and $19,000,000 for modernization of teaching "tools," with $8,500,000 earmarked for first stage.

These first stage totals are broken down this way: For teachers: $12,500,000 in endowments for salaries; $4,000,000 to endow 15 professorial chairs; $100,000 to endow lectureships. For students: $2,000,000 to endow 100 scholarships; $800,000 to endow 20 fellowships; $200,000 for student loans. For teaching tools: $3,000,000 to endow four departments; $2,000,000 for laboratories and clinics; $1,000,000 for research; $2,000,000 for books and periodicals; $500,000 for publications.

"This program presents a comprehensive picture of the educational requirements of our expanding society and the means of achieving them," said the Very Reverend Paul C. Reinert, S.J., president of the university. "It is not a campaign for funds, but we invite all who are interested in our aims to participate."

Three times before in its long history the university undertook successful expansion programs. Eleven years after its founding in 1818 by Bishop Louis DuBourg, St. Louis' first prelate, the school moved from a riverfront house to a new building at Ninth street and Washington avenue. This structure was replaced by a new, larger building in 1853. In 1888, the school moved from downtown to its present site, which was then a charming rural area far from the city.

First stage development of St. Louis University's campus is shown in this site plan (west is at top). Entire area east of Grand boulevard which school hopes to acquire is not shown. Present street pattern remains unchanged during this development. Red buildings are to be built in immediate future; green are existing university properties; light green buildings are among those in campus area not owned by the school. Number 1 is Marquerite Hall; (2) Fusz Memorial; (3) Des Peres Hall; (4) Gymnasium; (5) proposed Institute of Technology; (6) proposed Science building; (7) proposed College of Arts and Sciences; (8) Walsh Hall; (9) Clemens Hall; (10) proposed Pius XII Library; (11) Davis-Shaughnessy Hall; (12) Congregation of the Resurrection House; (13) Chouteau House student building; (14) Jesuit Community residence; (15) DuBourg Hall; (16) Champlin Hall women's dormitory. Those numbered 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16 will be razed eventually. Unnumbered building at Grand and Lindell is College Church; unnumbered property at Spring and Lindell was recently acquired by the school.

Cutter Klamath Gives Medical and Dental Aid to Alaskan Eskimos

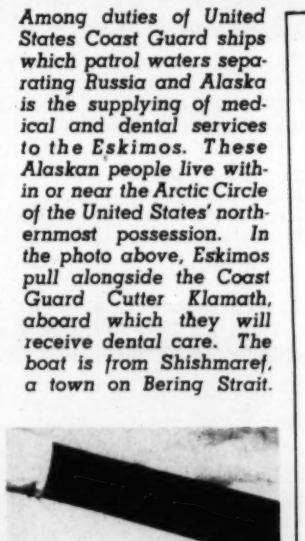

International News Photos except as noted

Among duties of United States Coast Guard ships which patrol waters separating Russia and Alaska is the supplying of medical and dental services to the Eskimos. These Alaskan people live within or near the Arctic Circle of the United States' northernmost possession. In the photo above, Eskimos pull alongside the Coast Guard Cutter Klamath, aboard which they will receive dental care. The boat is from Shishmaref, a town on Bering Strait.

The port of Nome, framed by a five-inch gun and the deck of the Klamath, is spread out on a plain between the water and mountains which rise in the background. Nome is on Norton Sound, a part of the Bering Sea.

Clad in his parka, an Eskimo, from Gambell on St. Lawrence Island, operates a 16-millimeter projector after instruction from crewmen. Coast Guardsmen reported the Eskimos liked westerns.

Little Anny Aukutok of St. Lawrence Island in the Bering Sea is held by her mother as a dentist works on her teeth. During a four-month patrol the Klamath entered the Arctic Ocean, sailed as far north as Wainwright, about 50 miles south of Alaska's north tip.

INTERRUPTED ROMANCE

Jane Wyman, Rock Hudson in Film "All That Heaven Allows"

1. Cary Scott (Jane Wyman), a widow of comfortable means, and her gardener, Ron Kirby (Rock Hudson), are drawn together by loneliness. Ron, who lives in part of an old mill, proposes marriage, but Cary is bothered by gossip about their activities in the small New England town.

2. While home for a weekend, Cary's son Ned (William Reynolds), a Princeton student, and daughter Kay (Floria Talbott), a social worker in New York, deplore what they insist is their mother's disrespect to their late father's memory. When Ron comes to the house for a visit, Cary's children treat him coldly.

3. At a party given by Cary's best friend in hopes of bringing the romance out into the open, Ron threatens to beat up Howard Hoffer (Donald Curtis) when the latter insults Cary. Ned and Kay tell their mother they will never see her again if she marries Ron. Cary decides her romance is impossible.

4. Weeks pass and Cary's loneliness returns. An older admirer (Conrad Nagel, in his first screen appearance in 10 years) proposes desperately, but Cary declines.

5. Ned and Kay come home for Christmas full of new plans. Kay is going to marry and Ned is expecting a scholarship to Paris. Both shrug off their previous attitude to Ron as a "childish whim." Cary happily goes to Ron, and finds he has restored the mill for a home along lines she had suggested.

PIGEON ROUNDUP IN BERLIN

Professional Bird-Catcher Relieves Congestion in British Sector

Annoyed by swarms of pigeons on their apartment buildings, a group of West Berlin residents in the British sector did something about it—they hired a bird-catcher. His technique was simple. He folded a net on the sidewalk and then scattered food to lure the birds (photo left). While they were partaking of the handout, the catcher closed the net. The process was repeated as necessary to make the desired reduction in the neighborhood pigeon count. In photo right, a little girl pets a captured bird.

flash! Tiniest flash bulb, G.E.'s PowerMite M2, gets photos as good as bigger bulbs for 3¢ less

G-E POWERMITE M2 PICTURE IS SHARP, CLEAR AND WELL LIGHTED. AND THE FLASH COST WAS ONLY 9¢.

BIGGER-BULB PICTURE TAKEN WITH REGULAR MIDGET BULB, HAS SAME QUALITY. BUT THE FLASH COST WAS 12¢.

flash! ONLY ¼ THE SIZE OF MIDGET BULBS

General Electric's new PowerMite M2—world's tiniest, lowest-cost flash bulb—is making flash photography everyone's hobby! So tiny, you can carry two 12-bulb packs in pocket or purse, be ready always for picture opportunities. So low-cost, you save 3¢ a shot, up to 36¢ a roll, get 25% more flash photos for your money. And so easy to use! Ring-type base plugs in, pops out without twisting. Many new cameras come equipped for PowerMite M2's. Others use low-cost adapter, about 22¢, now available at your dealer's.

flash! RECOMMENDED FOR 88% OF YOUR SHOTS

"So handy, I got this shot I'd have missed," says Mrs. H. K. Collier.

"One of the best flash shots I ever got," says Mrs. Stanley Harrison.

"Clearer faces, no glare on close-ups," reports Mrs. Robert Warner.

Tiny, new G-E PowerMite M2 gives light enough for 8 out of 10 of the shots most people take: indoor and outdoor photos, up to 15 feet. Great for color close-ups, too.

In a recent test, snapshooters reported that PowerMite M2 bulbs gave them results as good or better than bigger, costlier bulbs. Try a 12-bulb pack today, and shoot better for less with General Electric's new PowerMite M2—the tiny bulb with the giant flash!

Only 9¢*each in pocket-size pack of 12 bulbs, now at your dealer's

Uprising at Georgia Tech

Student Protest Follows Governor's Effort to Boycott Bowl Game

During their uprising, Georgia Tech students jeer and wave as they display anti-Griffin placards. The demonstrating students, estimated by police at 2500, marched to Atlanta's main downtown intersection, Five Points. From there, they went to the Capitol building and the Governor's mansion.

After the Board of Regents decided to let Tech play in the bowl game, Governor Marvin Griffin reasserts his opposition to the nonsegregation of races in athletic contests.

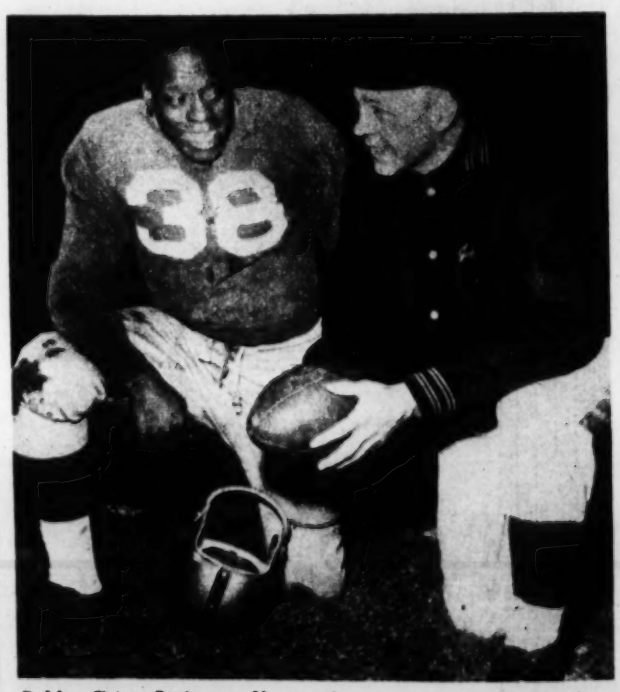

Working from the fender of a patrol car, Atlanta policemen remove one of several effigies of Governor Griffin which were "hanged" by students.
United Press Photo

WHEN GEORGIA TECH'S football team was chosen to oppose the University of Pittsburgh in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl on January 2, all was jubilant on the Tech campus. The joy was short-lived. For Georgia's Governor, Marvin Griffin, who had campaigned as an advocate of white supremacy, requested that the State Board of Regents prohibit Tech from playing in the postseason game. Pittsburgh has one Negro player, and there is no segregation of races in the Northern school's section of seats.

Governor Griffin's action touched off a protest by more than 2000 Tech students who burned the Governor in effigy, milled through Atlanta streets, broke into state Capitol building, kept the Governor awake until 2 a.m.

After Governor Griffin had called the student demonstration "just a bunch of college boys having fun," and then gone fishing, the Board of Regents met. This board controls Tech along with other schools in the state university system. The regents voted 13 to 1 in favor of letting Tech keep its contract with the Sugar Bowl officials. But in its compromise resolution, the board ruled that "all contests held within the state of Georgia" must comply with Georgia's segregation laws and traditions.

Bobby Grier, Pitt's one Negro player, a reserve back, talks with his coach, John Michelosen, at practice session.

DICK'S Adventures

by NEIL O'KEEFFE and MAX TRELL

KITTY HAWK IN 1903 IS A DESOLATE PLACE, WHERE ORVILLE AND WILBUR WRIGHT ARE PRACTISING TO BE BIRD-MEN. MUCH TO DICK'S RELIEF, THE ROUGH-LOOKING ARMED STRANGERS TURN OUT TO BE FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS!

DICK IS GUNK WHEN HE SEES HOW THE HURRICANES HAVE FLATTENED LAST YEAR'S FLIMSY HANGAR AND CAMP WHILE THE WRIGHTS WERE WORKING IN THEIR BICYCLE SHOP IN DAYTON. BUT WILBUR AND ORVILLE RESOLUTELY START REBUILDING!

WITHOUT DISCOURAGEMENT OF ANY SORT— FOR NOTHING SEEMS TO FAZE THE WRIGHT BROTHERS -- THEY ASSEMBLE THE STRANGE-LOOKING CONTRAPTION THAT WILL, IF IT SUCCEEDS, GIVE MAN THE GIFT OF WINGS!

AT A SIGNAL FROM WILBUR, DICK SPINS THE HOMEMADE MOTOR. THE ABRUPT SHARP FIRING HAMMERS LIKE GUNFIRE THROUGHOUT THE CAMP--

--THEN, AS SUDDENLY, THE PROPELLER SHAFT BREAKS!

AGAIN DICK IS DISMAYED BY THIS UNEXPECTED DISASTER, FOR IT MEANS WAITING FOR WEEKS UNTIL A NEW SHAFT COMES FROM DAYTON! BUT THE IMPERTURBABLE WRIGHTS DECIDE THEY'LL NOW HAVE TIME TO DO SOME HUNTING!

AT LAST THE NEW PROPELLER ARRIVES! AND JUST AS THE MOTOR IS READIED FOR ANOTHER TRIAL, A NEIGHBOR COMES RUNNING IN AND BREATHLESSLY SHOUTS ELECTRIFYING NEWS!
